[a] §1024, U. S. Rev. St., providing: "When there are several charges against any person for the same act or transaction or for two or more acts or transactions connected together or for two or more acts or transactions for the same class of crimes or offenses which may properly be joined instead of having several indictments, the whole may be joined in one indictment in separate counts," does not affect right of a prosecutor to treat as one offense a single act involving several different and similar violations of the law. *United States v. See the title "Larceny."

[a] It is an elementary rule in criminal law that the theft of several articles at one and the same time and place and by one and the same act constitutes but one indivisible crime. State v. Emery, 68 Vt. 169, 24 Atl. 452, 54 Am. St. Rep. 878.

[b] Larceny of property of several persons contained within one bundle is but a single crime, and chargeable as such. Ala.—Don v. State, 22 Ala. 9, 58 Am. Dec. 234. Ga.—Dean v. State, 9 Ga. App. 571, 71 S. E. 932. Ind.—Clem v. State, 42 Ind. 420, 13 Am. Rep. 369. Me.—State v. Nelson, 29 Me. 329.

[c] That statute provides a different punishment for stealing some of the articles does not affect the rule. Kelly v. State, 7 East. (Tenn.) 323.

[d] The fact that the larceny of certain of the articles would constitute grand larceny and the larceny of others but petit larceny is immaterial, for if all were taken in one united indivisible act the larceny of all could be alleged in one count. Waters v. People, 104 Ill. 545. But generally a misdemeanor and felony cannot be joined in the same count. See supra, XI, A, 1.

[e] The indictment must show the articles were taken in the same transaction, at the same time and place. These matters will not be presumed. Peak v. State, 54 Tex. Crim. 81, 111 S. W. 1019.

B. BY MEANS OF SEPARATE COUNTS. — 1. In General. — Generally speaking a defendant cannot be charged in the same indictment, even under separate counts, with distinct and separate offenses.¹⁴ Indeed, statutes sometimes provide that, with certain exceptions, an indictment shall charge but one offense.¹⁵ On the other hand, however, by statute in some jurisdictions, it is provided that certain enumerated

These statutes generally provide for the charging of such offense in different ways, however, in separate counts of the indictment. See infra, XI, B, 3.

[a] In Kentucky, "the only exception to the rule denying the right of the commonwealth to charge more than one offense in the indictment is in that class of cases where it is frequently quite difficult to distinguish one offense offenses may be joined in different counts of the same indictment.¹⁸ Even in the absence of statute, however, the rule that different offenses may not be joined in the same indictment, even in separate counts from another and under section 127 of the Civil (Criminal) Code of Practice certain of these offenses last referred to may be charged in one indictment, to-wit, larceny and knowingly receiving stolen property, larceny and obtaining money or property on false pretenses, larceny and embezzlement, robbery and burglary, robbery and assault with intent to rob, and passing or attempting to pass counterfeit money or United States currency or bank notes, knowing them to be such, and having in possession counterfeit money or United States currency or bank notes, knowing them to be such, with the intention of circulating the same. These latter offenses are the only ones which, under our present code provision, may be united in one indictment. All other offenses, whether of the same grade or not, must, under section 126 of the Civil (Criminal) Code of Practice, be stated in separate indictments." Allison v. Com., 135 Ky. 693, 123 S. W. 267.

J. Q. B. 459, under 46 & 47 Vict., ch. 3, §7; 24 & 25 Vict., ch. 96, §§56, 59.

Thus, statutes provide for the joinder of separate offenses arising out of or relating to the same transaction (see infra, XI, B, 2, d); for the joinder of offenses of the same nature (see infra, XI, B, 2, e), as well as for the joinder of specific offenses. See Kirby's Ark. Dig. (1907), §2231, and infra, XI, B, 2, f.

[a] The provisions of U. S. Rev. St., §1024, that "when there are several charges against any person for the same act or transaction, or for two or more acts or transactions connected together, or for two or more acts or transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses, which may be properly joined, instead of having several indictments the whole may be joined in one indictment in separate counts," are not qualified or limited by the clause in italics, so as to require a reference to the common law to ascertain whether the joinder is proper or not. Dolan v. United States, 133 Fed. 440, 446, 69 C. C. A. 274.

[b] Though a statute provides that not more than a designated number of counts may be joined in the same indictment for separate offenses committed within a designated period, the inclusion of more than such number of counts in the same indictment does not vitiate it as an entirety; such statute relates merely to procedure. Etheredge v. United States, 186 Fed. 434, 108 C. C. A. 356, wherein the court said: "Neither the reason nor the letter of the statute requires the court to hold that all good counts in such an indict-thereof, is not without its exceptions.¹⁶ The court should not permit joinder of offenses where such joinder would embarrass the defendant in interposing his defense, however.¹⁷

Informations.—Where a prosecution is carried on by information, the information may contain separate counts the same as an indictment.¹⁸ Indeed, statutes sometimes expressly provide that different offenses and different degrees of the same offense may be joined in ment are rendered bad merely because the indictment contains counts in excess of the number which the statute permits to be joined in the same indictment. . . . It is doubtful, to say the very least of it, whether more than three counts which differ from each other as here only in varying descriptions of the same offense fall within the reason of the rule forbidding the joinder of more than three distinct offenses in the same indictment. It is not perceived how the mere joinder of more than three offenses could so prejudice the defendant that he ought not to be tried on the indictment at all. If, however, that were made to appear, the court could quash the indictment. Ordinarily, all the rights of the defendant will be amply safeguarded by directing the prosecution before entering upon the trial to not, pross. all the counts in excess of three, or, if the court be of opinion that the several counts are merely varied descriptions of the same offense, it can allow the trial to proceed on the indictment until the prosecutor's evidence manifests a election as to the three counts upon which he will proceed, and then compel him to abandon the other counts."

19. Thus, even at common law, separate and distinct misdemeanors may be joined in separate counts of the same indictment. See infra, XI, B, 2, c. So too, it has been held permissible to join in separate counts of the same indictment, a misdemeanor and a felony (see infra, XI, B, 2, a); and distinct felonies. See infra, XI, B, 2, n.

[a] The principle, that the court must not permit the defendant to be embarrassed in his defense by a multiplicity of charges embraced in one indictment and to be tried by one jury, is recognized as fundamental. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 400, 14 Sup. Ct. 410, 38 L. ed. 208.

[b] In Florida it is provided (Rev. St. 4282), that no indictment shall be quashed on account of misjoinder of offenses unless the court shall be of the opinion that the indictment is so vague, indistinct and indefinite as to embarrass the accused and embarrass him in his defense or expose him after conviction or acquittal to substantial danger of a new prosecution for the same offense. Long v. State, 42 Fla. 529, 28 So. 776.

[c] Statute Permitting Joinder Does Not Change Rule.—If it be discovered at any time during a trial that the substantial rights of the accused may be prejudiced by a submission to the same jury of more than one distinct charge of felony among two or more of the same class, the court, according to the established principles of criminal law, can compel an election by the prosecutor. That discretion has not been taken away by section 1093 of the Revised Statutes. On the contrary, that section is consistent with the settled rule that the court, in its discretion, may compel an election when it appears from the indictment, or from the evidence, that the prisoner may be embarrassed in his defense, if that course be not pursued. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 402, 14 Sup. Ct. 410, 38 L. ed. 208. As to election between counts, see infra, XVI, B.

Reason—"The common-law rule that alone suffered to, that a felony and a misdemeanor should not be joined in the same indictment, was based upon substantially the same reason as the rule which prohibited the conviction for a misdemeanor under an indictment for a felony." *State v. 26. "The reasons upon which was based the English rule against joining felonies and misdemeanors in the same indictment have ceased to exist, and that rule, if now enforced, would be grossly inequitable and arbitrary, and would secure no useful or beneficial purpose, and its enforcement would be to embarrass, delay, and prevent the administration of justice. Commonwealth v. Burt, 100 Mass. 100. Besides this, the rule is inconsistent with the practice which has long and uniformly prevailed in this state of permitting, upon an indictment for felony, a conviction for a misdemeanor which is included in the greater offense charged. It would be unreasonable to hold that upon an indictment for a felony a defendant may be convicted of a misdemeanor, these being no count specifically charging such misdemeanor, and yet hold that if there is such specific count there can be no such conviction." *Harman v. thereof, except where the offences charged are repugnant to their nature and local incidents."

The rule is sometimes stated that a joinder of a count for misdemeanor with a count for felony is permissible where the offenses are cognate.¹¹ But in many jurisdictions the common-law rule still prevails and felonies and misdemeanors cannot be joined.¹²

[a]. Where the grand jury has jurisdiction to indict for a felony, it may include in the same indictment a count for a misdemeanor. People v. Bedell & Foster, 100 App. Div. 125, 310 N. Y. Supp. 2d, (2) In State v. Rodriguez, 80 S. C. 469, 27 S. b. Felonies.—At common law, there could properly be no joinder of separate and distinct felonies in the same indictment or information.²⁹ Yet it was never supposed, even at common law, that the joinder of several felonies entirely destroyed the validity of the indictment.³⁰ And so now, while regularly or usually an indictment should not include more than one felony,³¹ yet, according to the great weight of authority, a joinder in one indictment, in separate counts, of different felonies, at least of the same general nature and subject to the same punishment, is not necessarily fatal to the indictment or information.³² But felonies arising from distinct and separate transac-

and one a misdemeanor, in two separate and distinct counts. This court, however, takes occasion to express its disapprobation of such pleading when the same might be easily avoided by the pleader's acquainting himself, as he should always do, in advance of the preparation of the indictment, of the nature of the offense for which the accused should be indicted and tried."

[b] The reason is "that it would embarrass the defendant in the selection of a jury, for he might be willing that a juror should try him for the one offense, and not for the other." Davis v. State, 57 Ga. 66, 67.

[c] The charging of a capital offense with a misdemeanor is bad. United States v. Sharp, Pet. C. C. 131, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,265.

[a] "That was as well established, at one period at least of the administration of the criminal law, as if there had been an express statute forbidding the joinder of separate and distinct felonies in the same indictment." United States v. Nye, 4 Fed. 888.

[b] "The rule is thus stated by Archbold (Crim. Pl. Pr. 950, c. 3, 8th ed.): 'If different felonies or misdemeanors be stated in several counts of an indictment, no objection can be made to the indictment on that account in point of law. In cases of felony, indeed, the judge, in his discretion, may require the counsel for the prosecutor to select one only of the felonies, and confine himself to that. This is what is technically termed putting the prosecutor to his election. But this practice has never been extended to misdemeanors.' " Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 402, 14 Sup. Ct. 410, 38 L. ed. 208.

[b] "While the courts would not permit the party to be tried for two or more felonies in the same indictment, they would not quash the indictment but would compel the prosecutor to elect the felony he would proceed to trial upon. The rule is laid down in Wharton, §216." United States v. Nye, 4 Fed. 888. As to election, see infra, XVI, B.

tions and in no way related cannot be joined in the same indictment, even in separate counts.³³

c. Misdemeanors.—Several distinct misdemeanors of the same class or of a kindred nature, and liable to punishment of the same general character, may be joined in different counts of the same indictment or information.³⁴ And the fact that different punishments may it was held that separate and distinct felonies, involving different punishments, might be joined, so long as all the counts related to the same transaction; and that a count for burglary, with intent to commit larceny might properly be united with a count for larceny. Burglary and larceny, rape and assault with intent to commit rape, larceny and receiving stolen goods, assault with intent to kill and simple assault."

[d] While two or more felonies may, under proper circumstances, be joined in one indictment or information, they must, as a general rule, be in separate counts. State v. Goodwin, 33 Kan. 538, 6 Pac. 899.

[e] Although the joinder of distinct offences in the same indictment constitutes no legal ground for quashing the indictment, if objection, on that ground, be made before plea, the court, at its discretion, may order the indictment to be quashed, lest it should embarrass the prisoner in his defence, or prejudice him in his challenge to the jury. Strawhorn v. State, 37 Miss. 422. See also State v. Rees, 76 Miss. 435, 22 So. 823, wherein the court said: "The settled rule in this state is that it is bad practice to join in the same indictment counts for distinct felonies of differing degrees, differently punished, and that, if that be done, the court may, in its discretion, on timely and proper objection, quash the indictment."

[b] Such was the rule at common law. United States v. Nye, 4 Fed. 888, wherein the court said: "At common law it is admitted that several distinct offenses may be joined by different counts in an indictment; that is, where they are misdemeanors only. That is well settled by Wharton's Criminal Law, §433; Bishop's Criminal Law, §§201, 204; U. S. v. Callahan, decided in this court, 6 McLean, 96; . . ."

That is, as the rule is to be understood, necessarily different, the judgment being of a different character. . . . The offense charged in each count of this indictment is a misdemeanor, and the punishment in each case the same; that is to say of the same character, fine and imprisonment—and does not come within the rule with regard to different judgments. It is no objection to an indictment that the punishment for one of the offenses is positive and for the others discretionary."

[a] In Massachusetts (1) the statute provides that two or more counts describing different crimes which may depend upon the same facts or transactions may be set forth in the same indictment if it contains an averment that the different counts therein are different descriptions of the same acts. Pub. St., ch. 218, §45, formerly St., 1861, ch. 181; Com. v. Jacobs, 152 Mass. 276, 23 N. E. 403. (2) Such statute "was designed to enable the pleader to join several counts describing different offenses which could not be joined at common law, and not to restrict his right to set out the same offense by different descriptions in several counts, as has always been the practice in this Commonwealth." Com. v. Andrews, 132 Mass. 293. And see Com. v. Thompson, 159 Mass. 56, 33 N. E. 1111.

v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184, 63 N. E. 431. (2) It "was not intended for the case of merely slight verbal changes in the description of property stolen as joined, provided the substantial identity is not affected, but to prevent the joinder of misdemeanors where the description might at common law be open to that objection." Com. v. Allen, 128 Mass. 46, 25 Am. Rep. 366. See Com. v. Jacobs, 152 Mass. 276, 23 N. E. 403; Bushman v. Com., 138 Mass. 507; Com. v. Ismael, 184 Mass. 291; Com. v. Andrews, 152 Mass. 268.

[c] The New York code provides that the indictment must charge but one crime and in but one form, except the crime may be charged in separate counts to have been committed in a different manner or by different means, and when the acts complained of may constitute different crimes, such crimes may be charged in separate counts (Code Crim. Proc., §§278, 279). "When the act complained of may constitute different offenses, such offenses may be charged in separate counts of the indictment." People v. O'Donnell, 46 Hun 358.

[d] It is only where the identical acts complained of may constitute either of different crimes that such crimes may be charged in separate counts of the same indictment. People v. Foster, 60 Misc. 3, 112 N. Y. Supp. 706.

[e] The words "same transaction" does not mean the same acts, but it means the same series of acts, which when completed culminate in the crime or crimes for which the indictment is found. People v. Emerson, 53 Hun 437, 6 N. Y. Supp. 274.

[f] Two kindred offenses growing out of the same transaction may be charged in one indictment or information. State v. Sheppard, 33 La. Ann. 1216; State v. Malloy, 30 La. Ann. 61.

[g] Distinct felonies may be joined in an indictment without rendering it amenable to demurrer or motion in arrest. If, however, they do not arise out of the same transaction and have no connection with each other, the judge should ex mero motu order the prosecuting attorney to elect as which he will proceed. State v. Beckrope, 40 S. C. 484, 27 S. E. 658; State v. Woodard, 38 S. C. 353, 47 S. E. 135; State v. Scott, 15 S. C. 433; State v. Nelson, 14 Ark. L. (S. C.) 169, 172. See infra, XVI.

It has been held that this rule is limited to offenses which arise out of the same transaction and are so far cognate as that an acquittal or conviction for one would be a bar to a trial for the other.³⁰

The general rule applies even though the punishment for the offenses is different,³¹ and though one offense is statutory and the other a common-law offense.³² Under this general rule it is proper to charge by means of separate counts, the commission of an offense and the offenses included within it,³³ as for example a completed offense and an attempt to commit it,³⁴ or assault with intent to commit it.³⁵

38. State v. Christian, 253 Mo. 382, 161 S. W. 726; State v. Carragin, 210 Mo. 351, 160 S. W. 553, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 561.

[a] In State v. Christian, 253 Mo. 382, 161 S. W. 726, the information charged C. and S. jointly with the crime of grand larceny in the first count, and in the second count it charged C. with the crime of being an accessory after the fact by assisting S. to escape. It was held that there was a misjoinder of counts because the offenses were not cognate and did not necessarily arise out of the same transaction. Besides a conviction of the larceny would not necessarily negative guilt as to the crime of being an accessory after the fact.

[a] Though the punishment be imprisonment of different lengths, larceny and receiving stolen goods may be joined in separate counts. But if the punishment for one were imprisonment and for the other whipping, as at common law, they could not be so joined. State v. Lawrence, 81 N. C. 522.

[b] In Mississippi it is bad practice to join felonies of differing degrees and with different punishments. If the court in its discretion quash the indictment therefore there is no error. State v. Rice, 76 Miss. 445, 22 So. 829.

But charges of offenses occurring at different and distinct times and places must not be joined in the same pleading, even in separate counts thereof.⁴² Nor can inconsistent offenses be charged where the evidence of one would not support the other.⁴³ And where the statute provides that but one offense may be charged in an indictment, different offenses cannot be joined in the absence of statutory exceptions permitting the same.⁴⁴

[b] Rule Applies to Both Felonies and Misdemeanors.—Com. v. Hills, 10 Cosh. (Mass.) 230.

[c] Offenses are not of the same class so as to permit a joinder in one indictment under different counts which are "substantive offenses, separate and distinct, complete in themselves and independent of each other, committed at different times and not provable by the same evidence." McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 17 Sup. Ct. 31, 41 L. ed. 305.

[d] Where Punishments Are Alike in Kind Though Different in Degree. United States v. Barnett, 17 Blatchf. 357, 34 Fed. Cas. No. 14,572.

[e] A judgment on an indictment charging offenses of same nature "will not be arrested as for a misjoinder, unless the offenses are of a nature and character radically different, as well as requiring different judgments, different in kind and not merely punishments differing in degree." United States v. Peterson, 1 Woodh. & M. 305, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,037. See also United States v. Jones, 39 Fed. 973; Adams v. State, 55 Ark. 147.

[f] All the offenses prescribed by the oleomargarine act are statutory misdemeanors and may be joined under different counts as being "of the same class of crimes or offenses" within Rev. St., 11024 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 720). The fact that one may be imprisoned in the penitentiary for one of the offenses does not necessarily designate that one is felony so as to take it out of the same class. Meyers v. United States, 161 Fed. 873, 88 C. C. A. 522.

[g] It is the practice in Massachusetts "to charge a defendant with various and distinct felonies in different counts of the same indictment, when they are of the same general nature and supported by similar evidence, and where the punishments to be awarded are of the same character." Com. v. Mullen, 150 Mass. 394, 23 N. E. 51.

[h] In North Carolina, the court in the exercise of its discretion will on timely motion, either compel an election or quash an indictment charging distinct felonies of the same grade subject to the same punishment. State v. Reel, 80 N. C. 442.

48. U. S.—McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 17 Sup. Ct. 31, 41 L. ed. 305; Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 14 Sup. Ct. 410, 38 L. ed. 208. Kan.—State v. Warner, 60 Kan. 94, 55 Pac. 342, in which five separate and distinct transactions with different persons were charged, in that it was charged the defendants received deposits from different persons knowing the bank to be insolvent. Tenn.—Cash v. State, 10 Humph. 111.

[a] "For, in point of law" says Chitty, "there is no objection to the insertion of several distinct felonies of the same degree, though committed at different times, in the same indictment, against the same offender." 1 Chitty Crim. Law 253, quoted in United States v. Wentworth, 11 Fed. 52.

[b] Whether such offenses may be joined under §1024, U. S. Rev. St. is not answered by the statute but is left to the court to determine in a given case whether a joinder of two or more offenses in one indictment is consistent with the settled principles of criminal law. Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 14 Sup. Ct. 410, 38 L. ed. 208; McElroy v. United States, 164 Fed. 76.

[c] In Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 14 Sup. Ct. 410, 38 L. ed. 208, it was held that the accused was not prejudiced in his defense by the joinder in the same indictment of two offenses of murder which immediately followed one another. There was such close connection between the two killings in respect of time, place and occasion that it was difficult to separate the proof of one from the other.

[d] Arson of Two Buildings.—The indictment in United States v. Cardish, 145 Fed. 212, charged in different counts arson of the Girls' Building of the school and arson of the Boys' Building. "For aught that appears in the indictment, they may have been a mile apart. Therefore, for the purposes of the motion (to quash), it must be concluded that two distinct crimes are charged. The two offenses, however, are of the same nature, and punishable by the same penalties. The objection does not furnish ground for a demurrer. The remedy of the accused is by motion to compel the government to elect."

[c] False Entries in Bank Books. In United States v. Berry, 96 Fed. 882, it was held proper to join thirty-four false entries in the books of the bank by the same persons occurring at different times, for all were of the same grade, with the same punishment, and provable by the same evidence.

[a] Under statutes providing that with certain exceptions only one offense shall be charged in an indictment, it is held, however, that such offenses cannot be joined, even in separate counts, there being no exception in favor thereof in such statutes. Crook v. State, 59 Ark. 329, 27 S. W. 369, overruling Watkins v. State, 37 Ark. 370; Talliver v. State, 35 Ark. 225; Dodd v. State, 23 Ark. 537 (holding under earlier statute that burglary and grand larceny, if the one was connected with the other, might be charged in one indictment); State v. McFarland, 38 Iowa 96. See also State v. Smith, 2 N. D. 515, 50 N. W. 120.

[b] Where, however, such statutes provide, as an exception to the rule that but one offense can be charged, that "where the acts complained of shall constitute different crimes, such crimes may be charged in separate counts" of the same indictment, separate counts for burglary and larceny may be joined when they are all founded upon the same transaction and the acts charged relate to the same property. People v. Wilson, 151 N. Y. 403, 43 N. E. 802, overruling 7 App. Div. 354, 40 N. Y. Supp. 197.

[6] The Texas statute expressly provides that an indictment or information may contain as many counts charging the same offense as the attorney who prepares it may think necessary to insert, and an indictment or information shall be sufficient if any one of those counts be sufficient. Code Crim. Proc., art. 469; Johnson v. State, 52 Tex. Crim. 207, 107 S. W. 52.

[6] Separate Counts on Different Sections of Statute.—The state may vary the charges by means of several counts, although under different sections of the statute, so as to meet the proof which may be adduced. State v. Davis, 29 Mo. 321; State v. Porter, 26 Mo. 201.

69. "It is not only allowable, but considered the better practice, to set up the same transaction by as many counts as the pleader may deem necessary to meet the various phases which the proof may possibly develop, and only in a case where it may appear that the rights of a defendant may be jeopardized or prejudiced will the state be required to elect on which count it will proceed to trial." Shuman v. State, 74 Tex. Crim. 69, 29 S. W. 160. As to election generally, see infra, XVI.

[8] "A careful solicitor should always frame the indictment with as many counts as may be necessary to meet the different phases the evidence may assume." Oer v. State, 107 Ala. 35, 18 So. 142.

70. "It is often necessary to insert in one indictment many counts charging the crime in as many different ways, in order to meet the various phases of the case as developed by the evidence, and after a general verdict if one count is sufficient, and others fail, the court will pronounce judgment upon the good count only; if all are good, judgment will be rendered upon the count charging the highest offense."

Statutes providing that but one offense may be charged in an indictment, also sometimes provide that such offenses may be charged in different ways in separate counts thereof.⁷¹

Accordingly, if the offense may be committed by different means or modes it is permissible to charge in separate counts the different means or modes in which the offense may have been committed,⁷² as for example, a murder or manslaughter may be charged with having been committed by different instruments or means,⁷³ or, it has been held a statutory rape may in one count be based on the fact that the female was under age, and in another count, on the fact that she was an idiot;⁷⁴ or an abortion may be charged in one count by means of drugs and in another by means of instruments.⁷⁵ Likewise, it is permissible to charge in different counts of the same indictment, that the act complained of was committed with different intents or designs.⁷⁶ And this is true even though such different intents may affect different people.⁷⁷

To Meet Evidence as to Time, Place and Ownership.—The fact that two distinct dates for the commission of the offense are alleged in different counts of the same indictment will not invalidate such indictment or a conviction thereon.⁷⁸ It is not ordinarily permissible, however, to charge in one count of an indictment that the crime was committed in one county and in another count that it was committed in a different county,⁷⁹ though circumstances may arise, under which such practice is permissible,⁸⁰ as where offenses committed in one of the counties are triable in the other.⁸¹

If it is clear that the same offense and transaction is meant, it does not render the indictment double to charge by means of different counts that property stolen, unlawfully appropriated, or otherwise injured or destroyed, belonged to different persons.⁸²

[a] In Newman v. People, 14 Wis. 393, 402 the court said: "The counts in this indictment do not necessarily appear to be for the same offense, and without necessity the court should not intend them to be so. We have been referred to the case of Campbell et al. v. The Queen, 11 Adolph. & Ellis, 709 (63 Eng. C. L.), where the court say that one offense, whether felonious or not, could not properly be charged twice over, whether in one indictment or two, and that an objection to an indictment on that ground was available on a motion in arrest of judgment. But the court immediately remarks that it would, if possible, hold the counts not to be for the same offense, and that the omission of the word 'other' would not of itself make them the same, though the insertion of the word 'other' would make them different. Within the rule here laid down, we think the indictment in this case is not chamalious to the objection taken to it."

[b] By inserting the word "other" before the subject of the offence in the subsequent counts. Lazier v. Com., 10 Grant. (Va.) 708.

91. State v. Rust, 25 N. H. 428, unnecessary to allege the offense described in each of the several counts to be other and different from that described in the others. And see Newman v. State, 14 Wis. 393, 402.

[a] The use of the "other" for this purpose in the second or subsequent count, is in no case "indispensably necessary. It is not usual to insert it in indictments for murder; but the party murdered is described in all the counts as the same person, and the instrument of death is not always stated in the different counts to be a different instrument; nor can it be necessary that it should be so stated. For certainly different offenses may be committed with the same instrument." Lazier v. Com., 10 Grant. (Va.) 708.

[b] Failure to do so, even if necessary, does not render the indictment authority it would seem to be improper to do so.⁹²

On the other hand, in those states where the statutes provide that only one offense may be charged in an indictment or information, but provide that such offense may be charged in different forms under different counts, this must be done in such a way as to show clearly upon the face of the pleading that the matters and things set forth in the different counts are descriptive of one and the same offense.⁹³

XII. AMENDMENT. — A. OF INDICTMENT. — 1. By Grand Jury. An indictment may be withdrawn by leave of the court and amended by the same grand jury which found the indictment,¹⁵ at any time before the prisoner has pleaded and before they are discharged,¹⁶ especially as to mere clerical errors or mere matters of form,¹⁷ but it cannot be amended at a subsequent term of court by a different grand jury.¹⁸ The proper course is for the same grand jury if it is present had under statutory provisions for the cure of defects of form. State v. Doyle, 15 R. I. 507, 9 Atl. 990.

(3) There may be cases, however, where their use is not absolutely necessary in order to show that the same offense is attempted to be charged, such as where the language of each count is identical as to the time, place, persons and property, and no words are used in either count tending in the slightest degree to show that more than one offense is intended to be charged. State v. Mallie, 14 Nev. 288, adjoining with approval *State v. At common law the common practice was for the grand jury to consent, at the time they were sworn that the court should amend matters of form altering no matter of substance; and mere informalities could be amended by the court before the commencement of the trial,²⁴ and accordingly in some states even in the absence of statutes an indictment may be amended in matters of form with the consent of the grand jury,²⁵ and amendment by merely striking out or ignoring words of variance is not error when it does not affect the charge against the defendant and the indictment is good without the words omitted.²⁶

[e] Under the Florida statute (ch. 1197, Laws, 1861) the court may on the application of the accused and either before or after trial, when the vagueness of the indictment would expose an accused to substantial danger of a new indictment for the same offense, require the prosecuting officer to modify in writing the details of the offense charged against accused with such distinctness as will obviate the objection, such specifications to form part of the record. While this amounts

the rights of the defendant or prejudice his defense,³⁰ and does not charge defendant with a different crime or a different degree of crime from that charged in the original indictment returned by the grand jury.³¹

Statutes generally permit amendments as to matters of form only,³² but some statutes allow amendments either of form or substance.³³

Statutes authorizing the amendment of indictments are construed strictly,³² and if not specifically providing otherwise will be construed to apply only to amendments as to matters of form.³³

The quashing of one count of an indictment is equivalent to a nolle prosequi as to that count and is permissible,³⁴ but an indictment containing but one count cannot be amended by striking out a material portion.³⁵

[a] The Minnesota statute reads: "If the demurrer shall be allowed judgment shall be final . . . unless the court shall allow an amendment when the defendant will not be unjustly prejudiced thereby." Held that statute only authorizes amendments as to matters of form. State v. Armstrong, 4 Minn. 335.

[b] A statute providing that an indictment cannot be amended so as to change the offense charged, only authorizes amendments as to matters affecting the formal parts of the indictment. Pamph v. Anthony, 20 Cal. App. 586, 129 Pac. 568.

[c] Distinction Between Matters of Form and Matters of Substance.—The attempt to classify the defects in an indictment as matters of form and as matters of substance has not been a fortunate one. Some authorities treat as matters of substance all defects other than clerical errors and technical defects in the form of the indictment; others include as matters of substance only matters necessary to be proved in order to convict the defendant; others regard as matters of form all matters which may be presented without prejudicing defendant's defense or charging him with a different crime from that contemplated by the original indictment. Thus the name of defendant and of the owners of stolen property have been held to be matters of substance. Yet in other cases statutes permitting amendment as to such matters have been held to apply solely to matters of form. See the following: Fla.—Dickson v. State, 20 Fla. 800. Ia.—State v. Mullen, 151 Iowa 392, 131 N. W. 679, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 399. Md.—Watts v. State, 99 Md. 30, 57 Atl. 542. Mich.—Yauer v. People, 34 Mich. 286. Miss.—Gamblin v. State, 45 Miss. 658. N. Discretion of Court.— Sometimes by virtue of statute the amendment of the indictment is within the discretion of the court.³⁸

3. Amendment by Prosecuting Attorney.— The district attorney, though he may amend an information,³⁹ has no power to amend an indictment.⁴⁰ Any such amendment would violate the indictment.⁴¹

4. By Consent.— In the absence of statute the consent of defendant to a correction of the indictment in open court before pleading thereto is binding on him,⁴² even after trial and motion in arrest of judgment,⁴³ except perhaps in a capital case.⁴⁴ But the court cannot, even with the consent of defendant, amend an indictment as to matters of substance,⁴⁵ or so as to charge a different offense from that contemplated by the grand jury.⁴⁶

Statutes sometimes authorize amendment of indictment by consent of defendant in particular matters,⁴⁷ such as incorrect description of property⁴⁸ or persons.⁴⁹ In such case the consent of the defendant must appear of record,⁴⁸ and the amendment must follow the terms of the consent.⁴⁹ If he does not consent to such amendment the prosecution may be dismissed at any time before the jury retires.⁵⁰

Effect of Statute.—Where the statute allows the amendment of an indictment with the consent of the defendant, that is equivalent to a declaration on the part of the legislature that an indictment cannot be amended in any case without the defendant's consent.⁵¹ Nor can defendant be held to answer to a new indictment unless he has refused to allow the original indictment to be amended.⁵²

5. Time of Amendment.—Statutes may require or permit amendment of an indictment before or at the time of arraignment,⁵³ or on demurrer,⁵⁴ or on plea in abatement,⁵⁵ at,⁵⁶ or before trial,⁵⁷ but not after trial,⁵⁸ nor on appeal.⁵⁹

6. How Made.—An amendment made under the statute must be in strict conformity with its provisions.⁶⁰ Statutes frequently require that amendments be made by order of court⁶¹ specifically specifying the amendment.⁶² This order must be spread upon the minutes.⁶³ It is within the court's discretion to allow the prosecutor time to amend, or to order the amendment instanter.⁶⁴

The presence of the defendant at the time that the indictment is amended, has been held unnecessary.⁶⁵

7. Necessity of Making on Face of Pleading.—Simply ordering the indictment amended is ordinarily insufficient,⁶⁶ the amendment must be actually made on the face of the pleading. If there is a failure to comply with the order to amend resulting in a variance on the face of the indictment conviction cannot be sustained.⁶⁷ Mistakes merely clerical, variances and discrepancies not going to the merits of the cause which are amendable without question are frequently disregarded and treated by the supreme court as having been corrected by amendment,⁶⁸ but this rule does not extend to material defects.⁶⁹

Of the same force and effect as statutes providing for amendment of indictments are the statutes (known as statutes of jeofails) to be found in several states, which instead of providing for amendment of matter of variance merely provide that such variance "shall not be ground for an acquittal," or that the indictment "shall not be invalid," or the trial or judgment "in any way affected" by reason of the variance or insufficiency set forth in the statute.⁷⁰

8. Particular Matters Amendable.—a. In General.—Where descriptive averments, though unnecessarily particular or minute, are of such a nature that they must be proved as laid,⁷¹ they cannot be stricken from the indictment by amendment⁷² and the same is true of other words materially qualifying or describing the offense.⁷³ Essen-

73. An amendment by striking out the words "malice aforethought" from tial words cannot be supplied when omitted from an indictment.⁷⁴

b. Names of Persons.—The name of the accused is considered a matter of substance which cannot be changed without the consent of the grand jury.⁷⁵ Some statutes authorize a correction of the name of the accused in the case of a misnomer.⁷⁶ Some statutes instead of providing for the amendment of the indictment proper, provide that on suggestion by the defendant that the name by which he is alleged is not his true name and where he gives his correct name, an entry thereof is made in the minutes and the subsequent proceedings are had by that name, referring also to the name alleged in the indictment.⁷⁷

a charge of the commission of the crime "wilfully, feloniously and of malice aforethought" would be an amendment as to a matter of substance and therefore unauthorized. This amendment is not within the purport of Code Crim. Proc., §293, which is expressly limited to variance between pleading and proof. People v. Motello, 157 App. Div. 519, 142 N. Y. Supp. 622.

The defendant may be held to waive all objections as to the form of the indictment and therefore as to amendments improperly made therein, unless such objections are raised before trial.¹

B. OF INFORMATION.—1. In the Absence of Statute.—Informations are amendable at common law" in the discretion of the court," without the restrictions imposed upon amendment of indictments.¹⁰ The mere fact that the use of informations was extended to include offenses not informable at common law does not abridge the power of amendment.¹¹ Informations may, with leave, be amended by the prosecuting attorney in the same manner as declarations in civil cases.¹² Thus is it proper to amend both formal or substantial defects fective as to them. People v. Carroll, 92 Cal. 565, 28 Pac. 600.

[a] Reason for Difference in Rules as to Indictments and Informations.

(1) "Indictments are found upon the oaths of a jury, and ought to be amended only by themselves; but informations are as declarations in the King's suit. An officer of the Crown has the right of framing them originally, and may, with leave, amend in like manner as any plaintiff may do." Rex v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 98 Eng. [b] An information may be amended to any extent which the judge deems consistent with orderly conduct of ju-in an information.¹² As a general rule, amendments should not be made after the trial has commenced¹³ or after verdict.¹⁵ An amendment after commencement of trial has been permitted where it did not tend to prejudice the defendant on the merits.¹⁶ But amendments of substance cannot be made at the trial,¹⁷ or after rendition of the verdict.¹⁸ Nor can an information be amended in the supreme court.¹⁹ is fatally defective may be amended so as to render it sufficient.²⁷ New counts may be added²⁸ where such counts relate to the same transaction and were framed to meet different phases of proof but do not charge any different offense,²⁹ but new charges cannot be made by amendment.³⁰

An information may not be amended so as to charge an offense not shown by the evidence taken at the preliminary examination.³¹ Nor can an information be amended after verdict to change the offense to that found by the jury if such amendment changes the nature of the offense charged.³² After new trial ordered, however, the information may be amended, apparently either as to matter of form or substance to conform to proof made at first trial.³³ But where an information charges two offenses and defendant has entered a single plea it cannot be amended so as to charge one offense only without a fresh arraignment and plea of defendant.³⁴

Where the statute of limitations has run so as to preclude the lodging of a new information against defendant the information may still be amended,³⁵ unless there has been unreasonable delay in the prosecution,³⁶ or the effect of the amendment would be to introduce a new cause of action itself barred by the statute.³⁷

[a] Statute Does Not Curtail Court's Authority as to Amendment.—Although the statute providing the same rules for indictments and informations, provides for amendments "except as to matters of substance," the statutes are to be considered as remedial and as having been passed with a view to obviate defects in the existing law to give courts power to amend where none was supposed to exist before, but not to curtail their powers. Such statute therefore does not deprive the court of power to amend an information in a matter of substance. State v. White, 64 Vt. 372, 24 Atl. 250.

Law 335, for discussion of doctrine of amendments of the caption in England.

[a.] "The caption is no part of the indictment proper, but is merely the ministerial act of the clerk or prosecuting officer. It is therefore amendable by reference to the records of the court in which it was found. . . . Indeed, it is not even necessary to amend the really no essential part of the indictment.⁷² Such amendment may be made at any time.⁷³

D. CONCLUSION. — The conclusion of an indictment, although prescribed by the constitution, is nevertheless merely formal,⁷⁴ and therefore the indictment in that regard is subject to amendment.⁷⁵

Dec. 650, even after conviction, and after motion in arrest for the defect. See also Van Dyke v. Dare, 1 Bailey (S. C.) 65.

[e] Supreme Court.—Some of the cases go so far as to say that the caption to an indictment may be amended in the supreme court, after its removal thereto by certiorari, upon proof of the necessary facts, or the case may be sent back to the lower court, there to be amended from the record. State v. Jones, 9 N. J. L. 357, 17 Am. Dec. 483, wherein the court said: "For a time indeed, it was held that no amendment could only be made in the form of the return of the writ, and not at any subsequent term, as will be seen from 2 Hale P. C. 168, and by the cases of Rex v. Brandon, Comb. 70. Faulkner's Case, 1 Saund. 249. Regina v. Hoskins, 2 Ld. Raym. 968. Regina v. Franklyn, ibid 1038. Rex v. Glover, 1 Sid. 259. But in the time of Lord Mansfield the subject underwent a thorough investigation, and it was found that the caption was not only liable to amendment in the term of its return, but afterwards, and even after verdict."

[b] Application for leave to amend should be made before the opening of the argument upon the exceptions. State v. Zule, 10 N. J. L. 348.

[a] In State v. Minford, 64 N. J. L. 518, 45 Atl. 817, the court, discussing Cain v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 512, said this case "is a close precedent for our present decision. It goes farther indeed than we need to, for the right to amend was rested solely on the consent of the grand jury presumed to have been given on the presentation of the indictment. The constitution of Indiana prescribes that all indictments shall conclude 'against the peace and dignity of the state.' The challenged indictment concluded 'against the peace of the state.' The trial court, against objection, amended, by inserting the omitted words. This action was approved by the Supreme Court in these words: 'The words with which the constitution requires all indictments to conclude are mere words of form. The facts are found by the jury on their oath, but the conclusion is affixed by law. The grand jury have nothing to do with finding that conclusion, nor does the constitution require that it should be found by the grand jury. The amendment made in this case did

Signature. — Where an information was in fact sworn to and the signature omitted through mere inadvertence, the defect is correctible by amendment.⁷⁸ But it has been held that where the indictment is returned without the signature of the foreman, it cannot afterwards be affixed by the foreman, except on recommitment to the jury.⁷⁹

E. VERIFICATION. — If an information is not properly verified, it may be amended in this respect,⁸⁰ at any time before trial.⁸¹ Where an unverified information is not void it may be amended by adding the affidavit.⁸²

F. INDORSEMENT. — An indorsement may be amended.⁸³ The subsequent indorsing of names of witnesses examined by the grand jury is permissible as being a matter of form.⁸⁴

G. COMPLAINT AND AFFIDAVIT. — 1. Generally. — A complaint upon which a trial is based is in the nature of an information at common law and amendable as such.⁸⁵ Amendments are sometimes reg-not hinder, delay or embarrass the defendant nor did it deprive him of any just means of defence. We think the court did right in permitting the amendment, and that the judgment of the Circuit Court should be affirmed."

[a] Amendments are authorized as a matter of right at any time before defendant pleads, and upon being made the affidavit must be sworn to. State v. Anderson, 177 Ind. 437, 98 N. E. 280.

[b] Solicitor of the city court may amend the accusation, 111 provided the affidavit of the prosecutor will legally support the accusation as amended. Crawford v. State, 4 Ga. App. 789, 62 S. E. 30; Jackman v. State, 4 Ga. App. 401, 61 S. E. 803; Goldsmith v. State, 2 Ga. App. 242, 28 S. E. 486. (2) But not after the trial has begun. Conrley v. State, 80 Ga. 466, 10 S. E. 123.

[c] Amendments as to matters of substance (1) are not proper (State v. Hancock, 49 N. H. 498; State v. Dolby, 49 N. H. 484; 6 Am. Rep. 588), (2) for the same reason that an indictment cannot be thus amended. State v. Wheeler, 64 Vt. 569, 25 Atl. 434.

[d] Where the complaint charged an offense with certain aggravations making it a felony and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the court, an amendment striking out these aggravations, thereby reducing it to a misdemeanor would be an amendment as to matters of substance which is not permissible. State v. Runnals, 49 N. H. 498.

[e] The failure of the magistrate to make a minute on the complaint of the day, month, and year at the time the same was exhibited to him, as required by statute, is a fatal defect which cannot be cured by amendment. State v. Perkins, 58 Vt. 722, 5 Atl. 894.

[f] Complaint of state's attorney may be amended in substance. State v. Sutton, 65 Vt. 439, 26 Atl. 66.

The signature of a prosecuting witness inadvertently omitted may be added in the appellate court.⁹¹

2. On Trial De Novo. — Where the case is tried de novo upon appeal, the complaint or affidavit, in most jurisdictions, may be amended in the appellate court.⁹²

3. Preliminary Complaint. — The right to amend the preliminary information is denied,⁹³ at least as to matters of substance,⁹⁴ unless it be reverified by the affiant.⁹⁵ But the better practice in any case is to make an entirely new affidavit.⁹⁶ Immaterial defects may be corrected by amendment.⁹⁷ The matter of amendment is sometimes covered by statute.⁹⁸

[b] Pending appeal, an amended complaint charging the offense with greater particularity may be filed by the state. Burton v. State, 80 Neb. 525, 114 N. W. 484.

[c] Where Appellate Court Has No Original Jurisdiction.—Where a defendant is convicted before a police judge for the violation of a city ordinance, and on appeal to the district court the original complaint is quashed, it is error for the district court to permit a new and amended complaint to be filed, for the reason that the court, having no original jurisdiction of the cause, must take the case as it existed before the police judge. The district court has no power to change or modify it in the slightest respect. City of Burlington v. James, 17 Kan. 521.

[d] Where the affidavit charged a violation of a void ordinance, on appeal the judge had power to amend the affidavit so as to charge an offense growing out of those facts. State v. Davis, 111 N. C. 739, 16 S. E. 540.

[a] "To be 'necessarily included' in the offense charged, the lesser offense must not only be part of the greater in fact, but it must be embraced within the legal definition of the greater as a part thereof." People v. Kerrier, 144 Cal. 46-47, 77 Pac. 711.

[b] The words "necessarily included" mean simply that the offense for which a conviction may be had must be included in the acts set forth in the indictment as constituting the crime with which the defendant is charged. People v. Miller, 143 App. Div. 251-255, 128 N. Y. Supp. 549.

[c] The test to be applied is: Does an information in describing the greater offense necessarily contain all the essential elements of an information for the lesser? State v. Cream, 43 Mont. 47-50, 112 Pac. 603.

[d] The rule applies in all cases where the minor offense is necessarily an elemental part of the greater, and whose proof of the greater necessarily establishes the minor. Miller v. State, 52 Ind. 187-194.

[e] Whether the offense be a statutory or common-law offense is immaterial. Cham v. Territory, 7 N. M. 241, 34 Pac. 448.

[f] Construction of Statute Relative to Conviction of Lower Degree.—A statute which enacts that "upon an indictment for any offense, consisting of different degrees as prescribed in this title, the jury may find the accused not guilty of the offense in the degree charged in the indictment, and may find such accused person guilty of any degree of such offense, inferior to that charged in the indictment, or of an attempt to commit such offense"—is not restricted in its application to offenses divided by the statutes into classes expressly designated by the name of "degrees," but it applies to all offenses of different grades or degrees of enormity, wherever the charge for the higher grade includes a charge for the less. Hanna v. People, 19 Mich. 316-321. See also People v. Miller, 143 App. Div. 251, 128 N. Y. Supp. 549.

[g] In Missouri not until the Rev. St., 1879, §1655, was enacted could a person be acquitted of the offense charged in the indictment or information and convicted of an offense the commission of which is necessarily included in that charged against him. State v. Webster, 77 Mo. 566-568.

[h] "Lesser crimes are not to be included . . . unless demanded by the plain provision of a statute or the facts developed at the trial bring the case within the definition of the lesser crime." State v. Wilson (Wash.), 145 Pac. 455, and cases cited.

[a] But in Kilkelly v. State, 43 Wis. 604-609, it was held that if the jury do not find the "intent" necessary to the higher crime of murder which alone is charged, but do find the included "intent" necessary to a lower grade of crime, as intent to maim or disfigure, they must in their verdict of guilty reserve the "intent" to murder. But see Bicker v. State, 118 Wis. 108-112, 94 N. W. 643, modifying this ruling, when applied to intent to do great bodily harm.

[b] Unless the statute expressly provides for an acquittal of the offense charged. Bell v. State, 70 Tex. Crim. 106, 156 S. W. 1194-1196.

3. Ark.—Haley v. State, 19 Ark. 147, 4 S. W. 746; State v. Nichols, 38

a minor offense not included in the one which is directly charged.²

Offense Defined by Another Statute.—The fact that the included offense is defined by a statute other than that defining the offense charged is immaterial.³

Abandonment of Aggravations.—Where an indictment charges many acts with certain aggravations constituting a crime, a conviction of a lesser crime, consisting of only a portion of those acts, or with less or no circumstances of aggravation, is proper.⁴

If the crime is single and indivisible and there is involved in it no lower grade of the offense than the one charged there can be no conviction of a less offense.⁷

A second or third offense necessarily includes the first offense.⁸

[a.] In Washington.—Upon an information for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to murder, under Ball. Code, §7057, a verdict finding the defendant guilty of "assault with a deadly weapon" does not warrant a sentence for an assault with intent to inflict bodily injury under Ball. Code, §7058, but only for a simple assault, as the intent is an essential element of the offense and must be found as a fact by the jury. There is no such offense as an assault with a deadly weapon in Washington. State v. Sander, 22 Wash. 209-200, 73 Pac. 355.

[a] In Brown v. State, 103 Miss. 601, 60 So. 727, the court says, in substance, in the indictment "in the charge of burglary there was only a charge that the breaking and entering was with the intent to steal, and not with stealing," hence when the accused "was put on trial, there was not before the court any charge against him for larceny. The charge of burglary does not necessarily include larceny. It cannot be stated that the essential ingredients of larceny were in the affidavit in this case. The affidavit did not advise appellant sufficiently of the accusation against him. He should not have been convicted of petit larceny on this plain charge of burglary."

S.) 1075, Bartlett, J., says: "The accusation which the jury passed upon was an accusation of killing while engaged in the perpetration of a felony (burglary), a crime in which it is not necessary to prove any design to effect death. Under such circumstances, the power to convict of a lesser degree of felonious homicide which belongs to the jury in cases where the degree depends upon the intent cannot properly be exercised; because an intent to kill is not a necessary ingredient of the offense in this kind of murder." [c] In Pennsylvania, the right upon an indictment for murder to convict the defendant of assault and battery is by implication forbidden by statute. See Act March 31, 1860, Pub. Laws 407; Com. v. Adams, 2 Pa. Super. 46.

[d] If included in the Charge. State v. O'Kane, 23 Kan. 244.

battery, if the battery is properly alleged,⁴¹ or of assault of any degree or grade,⁴² such as an aggravated assault,⁴³ maliciously cutting and wounding,⁴⁴ assault with a deadly weapon,⁴⁵ assault with intent to murder,⁴⁶ or to maim,⁴⁷ or to commit great bodily injury,⁴⁸ of pointing or aiming a firearm,⁴⁹ or the statutory offense of shooting at another,⁵⁰ and of robbery in a proper case.⁵¹ But on an indictment for murder there can be no conviction of rape,⁵² or procuring an abortion,⁵³ or the statutory offense of wilfully stabbing or shooting another not designing thereby to produce or cause his death.⁵⁴

Where a statutory form is used which is not broad enough to include assault there can be no conviction of assault.⁵⁵ But such a form may be broad enough to sustain a conviction for any degree of murder or lower grade of homicide.⁵⁶

On an indictment for manslaughter one may be convicted of involuntary manslaughter,⁵⁷ any lower degree of manslaughter than that charged⁵⁸ and not inconsistent with it,⁵⁹ of assault,⁶⁰ or of assault and battery,⁶¹ but an indictment charging manslaughter in the second degree will not support a conviction of abortion.⁶²

c. Larceny.—A charge of larceny of a particular kind or under particular circumstances will justify a conviction of larceny generally,⁶³ or of some other or simpler form of larceny necessarily included in the charge.⁶⁴ A charge of larceny from the person will sustain a conviction of grand larceny,⁶⁵ or of simple or petit larceny.⁶⁶ An indictment for grand larceny will sustain a conviction of petit larceny,⁶⁷ or of any

[a] Absence of Evidence.—An indictment for robbery will not sustain a conviction of larceny when there is to murder¹¹ or of riot,¹² since they are not included offenses.

z. Seduction.—An indictment for seduction will support a conviction of adultery¹³ or fornication.¹⁴

aa. Stabbing.—Under an indictment for stabbing one may be convicted of assault,¹⁵ or assault and battery.¹⁶

B. CONVICTION OF HIGHER OFFENSE.—A conviction of a higher offense than that charged is error although the higher offense may be shown by the evidence.¹⁷

C. CONVICTING JOINT DEFENDANTS OF DIFFERENT DEGREES.—Where several persons are jointly accused of the crime, it is proper to find them guilty of different degrees of the offense,¹⁸ if the verdict is not thereby rendered inconsistent.¹⁹

D. RIGHT TO CONVICT OF MISDEMEANOR.—At common law the right to convict of a lesser offense was subject to the qualification that under an indictment for a felony the accused could not be convicted²⁰

[a] The reason for this qualification was that a person charged with a misdemeanor was entitled to certain privileges to which a person indicted for a felony was not entitled. The privileges were the right to appear by counsel and to have a copy of the indictment and a special jury. But in most, if not all, the states of this country the reasons for this distinction never existed; with us the rights of the accused on a trial for a felony are as well protected as upon a trial for a misdemeanor. Indeed, in Georgia, a person accused of a felony has some rights and privileges which a person charged with a misdemeanor does not have. Ga.—Watson v. State, 116 Ga. 607, 608, 43 S. E. 32, 21 L. [a] The provision that no person shall be acquitted of a misdemeanor where the proofs show a felony applies usually to those cases where the felony includes the misdemeanor, and is made up of the latter and some additional but not contradictory element. People v. Chappell, 27 Mich. 486.

[b] In Monk v. State, 105 Ark. 12, 150 S. W. 133, the court says: "From an early day it has been held that, upon an indictment for a felony, the accused may be convicted of a misdemeanor, where both offenses belong to the same generic class, where the been generally abandoned, and the same is true in England.²²

E. PRINCIPALS CONVICTED AS ACCESSORIES.—Although by common law one charged as principal could not be convicted as accessory and vice versa,²³ this is sometimes permitted by statute.²⁴

F. TO WHAT CRIMES RULE APPLIES.—The statutes permitting a conviction of a lesser degree of offense on the charge of a greater apply both to offenses in existence at the enactment thereof,²⁵ and to offenses subsequently created.²⁶

G. RIGHT TO CONVICT AS AFFECTED BY THE ALLEGATIONS OF THE INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION.—1. Generally.—Unless the greater offense is of such a character that it includes within itself all the essential elements of the lesser,²⁷ the indictment must on its face show every essential element of the lesser offense in order to sustain a conviction of the lesser crime,²⁸ but it is not necessary that the indict-commission of the higher may involve the commission of the lower offense, and where the indictment for the higher offense contains all the substantive allegations necessary to let in proof of the misdemeanor."

[a] In construing the statute providing for a conviction of a lower degree of the crime charged the court in Birker v. State, 118 Wis. 108-111, 94 N. W. 643, quotes with approval from Keefe v. People, 40 N. Y. 355, as follows: "The true construction of the statute is, that when the act for which the accused is indicted is the same act for which he is convicted, the conviction of the lower degree is proper, although the indictment contains averments constituting the offense of the highest degree of the species of crime, and omits to state the particular intent and circumstances characterizing a lower degree of the same crime."

[b] Need Not Specify Lesser Offense.—If the indictment charges an offense which includes a lesser, as mayhem, which includes assault and battery, there may be a conviction of the latter even though there are no words in the indictment stating that the lesser offense was committed; for instance the indictment need not state that while the defendant was committing the mayhem that he "assaulted" the person also. Benham v. State, 1 Iowa 542, 545.

[a] Under an indictment for an assault with intent to murder the charge was an unlawful cutting, stabbing and wounding with a knife and there was a conviction for an assault. The accused objected that the assault was not charged to have been "unlawfully" done. The court held that if it were necessary to aver that the assault was unlawful, taking all the indictment together, it does charge such unlawfulness with certainty. Baird v. State, 55 Ga. 319.

32. State v. Campbell, 24 Utah 103, 107, 66 Pac. 771.

2. Where Insufficient To Charge the Higher Crime.—An indictment although insufficient to support the greater charge may support a conviction of a lesser crime,³³ but this rule is not universal.³⁴

II. RIGHT TO CONVICT AS AFFECTED BY THE EVIDENCE.—WHEN DOUBT EXISTS AS TO DEGREE.—When it appears that the accused has committed a crime, and there is reasonable ground of doubt as to which of two or more degrees he is guilty he may be convicted of the lowest of these degrees only.³⁵

Evidence Sufficient for Conviction of Higher Degree.—Even though the evidence sustains a conviction of the offense charged,³⁶ and the instructions call for a conviction of such offense only,³⁷ the jury cannot be prevented from convicting of a lower degree.

37. Fagg v. State, 50 Ark. 506, 8 S. W. 829.

It is no cause for reversal that the evidence shows or tends to show that the defendant is guilty of a higher degree of the offense than that of which he is convicted,³⁸ and the fact that the defendant is guilty of a higher offense than that charged in the indictment is no defense,³⁹ for the prosecuting attorney may, in the first instance, file an information charging a person guilty of a less offense than that for which he should have been charged,⁴⁰ or he may, after an indictment has been found for an offense, elect to prosecute for a lower grade of the same offense, necessarily included therein.⁴¹

Must Be Some Evidence of Lower Crime.—In determining the question whether a conviction for the lower offense can be sustained, the court should look at the evidence submitted at the trial as well as to the language of the charge in the indictment.⁴² The verdict should be really and logically justified by the facts proved.⁴³ The trial judge may set aside a verdict and grant a new trial where the evidence shows either innocence or guilt of a grade or degree higher than that of which defendant was convicted.⁴⁴

I. CONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTES.—The constitutional right of the accused to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him is not violated by the statute permitting a conviction of the lesser offense,⁴⁵ for the accused who has notice of the major offense

If the motion is based on objections to the indictment, the court will only look at the charges therein made, to determine whether an indictable offense is set out to which the defendant ought to be compelled to answer. In making this examination the court will view the indictment in the light of such public acts as they take judicial notice of without being pleaded."

[a] In State v. Fletcher, 18 Mo. 425, the court said: "The practice of sustaining motions to quash indictments for every trivial objection, or for every formal defect, tends to the great perversion of justice, and to the increase of offense." But in the same opinion the court also said: "It is most prudent to quash an indictment when the court sees, clearly, that a judgment on it must be arrested; there is no reason to incur the costs of a trial when it is manifest the indictment is too defective to support a judgment of conviction. In such cases, the sooner the proceedings are stopped, the better."

[b] In Federal Courts.—No indictment found and presented by a grand jury in any district or circuit or other court of the United States shall be deemed insufficient by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form only, which shall not tend to prejudice the defendant. Breese v. United States, 226 U. S. 1, 33 Sup. Ct. 1, 57 L. ed. 97; United States v. Rosenthal, 121 Fed. 862; United States v. Terry, 39 Fed. 355; United States v. Bornemann, 35 Fed. 824; United States v. Molloy, 31 Fed. 19.

c. Prescribed by Statute.—(I.) [d] Absence of an averment of incorporation of the company whose property was burglarized is not sufficient ground for a motion to quash. Hamilton v. State, 34 Ohio St. 82; Burke v. State, 34 Ohio St. 79.

[e] A substantial variance in the name of a grand juror as it appears in the caption and in the panel is no ground to quash an indictment. It is a mere misprision of the clerk, which is, of course, amendable. State v. Norton, 23 N. J. L. 33.

[a] That a grand juror had not paid his taxes or "was a party to any suit pending and at issue" no ground for quashing. N. C. Pub. Laws, 1907, p. 63; State v. Banner, 149 N. C. 519, 63 S. E. 84.

[b] The failure of the jury commissioners to take a special statutory oath before drawing the grand jury is not ground for quashing the indictment. Sims v. State, 146 Ala. 109, 41 So. 413.

[c] The fact that more than the legal number of names were drawn, from which names the grand jury was formed, constitutes no ground for quashing the indictment. Sanders v. State, 148 Ala. 603, 41 So. 466.

[d] The exemption of persons over sixty years of age is a personal privilege which may be waived, and furnishes no ground for quashal. Spigener v. State, 62 Ala. 383.

[e] Discrimination in Selection of Grand Jurors.—Under provisions of this nature the fact that the jury commissioners, in selecting the grand jury took only such persons as they wanted to act as grand jurors and refused to put upon the venire the names of many persons who were qualified jurors, and who, if the jury had been properly drawn, would have appeared on the grand jury venire, and the fact that the commissioners allowed their political preference to govern them in drawing the jury and selected the venire because its members were favorable to a certain candidate, is not available as a basis for a motion to quash. Bluett v. State, 151 Ala. 41, 44 So. 84.

[f] Error Apparent.—Where error going to the organization of the grand jury which found and returned an indictment is apparent of record, and is fatal, an objection thereto may be made by motion to quash. Spivey v. State, 172 Ala. 391, 56 So. 232.

[g] But where there is some order of the court or some action of the presiding judge, appearing of record, and relating to the organization of the grand jury which is without any warrant in the statute or is contrary to its provisions, as contradistinguished from any acts of the court's officers while ministerially executing such order when lawfully made, objection may be made jurors were not drawn in the presence⁶ of the officers designated by law, or unless it appears to the court that the defendant has been injured thereby;⁷ and under some statutes neither this objection nor any other can be taken to the formation of a special grand jury summoned by the direction of the court.⁸

Statutes in some jurisdictions have enumerated certain other matters which shall not be considered as sufficient grounds for quashing or setting aside the accusation, viz.: mistake in the name of the court or county in the title thereof;⁹ want of an allegation of the time or place of any material fact, when the venue and time have been once stated;¹⁰ want of a proper or perfect venue;¹¹ that dates and numbers are represented by figures;¹² an omission to allege that the grand jurors were impaneled, sworn or charged,¹³ or a failure to set forth that the indictment is upon the oaths and affirmations of the jurors;¹⁴ omitting to state the time at which the offense was committed in any case in which time is not the essence of the offense, or stating the time imperfectly, unless time is of the essence of the offense;¹⁵ stating by motion to quash. Nordan v. State, 143 Ala. 13, 39 So. 406; Carlisle v. Watts, 78 Ala. 486.

[h] Irregularity subsequent to organization not covered by statute. Nordan v. State, 143 Ala. 13, 39 So. 406. Compare People v. Hunter, 54 Cal. 65; State v. Wheeler, 129 Iowa 100, 105 N. W. 374.

[a] Alleged Disqualification of Judge.—The fact that the judge who drew and organized the grand jury was under bond to await the action of the same grand jury under a charge of having committed a misdemeanor in violating the state game laws is no ground for quashing the indictments found by such jury. *Wright v. [a] Mr. Justice Alvey in Maquire v. State, 47 Md. 491, says: "The manifest object of this statute was to preclude all objections to the indictment that might or could be raised by demurrer, from being raised in any other manner. Motions to quash, and motions in arrest for defects in the indictment that could have been taken advantage of by demurrer, are no longer available modes of attacking the indictment; and if the opportunity of demurring is not availed of at the proper time, the party is to be taken as having waived all such defects. Here a demurrer was interposed, and overruled; and the motion to quash, being founded upon supposed defects in the indictment, was therefore properly refused to be entertained." See also *State v. [a] In New York the cases have been somewhat conflicting but are reviewed by Werner, J., as follows in the opinion of People v. Glenn, 173 N. Y. 395, 66 N. E. 112: "The words 'but in no other' were added to the first paragraph of section 313 in 1897, and were evidently intended to remove all doubts which had been raised as to the meaning of said section by the conflicting decisions of the courts upon that subject. In many cases it had been held that this code provision, as it stood prior to 1897, could not limit or interfere with the inherent power of the courts to dismiss indictments upon other substantial grounds than those enumerated in the section referred to. (People v. Molinex, 27 Misc. Rep. 79; People v. Vaughn, 19 id. 298; People v. Thomas, 32 id. 179; People v. Clark, 8 N. Y. Crim. Rep. 169; People v. Brickner, id. 217; People v. Moore, 65 How. Pr. 177.) In other cases it had been held that this section of the code was exclusive, and distinctly negated the rights of courts to dismiss indictments upon any other grounds than those therein enumerated. (People v. Rutherford, 47 App. Div. 209; People v. Willis, 23 Misc. Rep. 568; People v. Winant, 24 id. 361; People v. O'Connor, 31 id. 668; People v. Montgomery, 36 id. 328; *People v. [a] It must appear that the wrong done to him was in some way connected with the finding of the indictment. People v. Katzenbach, 70 Misc.

d. Defects Subject to Demurrer.—According to some authorities an indictment will not be quashed for defects which constitute ground for demurrer.³⁵

2. Particular Grounds.—a. Want or Insufficiency of Preliminary Affidavit or Complaint.—Where an information is based wholly upon a preliminary affidavit or complaint, the total absence of such an affidavit,³⁶ or a radical defect in it,³⁷ is a sufficient ground for a motion to quash the information. But the rule is otherwise where the information is based upon a preliminary hearing and commitment and the affidavit was merely to secure issuance of a warrant of arrest.³⁸

b. Errors in or Want of Preliminary Examination or Commitment. (I.) Indictments.—Where not required to be based upon a preliminary hearing it is no ground for quashal that the indictment was found before or during the progress of such a hearing,³⁹ or that there was no sufficient preliminary complaint or information.⁴⁰

But in some jurisdictions the fact that the accused had not been given a preliminary hearing and held to answer, before the finding of the indictment, gives him the right to attack it by motion to quash, upon grounds which otherwise would have been available only as a basis of challenge.⁴¹

(II.) Informations.—Except in cases where a preliminary commitment is not required by law, it is ground for quashing or setting aside an information that before the filing thereof the defendant has not been legally committed by a magistrate.⁴² Every informality or irregularity before the magistrate, however, does not require a quashal, but only those which affect the substantial rights of the accused.⁴³

[a] If it appears upon the face of the information that the defendant had not been given a preliminary examination, the objection should be raised by a motion to quash. McGinnis v. State, 16 Wyo. 72, 91 Pac. 936.

[b] Presumption as to Examination. When an information is filed charging a defendant with the commission of a felony, the law presumes that the defendant has had a preliminary examination or has waived the same, and the information need not allege that fact. If the defendant contends that no preliminary examination has been had or waived, and he desires to raise the question, he must do so by motion to set aside the information on that ground, and the burden of proof is on him. Hughes v. State, 7 Okla. Cr. 117, 122 Pac. 554.

[c] The phrase "legally committed" refers to the examination of the case and the holding of the defendant to answer before a committing magistrate. Ex parte Baker, 88 Cal. 84, 25 Pac. 966. See also People v. Beach, 122 Cal. 37, 54 Pac. 369.

[d] The failure of the commitment to designate the crime for which the accused is held to answer, except by the general term "felony," is ground for a motion to quash. Fertig v. State, 14 Ariz. 540, 133 Pac. 99.

43. People v. Rodrigo, 69 Cal. 601, 11 Pac. 481.

[a] Erroneous Endorsement of Commitment.—Since public officers must be presumed to have performed their duty as required by law, until the contrary appears, where it does not appear that the justice did not hold the examination required by law and there was no deposition filed, the information will not be set aside because the order of commitment was endorsed on the complaint although the statute requires the order to be endorsed on the deposition. People v. Smith, 59 Cal. 365. But see now Penal Code, §872.

[b] Commitment Under Erroneous Name.—The fact that the defendant was charged and committed under a fictitious or erroneous name would be no reason for quashing or setting aside an information which states his true name. State v. Yturaspe, 22 Idaho 360, 125 Pac. 802.

[c] The refusal of a witness to answer questions on cross-examination at the preliminary examination on the ground of privilege is not sufficient basis for setting aside the information. State v. Bond, 12 Idaho 424, 86 Pac. 43. See also State v. McGann, 2 Idaho 40, 66 Pac. 823.

[d] Objections to Stenographer.—It is not ground for setting aside an information that the court required no affirmative showing as to the qualifications of the stenographer on preliminary examination, or that the stenographer was an employe of the district attorney or that the stenographer was not sworn to correctly take down and transcribe the testimony. People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

d. Indictment Drawn by Unauthorized Attorney.—It is ground for quashing an indictment that it was drawn by an attorney acting without authority.⁴⁸

e. Objections as to the Grand Jury.—(I.) Irregularities in Selecting and Empanelling. In the absence of statute to the contrary, objection to the competency and qualifications of the grand jurors, if not waived by failure to challenge,⁴⁹ or to the mode of selecting, summoning or empanelling them⁵⁰ may be made by a motion to quash or set aside.

[a] In O'Byrne v. State, 51 Ala. 28, it was held that if a trial court drew and organized a grand jury in any other manner than that prescribed by law, indictments found by such grand jury would be quashed on proper and timely application. This case was quoted in Fryer v. State, 146 Ala. 4, 41 So. 172, and cited with approval in Spivey v. State, 172 Ala. 391, 56 So. 232.

[b] Irregularity Not Amounting to Corruption.—In Kansas it is proper to overrule a motion to quash for irregularity in selecting the grand jury where such irregularity, in the opinion of the court, does not amount to corruption. State v. Johnson, 6 Kan. App. 119, 50 Pac. 907; State v. Lowe, 6 Kan. App. 110, 50 Pac. 912.

[c] Substantial Rights Unaffected. An indictment will be set aside for irregularities in the selection of the grand jury, only when there has been a departure from the requirements of the statute, affecting the substantial rights of the defendant. *State v. [d] Exclusion of Negroes From Grand Jury.—A negro indicted by the grand jury from which other negroes have been excluded because of their race or color may have such indictment quashed; but the mere absence of negroes from the juries for some years, without proof of the prejudice of the judge who selected the jury commissioners, or of the commissioners does not afford sufficient ground to quash the indictment. *Binyon v. [e] Failure To Accompany Lists With Certificate.—That the lists of jurors selected in the various townships of the county are not authenticated by a formal certificate, is insufficient as a ground for setting aside an indictment in the absence of fraud. State v. Ausaleme, 15 Iowa 44.

[f] Grand Jury Composed of Persons Summoned as Trial Jurors.—If the order be to summon twenty-four persons to act as trial jurors, an indictment found by these persons, subsequently impaneled as a grand jury will be set aside. People v. Earnest, 45 Cal. 29.

[g] Jury Commissioner Father of Deceased.—An indictment will be quashed where one of the jury commissioners was the father of the person killed and was an active prosecutor during the progress of the case and jurors.⁵¹ But in some jurisdictions objections of this nature can also be taken by plea in abatement, and in others only by plea in abatement.⁵²

Defect in Venire Facias or Execution Thereof.—Informality or defect in the venire facias, or in the manner of executing the same, will not vitiate an indictment on motion to quash,⁵³ nor is it ground for quashing the indictment that it does not affirmatively appear from the record that a venire facias had been issued to summon the grand jury by which the indictment had been found.⁵⁴

(II.) No Opportunity To Challenge.—In the absence of a provision in a statute enumerating the grounds for setting aside an indictment a motion to set aside on the ground that the defendant was not given an opportunity to challenge the grand jurors,⁵⁵ or was not permitted to be present during an exercise of a challenge on his behalf⁵⁶ will not be sustained.

[a] Defective Order for Grand Jury. The fact that the court in directing the sheriff to summon additional grand jurors neglected to include in his order the statutory requirement that such jurors should not be persons who had served as jurors upon the regular list within the last twelve months, is not ground for setting aside the indictment. Troome v. Ter., 11 Ariz. 181, 59 Pac. 591.

[a] A defendant is not entitled to have an indictment against him set aside on the ground that he was not brought before the court and given an opportunity to challenge the grand jury, where it appears that he was under arrest at the time upon process issued by a justice of the peace, and that the district court had no jurisdiction over him to bring him before it upon the impaneling of the grand jury. State v. Fitzgerald, 63 Iowa 268, 19 N. W. 202.

[b] Defendant in Jail When Grand Jury Impaneled.—It is no ground for quashing an indictment that when the grand jury were impaneled and sworn the defendant was in jail. State v. Hoyt, 13 Minn. 125; People v. Borgstrom, 178 N. Y. 254, 70 N. E. 780. See also Sullins v. State, 79 Ark. 127, 95 S. W. 159.

indictment, a motion to quash or set aside will lie in some states on any ground which would have been good ground for challenge, either to the panel or to any individual grand juror,⁵⁷ provided of course the juror assailed took part in the consideration of the charge against defendant or the deliberations of the grand jury.⁵⁸

(III.) Matters Not Subject to Challenge.—Irregularities or defects in the selection and organization of the grand jury which are not grounds for challenge are not sufficient grounds for quashing or setting aside an indictment.⁵⁹

(IV.) Want of Authority in Grand Jury.—The defendant may move to quash the indictment when it appears from the face thereof that the grand jury had no legal authority to inquire into the offense charged,⁶⁰ but the fact that the body which found the indictment was not a de jure but only a de facto grand jury is not a ground for motion to quash, since the authority of such body cannot be collaterally at-

[a] But where the defendant has been given an opportunity to challenge and has failed to take advantage of such opportunity, he cannot use a ground of challenge as a basis for a motion to quash. Borello v. Superior Court, 8 Cal. App. 215, 96 Pac. 404. See also De Leon v. Ter., 9 Ariz. 161, 80 Pac. 348; Parker v. Ter., 5 Ariz. 283, 52 Pac. 361; and 10 STANDARD PROC. 634.

[b] In Iowa this ground for motion to set aside is not allowed to a defendant held to answer before indictment. Code, 1897, §5321; State v. Johnson, 136 Iowa 601, 111 N. W. 827; State v. Hart, 29 Iowa 268; State v. Howard, 19 Iowa 191.

[c] Any statutory incompetency of the grand jurors which is not made a basis for challenge is regarded as a mere direction to the court in impaneling the jury and is not available as a ground for setting aside the indictment. Matter of Ruef, 150 Cal. 665, 89 Pac. 605. See also State v. Simas, 25 Nev. 432, 62 Pac. 242.

[d] How Ground of Challenge Is Established.—In People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 233, 26 Pac. 88, it was said: "But the fact which would have been good ground for challenge must be proven in the ordinary way in which other facts are proven, by the introduction of evidence, either by the examination of the jurors, or by other competent evidence. For this purpose, of course, defendant is entitled to the process of subpoena to compel the attendance of his witnesses; but there is no process by which discharged grand jurors can be reassembled in their official character and subjected to the original process of challenging."

f. Objections to Proceedings Before and by the Grand Jury. (I.) Matters Pertaining to Court's Charge.—Error in the general charge of the judge to the grand jury is not recognized as ground for quashing indictments found by them.⁶³ Neither will the indictment be set aside on the ground that one of the grand jurors who participated in finding the indictment was not present when the grand jury was charged.⁶⁴

(II.) Errors in Statement by Prosecuting Attorney.—An inadvertent error in a statement by the prosecuting attorney to the grand jury is not ground for quashing.⁶⁵

(III.) Unauthorized Person Before Grand Jury.—The presence of an unauthorized person at a session of the grand jury during its deliberations is ground for quashing or setting aside the indictment,⁶⁶ and

[a] Presence of Witness.—In People v. Arnold, 248 Ill. 169, 93 N. E. 786, it was held the fact that a father was in the grand jury room at a time when some clothes were identified, for the alleged reason that his daughter was timid and unable to appear alone in respect to a matter of the kind under investigation, was not ground for quashing the indictment.

[b] Presence of Unauthorized Grand Juror.—A statutory provision of this nature held inapplicable to a case where the unauthorized person was a grand juror to whom a challenge had been allowed. Territory v. Staples, 3 Idaho 35, 26 Pac. 166.

[c] Presence of bailiff in the grand jury room is not ground for a motion to quash, when the proof clearly shows that the bailiff exerted no influence on the grand jury. State v. Bacon, 77 Miss. 366, 27 So. 563.

[d] Stranger Present But Not Participating.—In Maine it has been held that the motion to quash will be sustained if it is shown that the unauthorized person participates in the proceedings, but not otherwise. State v. Clough, 49 Me. 573. But see State especially is this true where private counsel is permitted to harangue the jurors,⁶⁷ or it can be shown that any other improper influence has been brought to bear on them,⁶⁸ as for example where the presiding judge was in the grand jury room with the grand jury during their deliberations and urged and directed them to find the indictment.⁶⁹

Examination of Witnesses by Unauthorized Person.—But it has been held that it is not ground for quashing an indictment that the clerk of the grand jury examined witnesses,⁷⁰ or that an attorney acting for the prosecuting attorney examined witnesses before the grand jury if he was not present while the grand jury was deliberating or voting.⁷¹

(IV.) Improper Conduct of Grand Jury.—Improper conduct on the part of the grand jury may sometimes be taken advantage of by motion

v. Bowman, 90 Me. 363, 38 Atl. 331, 60 Am. St. Rep. 266.

[e] Presence of Stenographer.—In State v. Bowman, 90 Me. 363, 38 Atl. 331, 60 Am. St. Rep. 266, a motion to quash was sustained on the ground that a stenographer was present by order of court and took notes of the testimony before the grand jury. See 10 STANDARD PROC. 649, note. But see 10 STANDARD PROC. 653.

[f] Attorney Acting as Stenographer.—Where by statute two attorneys may be in the grand jury room the fact that one acts as stenographer is not ground for quashing an indictment. United States v. Haskell, 169 Fed. 449.

Presence of Prosecuting Attorney. See 10 STANDARD PROC. 651.

Presence of Special Counsel or Prosecutor.—See 10 STANDARD PROC. 651, 652.

[g] A county attorney, who through the relation of attorney and client in a civil action, has gained a confidential knowledge of facts subsequently made the basis of a criminal prosecution against his client, is disqualified to act as prosecutor of the charge, and his appearance before the grand jury in the matter of finding and returning the indictment is ground for setting the same aside. State v. Rucker, 130 Iowa 239, 106 N. W. 645.

Presence of Witnesses.—See 10 STANDARD PROC. 652.

Presence of Interpreter.—See 10 STANDARD PROC. 654.

[h] Showing of Unlawful Presence. It is incumbent on the defendant, moving to set aside the indictment on the ground that an unauthorized person was with the grand jury during their deliberations, to show that such person was present unlawfully and that he was present when the vote was taken on the finding of the indictment. State v. Fertig, 98 Iowa 139, 67 N. W. 87.

68. United States v. Kilpatrick, 16 Fed. 765.

69. State v. Will, 97 Iowa 58, 65 N. W. 1010.

Presence of Judge.—See 10 STANDARD PROC. 653.

70. In State v. Miller, 95 Iowa 368, 64 N. W. 288, the clerk who was not a member of the grand jury and was a practicing attorney asked the witnesses some questions, but they were asked at the request of the foreman and were followed by questions asked by different members of the grand jury. The court refused to set aside the indictment notwithstanding the fact that the statute provided that the clerk should "take no part in the proceedings aside from his clerical duties."

71. Coon v. State, 109 Ark. 346, 160 S. W. 226; Tiner v. State, 109 Ark. 138, 158 S. W. 1087; Bennett v. State, 62 Ark. 516, 36 S. W. 947.

[a] In Jones v. State, 150 Ala. 54, 43 So. 179, it was held that the fact that an attorney not a member of the grand jury nor the regular solicitor was present and examined witnesses before the grand jury is not good grounds for quashing the indictment where it appears that he was there at the request of the court and the regular solicitor who was ill, and that he did not counsel the grand jury or express any opinion unfavorable to defendant, though he may have administered the to quash or to set aside.⁷² Thus if the grand jury should disregard its duty and prefer an indictment without any authority or foundation, the court should sustain a motion to quash,⁷³ but the misconduct must be substantially prejudicial to the accused.⁷⁴

(V.) Illegal or Insufficient Evidence. — Generally an indictment will not be quashed because of the illegality or insufficiency of the evidence upon which it was based, since the court will not inquire into the character or sufficiency of such evidence.⁷⁵ But it has been held that in extreme cases when the court can see that the finding of a grand jury is based upon such utterly insufficient evidence or such palpably oath to a witness, it appearing that other witnesses were examined.

72. United States v. Kilpatrick, 16 Fed. 765; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 345, 19 Pac. 161. But see Cal. Penal Code, §995.

[a] Proof that the grand jury left their regular jury room and went to a nearby sanitarium to take the testimony of a witness, without any showing as to who the witness was, whether or not his testimony was in fact taken, why he could not attend before the grand jury, or to what case the testimony of the witness pertained, the act of the grand jury standing in the record as an isolated fact unconnected with the case at bar by any evidence direct or circumstantial, constitutes no ground for setting aside an indictment. Fooshee v. State, 3 Okla. Cr. 666, 108 Pac. 554.

[b] The fact that other indictments were found against the same defendant by the same grand jury for a similar offense will not justify a quashal upon the theory that it indicates bias and prejudice and improper conduct. State v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 84 N. J. L. 550, 87 Atl. 86.

73. Under a statute declaring the punishment for the wanton injury to stock and providing that "no bill of indictment shall be found, or prosecution maintained, except upon the complaint of the owner of the stock" an indictment will be quashed on motion if preferred without the necessary complaint, though it should not be struck from the files merely because the name of the owner is not endorsed as prosecutor. Ashworth v. State, 53 Ala. 190.

74. The exclusion of the prosecuting attorney from the grand jury room has been held to be insufficient in itself as a ground for setting aside an indictment in the absence of a showing that the substantial rights of the accused were violated. State v. Slocum, 111 Minn. 328, 126 N. W. 1096.

See 6 ENCY. OF EV. 252, 257.

As to motions to quash because of objection to evidence on preliminary examination see supra, XIV, A, 2, b.

[a] Reasons.—In United States v. Swift, 186 Fed. 1002, the court said: "The cases are uniform to the effect that, except in those states in which, by statute, indictments are required to be returned on 'legal' or 'competent' evidence, the courts will not review the evidence received by a grand jury for the purpose of passing upon its competency. In the first place no official record of the evidence introduced before the grand jury ordinarily is kept. In the second place, if, on a motion to quash, the competency of the evidence presented could be inquired into, the trial courts would be obliged to sit as courts of review, to examine into the correctness of every ruling made upon the evidence by the grand jurors. The obstructions to justice and the unnecessary and uncalled-for waste of time, and consequent expense to the state as well as to defendants, which would result from such a course, are too obvious to need comment." See also Noll v. Dailey, 72 W. Va. 520, 79 S. E. 668, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1207.

[b] Where no constitutional right of defendant is violated, an indictment will not be set aside because some incompetent evidence was admitted. Hope v. People, 83 N. Y. 418, 38 Am. Rep. 460; People v. Booth, 52 Misc. 340, 102 N. Y. Supp. 62; People v. Willis, 23 Misc. 568, 52 N. Y. Supp. 808.

[c] That the minutes of the evidence do not show sufficient facts to justify the finding of the indictment, constitutes no ground for quashing or setting aside the same. State v. Morris, 36 Iowa 272.

76. U. S.—McKinney v. United States, 199 Fed. 25; United States v. Jones, 69 Fed. 973; United States v.

[a] "This qualification, however, is far from a recognition of the right of a defendant to compel a review of the evidence upon which he was indicted." McKinney v. United States, 199 Fed. 25.

[b] One Incompetent Witness.—If it should appear from the indorsement on the back of the indictment that only one witness was examined, and it should be shown that he was a convicted felon and, therefore, incompetent to be a witness in any case, it would seem that the indictment should be quashed. United States v. Terry, 39 Fed. 355.

[c] Must Be Total Absence of Competent Evidence.—In State v. Coates, 130 N. C. 701, 41 S. E. 706, the court laid down the following rule: "When an indictment is found upon testimony, all of which is incompetent, or of witnesses, all of whom were disqualified, the bill will be quashed; but when some of the testimony, or some of the witnesses before the grand jury, were incompetent, the court will not go into the barren inquiry how far such testimony or such witnesses contributed to finding the bill, which is merely a charge, but will admit the competent witnesses or testimony on the trial."

[d] In New York "whenever it clearly appears, therefore, that the legal evidence received by the grand jury is insufficient to support an indictment; or that illegal evidence is the sole basis for an indictment, the person indicted has a constitutional right to make a motion to dismiss, notwithstanding the provisions of the code to the contrary." People v. Sexton, 187 N. Y. 495, 80 N. E. 396; People v. Evans, 81 Misc. 606, 143 N. Y. Supp. 49; People v. Restenblatt, 1 Abb. Pr. 268; People v. Brickner, 8 N. Y. Cr. 217, 15 N. Y. Supp. 528; People v. Price, 6 N. Y. Cr. 141, 2 N. Y. Supp. 414; People v. Metropolitan Traction

there was no evidence whatever upon which to base the indictment.⁷⁷

(VI.) Incompetency of Witnesses.—Since it cannot be shown what weight, if any, the testimony of a single witness had with the grand jury, it is a general rule that the incompetency of one of several witnesses will not sustain a motion to quash.⁷⁸ But this general rule should not be confused with the right of the accused to have the indictment quashed where he has been brought before the grand jury

[c] In People v. Glen, 173 N. Y. 395, 66 N. E. 112, the court said: "But our courts have also always asserted and exercised the power to set aside indictments whenever it has been made to appear that they have been found without evidence, or upon illegal and incompetent testimony. (United States v. Coolidge, 2 Gall. 361; People v. Restorff, 1 Abb. Pr. 268; People v. Briggs, 60 How. Pr. 17.) This power is based upon the inherent right and duty of the courts to protect the citizen in his constitutional prerogatives and to prevent oppression or persecution. It is a power which the legislature can neither curtail nor abolish, and, to the extent that legislative enactments are designed to effect either of those ends, they are unconstitutional." Contra, State v. Shepherd, 129 Iowa 705, 106 N. W. 190.

[a] In United States v. Swift, 186 Fed. 1002, the court in passing on this point said: "The two propositions are radically different. It is one thing to quash an indictment because the accused, in violation of his constitutional right, is brought before the grand jury and browbeaten or maltreated . . . and it is quite another thing to quash an indictment because a witness is asked concerning facts which mayhap do not tend to prove the charge which the grand jury is to inquire into. The one reaches to the organization or fundamental power of the grand jury to act; the other, granting that the grand jury was properly impaneled and had the power to proceed, involves the proposition that it acted upon incompetent evidence, and therefore reached an irrational conclusion."

[b] In Boone v. People, 148 Ill. 440, 36 N. E. 99, the court said: "We do not hold that where one is before the grand jury as a witness, and at that time is not charged with crime, and may incidently be interrogated about a matter to which he makes answer, and an indictment is afterwards found against him, that would require the indictment to be quashed; nor do we hold that every case where one is before the grand jury as a witness, and interrogated about a matter for which he afterwards may be indicted, would be of itself sufficient cause to quash the indictment. But in this case it does not appear that the grand jury examined any other witnesses, nor does it appear the indictment was not found on the evidence of the defendant alone. No affidavits are filed by the state's attorney on that question; and where, as here, the defendant charged with crime is taken from the jail before the grand jury, and interrogated about the matter with which he is charged with crime, such an error must be held fatal to the indictment. It was error to overrule the motion to quash the indictment."

[c] Where this is not one of the statutory grounds for quashing it will not support a motion to quash. Spearman v. State, 34 Tex. Crim. 279, 30 S. W. 229. See Mencheea v. State (Tex. Crim.), 28 S. W. 203; and supra, XIV, A, 1, c, (II).

[a] In People v. Page, 116 Cal. 386, 48 Pac. 326, the court said, "nor do we know of any rule of law which makes the voluntary testimony of the defendant before the grand jury a ground for setting aside the indictment," and this was so held although the accused was not informed of his right to consult counsel before testifying. Or where the defendant refuses to complain, especially if he gave no incriminating testimony.⁸¹ The indictment may be quashed where the witnesses before the grand jury were not properly sworn.⁸²

(VII.) Failure To Preserve Evidence.—Some statutes have made it a ground for setting aside the indictment when the minutes of the evidence of the witnesses examined before the grand jury are not returned with the indictment,⁸³ but it has not been considered a sufficient ground for quashing that the defendant has not received a copy of the evidence or that the grand jury did not cause the stenographer to transcribe the testimony,⁸⁴ or that exhibits before the grand jury were not returned and filed with the indictment,⁸⁵ or that a witness before the grand jury did not sign the minutes of his testimony.⁸⁶

[b] In State v. Barrington, 198 Mo. 23, 70, 95 S. W. 235, the court said the correct rules as to the application of this statute may thus be stated: "First—If there are no witnesses indorsed upon the indictment, then, upon motion, it should be quashed, unless the prosecuting attorney offers to supply such omission, then the defendant should have a reasonable time after such omission has been supplied to prepare his defense. Secondly—If the state should indorse some of the witnesses on the back of the indictment and then purposely refrain from indorsing the names of material witnesses on the back of the indictment, with the view of taking an undue advantage of the defendant, then the court would be warranted in promptly quashing the indictment or requiring the prosecuting attorney to supply such omission, and give the defendant a reasonable time in which to meet the testimony of such material witnesses."

[c] Evidence Should Be Material. In State v. Hasty, 121 Iowa 507, 96 N. W. 1115, the supreme court of Iowa held that this rule relative to setting aside the indictment for omission of the indorsement of the names of the witnesses is applicable only when the testimony of such witnesses is shown to be material. [b] Although the code may require that an indictment must be filed with the clerk, it will not be dismissed on motion because the name of the clerk was not endorsed on the back thereof, where the record shows that the indictment was returned into court and was ordered to be filed. Com. v. Stegala, 10 Ky. Opin. 428.

h. Defects in Form and in Manner of Charging.—General Rule. A motion to quash may be made where there is a defect apparent upon the face of the record, including defects in the form of the indictment or information or in the manner in which an offense is charged.⁹⁶

Misnomer or Insufficient Description.—A misnomer or insufficient description of the defendant has been successfully attacked by a motion to quash,⁹⁷ though such a defect has generally been taken advantage

[c] It is not good ground for quashing an indictment that it does not affirmatively appear that it was presented to the court by the foreman of the grand jury in the presence of eleven members of the grand jury as required by statute. Williams v. State, 150 Ala. 84, 43 So. 182.

[a] "The doctrine of the English books is, that by the common law the court may in discretion, quash an indictment for such insufficiency, as will make any judgment whatsoever, given upon any part of it against the defendants, erroneous. Hawk. P. C., bk. 2, c. 25, §146; 1 Chit. Cr. Law; Archb. Cr. Pl., p. 64, §8; Bac. Abr. Indict K; Com. Dig. (Day's Ed.) Indict. H and notes. The American authorities recognize the principle fully." United States v. O'Sullivan, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 15,974. See also State v. Wishon, 15 Mo. 504; State v. Robinson, 29 N. H. 274.

[b] Charge in Alternative.—An indictment or presentment for cohabitation of a white person with a negro, charging in the alternative, that "J. R. was a negro, mulatto, or person of mixed blood," is bad and a motion to quash it, should be sustained. Roberson v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 266.

[c] But a charge that petit larceny was "feloniously" committed does not make the indictment subject to a motion to quash. State v. Joiner, 19 Mo. 224.

[d] An objection that a certain fact appears by way of recital, and not by positive averment, goes to the manner of pleading the fact, and not to the fact itself, and therefore should be taken advantage of upon a motion to quash the indictment, before trial. Townsend v. People, 4 Ill. 326.

[e] That a count in the indictment did not conclude "against the peace and dignity of the State of Arkansas," is sufficient ground upon which to quash that count. This defect in the count is not cured by the fact that the last count has the proper conclusion. State v. Cadle, 19 Ark. 613-622.

[f] Omission of Residence.—Although the form of the indictment prescribed in the statute, contains an averment of residence of the defendant, the omission of such averment in an indictment will not be ground for quashing the indictment, where it conforms in all other particulars with the prescribed form, and the offense is plainly described in the language of the statute. Tarver v. State, 123 Ga. 494, 51 S. E. 501.

97. State v. McGregor, 41 N. H. 407.

Impossible Date. — An indictment charging that the defendant committed the offense on an impossible date may be attacked in some jurisdictions by a motion to quash.⁶⁹

No Offense Stated. — In some states the defendant may move to quash the indictment, information or affidavit when the facts stated therein do not constitute a public offense.¹

Uncertainty. — A motion to quash is under some statutes and rules of procedure the proper method of raising the objection that the indictment or information does not state the offense with sufficient certainty.²

(Mass.) 111, 214, the court said that a motion to quash because the indictment sets forth no sufficient charge of any criminal offense "should not be allowed to prevail in a doubtful case, but only when the insufficiency of the indictment is as palpable as clearly to admit the presiding judge that a verdiet thereon would not authorize a judgment against the defendant." Quoted with approval in People v. Nash, 1 Idaho 206.

[b] And in Shafer v. State, 74 Ind. 90, it was held that a motion to quash is not the proper method of objecting that in an indictment for larceny the property charged to have been stolen is inaccurately described, where the objection is not applicable to all the property named, the court holding further that "the proper way to have saved the question was to have objected to the admission of any evidence" concerning the property improperly described.

[c] It is not a ground for quashing the indictment that the description of the money taken was included with the description of many pieces of

Duplicity. — The rule in criminal cases is that duplicity in an indictment or information is ground for quashal;³ but it has been held that the motion to quash should not be sustained where the prosecuting attorney has elected to try the defendant on a single charge,⁴ nor when the several counts are merely statements of the same transaction varied to meet the different phases of proof.⁵

[a] "If the indictment contains different counts which are in fact for separate and distinct offenses, and this fact appears on the opening of the cause, or at any time before the jury are sworn for the trial thereof, the court may quash the same, lest it may confound the prisoner in his defense, or prejudice his challenges of the jury; and in such case, if the defect is discovered after the jury is sworn and before the verdict is found, the court may require the prosecutor to make his election on which charge he will proceed." State v. Smith, 24 W. Va. 814; State v. Shores, 31 W. Va. 491, 7 S. E. 413, 13 Am. St. Rep. 875.

(2) In State v. Wickey, 54 Ind. 438, the court said that this rule did not apply to indictments for misdemeanors and the court in State v. Cummins, 78 Ind. 251, which was a misdemeanor case, made the statement that "Duplicity does not afford cause for quashing an affidavit or indictment," and cited the Wickey case as authority for the statement. Shafer v. State, 26 Ind. 191, also held the rule inapplicable to misdemeanors. (3) But in Knopf v. State, 84 Ind. 316, the cases were reviewed and these statements in both the Wickey and Cummins cases were declared to be mere dicta.

[c] In Ohio.—A motion to quash is not the proper remedy of defendant where the indictment charged separate and distinct offenses. He should make a motion to require the state to elect upon which count it would proceed. Myers v. State, 4 Ohio C. C. 570, 2 Ohio C. D. 712.

[a] "If the different counts in an indictment for murder purporting to be for separate and distinct offenses, are inserted in good faith for the purpose of meeting a single charge, the court will neither quash the indictment nor compel the prosecutor to elect upon which count he will proceed to trial." State v. Smith, 24 W. Va. 814; State

Variance Between Indictment and Complaint.—A motion to quash is not the proper mode of objecting on the ground that the offense charged in the indictment or information differs from that named in the complaint upon which the accused was held to answer.⁶

Variance between the information and the affidavit upon which it is based is ground for quashal.⁷

Misjoinder.—According to some authorities a motion to quash is not the proper method of objecting to a joinder of counts which may embarrass the defendant in his defense;⁸ but the general rule is that a motion to quash on this ground is permissible,⁹ as it is also upon the ground of misjoinder of defendants.¹⁰

Signature and Verification of Information.—An information may be set aside on motion when it is not subscribed by an authorized person, or when it is not verified.¹¹

i. Defects in List of Grand Jurors.—The misspelling of the name of one of the grand jurors in the list served on the defendant will not support a motion to quash.¹³

j. Another Accusation Pending.—It has been held that in the absence of statute so declaring it is not a ground for setting aside an indictment or information that there is another accusation pending in the same court against the same defendant for the same offense,¹⁴ but the rule in some jurisdictions is for the court to quash the prior accusation in such a case.¹⁵

[a] In United States v. Maloney, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,713a, the court said: "I find that where a prisoner has been already arraigned and has pleaded, and a second indictment is found for the same offense, the court will adopt some measure to get rid of the first indictment by quashing it or requiring a nolle pros. to be entered before requiring a plea to the second. There is a good reason for this course. If the prisoner should be tried on the indictment secondly found, and acquitted or convicted, and the public prosecutor should then proceed to put him upon his trial upon the indictment first found, the prisoner, having already put in his plea of not guilty, might have some difficulty in availing himself of the former acquittal or conviction as a bar to the further prosecution of the indictment first found." But this rule is not applicable where the prisoner has not been arraigned and has not pleaded to the first indictment.

16. In United States v. Taylor, 4 Cranch C. C. 731, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,438, an indictment for playing cards at a public place was quashed on the ground that the only mode of recovery of the penalty prescribed by the statute was by a conviction before a justice of the peace.

n. Where Charge Shows Justification or Bar.—(I.) Generally. Under some statutes a motion to quash will properly lie where the indictment or affidavit contains any matter, which, if true, would constitute a legal justification of the offense charged, or other legal bar to the prosecution.²⁰

(II.) Bar by Statute of Limitations.—Under some authorities, an indictment which shows that the statute of limitations has run against the offense charged, is subject to a motion to quash,²¹ though a contrary rule has been held.²²

23. Failure of Record To Show That Grand Jury Was Impaneled.—Young v. State, 23 Ohio St. 578.

[a] But in State v. Thomas, 61 Ohio St. 444, 56 N. E. 276, 47 L. R. A. 156, the indictment was objected to on the ground that the record failed to show that the grand jury was selected and drawn as required by law and the court said: "Properly speaking, the record of a criminal case, where the offense is an indictable one, except when the accused is bound over to await the action of the grand jury, commences with the return of the indictment. While the preliminary steps in the formation of the grand jury are proper matters of record, they concern the public rather than the accused, if the body that returns the indictment is composed of men possessing the necessary qualifications; and defects in the record of those steps are not those contemplated by section 7249 of the Revised Statutes, for which a motion to quash an indictment may be made."

[b] Failure To Show Swearing of Grand Jury.—Hardy v. State, 96 Miss. 844, 51 So. 460.

24. A failure of the order book or record to show that the indictment on which defendant was convicted was endorsed "a true bill," cannot be questioned on a motion to quash an indictment. Hoffman v. State, 176 Ind. 284, 95 N. E. 1002; Beard v. State, 57 Ind. 8.

[a] Neglect of Clerk Will Not Nullify Act of Grand Jury.—An indictment will not be quashed because of an omission by the clerk to place on the minutes of the court, an entry showing

3. Motion.—a. Necessity for.—When the trial court is of the opinion that it has no jurisdiction of the offense charged,²⁵ or where there has been a misjoinder of counts and a failure or refusal to elect on which count a conviction would be claimed,²⁶ the court may of its own motion quash the indictment. And the failure of the accusation to state an offense may be questioned on appeal though no objection on such ground was made below.²⁷

b. To What Court Addressed.—The motion to quash and strike from the files must be addressed to the court upon whose records or into whose files the paper has been introduced without warrant of law.²⁸

c. Form and Requisites, Written or Oral.—Generally the rule is that a motion to quash or set aside should be in writing,²⁹ subscribed by the defendant or his attorney;³⁰ but it has been held that if the indictment or accusation is so defective that a judgment upon it would be arrested it may be quashed on oral motion.³¹

Particularity Required.—The motion should specially and particularly state the grounds³² upon which the indictment or information should that the indictment was presented when a quorum of the grand jury was present. Serrato v. State (Tex. Crim.), 171 S. W. 1133.

be quashed or set aside, and should be addressed to the defective count only.³³

d. Time for Motion.—The court will not hear a motion to quash before the indictment is found,³⁴ nor until the defendant has been taken into custody.³⁵ The particular time at which the motion should be made is not the same in all jurisdictions, being either before arraignment or plea to the merits,³⁶ or at time of arraignment unless for good

[a] If the defendant does no more than "move to quash the indictment herein," without at the same time stating, at least generally, one of the legal grounds for quashing or setting aside the indictment, the action of the court in overruling the motion cannot be successfully questioned. Scott v. State, 176 Ind. 382, 96 N. E. 125.

[b] The reason for this general rule is that the prosecuting attorney, being apprised of the particular defect may remedy it by having a new bill found. State v. Risley, 72 Mo. 609.

[c] In the absence of a statute requiring the motion to point out the specific grounds of objection, it need not be done. Dyer v. State, 85 Ind. 525; Davis v. State, 69 Ind. 130.

[d] The following statements have been held insufficient: "that no offense is fully, plainly and formally set up in said indictment;" "that no statute of offense is set forth herein;" and "that all the facts which constitute the offense intended to be punished are not properly alleged and set forth." Com. v. Murray, 135 Mass. 530.

[e] A motion to quash "because said indictment is wholly insufficient, in law, to require this defendant to plead thereto" is not sufficient as an objection that the indictment was found by a grand jury not legally assembled. Englenfield v. People, 191 Ill. 272, 61 N. E. 93.

[f] "Because there is no offense charged in the indictment," held sufficient. State v. Belew, 79 Mo. 581; State v. Woods, 77 Mo. 496, overruling State v. Poston, 63 Mo. 521; State v. Barry, 62 Mo. 335; State v. Van Houten, 37 Mo. 357.

[g] A motion to quash on the ground that the information was "not verified and indorsed as required" by a certain section of the statutes is sufficiently distinct. State v. Brown, 163 Mo. App. 30, 115 S. W. 1180.

Waiver of defects and objections is treated in a subsequent section.⁴¹

Ignorance of the facts relied on in such motion, is no excuse for delay without a showing that reasonable diligence was exercised to sooner ascertain the facts.⁴²

Formal Defects in Complaint.—Objections to formal defects in a complaint must be taken before judgment by the magistrate to whom the complaint was made.⁴³

Withdrawal of Plea.—Where the defendant is permitted to withdraw his plea he may move to quash or strike out without such motion being subject to the objection that it is made too late.⁴⁴

Discretion of Court.—Notwithstanding the general rule, the court may in its discretion entertain a motion to quash though not filed in time, for the purpose of economizing time and settling questions which might later be raised by motion in arrest.⁴⁵

e. Necessity for Answer.—It is not necessary that the state's counsel make a written answer to a motion to quash the indictment, either admitting or denying the allegations thereof.⁴⁶

[a] Allegations in a motion to quash which set up facts de hors the record do not prove themselves, and if the pleader desires the court to consider those questions he should offer proof of those allegations. In the absence of such proof they are not before the court for consideration. State v. Ramsauer, 140 Mo. App. 401, 124 S. W. 67.

[b] Where a motion to quash an indictment was made upon the ground that the indictment had been materially changed by alterations and interlineations, but the defendant refused to introduce any evidence or witnesses in support of his motion, the court properly overruled the motion. Rahn v. State, 30 Tex. App. 310, 17 S. W. 416.

the motions,⁵² for where there is no showing to the contrary it will be presumed that the statutory conditions precedent to the filing of an information have been complied with,⁵³ and that the charge was based upon legal and sufficient evidence.⁵⁴

Where the defendant offers to introduce testimony in support of his motion the court should not overrule the motion without hearing the evidence.⁵⁵ Proof may be made by means of affidavits,⁵⁶ but the affidavit of the accused on information and belief is not sufficient.⁵⁷ Additional time to procure evidence will not be granted except upon a proper showing.⁵⁸

Averments Taken as True. — For the purposes of the motion the court must take the facts as stated in the indictment to be true,⁵⁹ but since an indictment or information must allege every fact essential to the existence of the offense charged, no presumptions are indulged in their support when challenged by motion to quash.⁶⁰

[a] On a motion by the defendant to set aside an information on the ground that the defendant has not been legally committed, it is certainly incumbent upon the moving party to establish his contention. [a] But where objection is first made on appeal the indictment will be construed more liberally than where objection is made before trial. State v. Kruger, 34 Nev. 302, 122 Pac. 483.

Proof That Indictment Found Without Legal Evidence.—Proof of the fact that the indictment was found by the grand jury without any evidence may according to some decisions be made by the testimony of the prosecuting attorney,⁶¹ but it seems that it cannot be made by a member of the grand jury,⁶² though there is authority to the contrary.⁶³

Indictments Not Concurred in by Requisite Number.—The return of an indictment endorsed a true bill by the grand jury gives rise to a presumption that the requisite number of jurors concurred in the finding.⁶⁴

According to the weight of authority it is not permissible to show by the testimony of some of the grand jurors that twelve of the grand jury did not concur in the finding.⁶⁵ But where it is a ground for motion to quash, the fact that the requisite number of jurors did not concur in the finding may be shown by other witnesses,⁶⁶ and in some states the grand jurors themselves are competent to prove this fact.⁶⁷

63. discretion of the court, and hence a refusal to quash it is not generally assignable as error.⁷⁰

A motion to quash should not be sustained except in the clearest cases and unless the indictment or information is bad beyond a reasonable doubt,⁷¹ but if the indictment or information is so palpably defective that no judgment could be rendered on it after conviction it is the duty of the court to sustain the motion.⁷²

If the motion is granted, the court must order that the defendant, if in custody, be discharged; or, if admitted to bail, that his bail be exonerated; or if he has deposited money instead of bail, that the same be refunded to him; unless it directs that the case be resubmitted to the same or another grand jury, or that an information be filed by the prosecuting attorney.⁷³

[b] Where an information is bad as charging two offenses in one count it is discretionary with the circuit court to quash it instead of compelling the prosecuting attorney to elect upon which of the offenses the trial should proceed. Chase v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 148 Mich. 149, 111 N. W. 750, 14 Det. Leg. N. 73.

[a] Reason for the Rule.—“This rule has been adopted in view of the fact that nearly all questions involving the sufficiency of the indictment may be available to the defendant, if a conviction follows, on a motion in arrest of judgment.” United States v. Dustin, 2 Bond 332, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,011.

[b] In State v. Skidmore, 109 N. C.

795, 14 S. E. 63, the court says that the courts do not favor quashing indictments, and that indictments for treason, felony and the higher misdemeanors will not be quashed except where it appears that the court has not jurisdiction, or the matter charged is not indictable in any form. The reason is that to quash in such cases would release recognizances and cause delays, and that it would be trifling with public justice to quash for verbal defects in grave cases in which the public have an interest, when the irregularity or deficiency could be cured in a few moments and without postponing the trial to another term, by sending the witnesses before the grand jury with a more accurately drawn bill. Some statutes merely provide that when a motion to quash is adjudged in favor of the accused he may be committed or held to bail in such sum as the court requires for his appearance at the first day of the next term of such court.⁷⁴

[a] In State v. Woodward, 21 Mo. 265, the court remarked: "We are aware of the old practice, and the old cases mentioned in the books, that an indictment is an entire thing, and that to quash or strike out one count, destroys the whole; but the practice has never prevailed in this state."

[b] Retaining Explanatory Counts. But where an indictment contained counts charging bribery, followed by a count charging extortion, and the latter count contained a reference to the preceding counts which, if permitted to be employed, rendered it sufficient, and upon the trial the may be sustained unless a nolle prosequi is entered as to it.⁷⁸

Where the indictment contains a single count only, a material portion cannot be quashed, but the motion should be directed against the entire indictment.⁷⁹

Quashal as to one defendant does not necessarily result in quashal as to other joint defendants,⁸⁰ especially where the latter have waived the right to raise the objection;⁸¹ though the court may quash an indictment as to all the defendants on the motion of one of them where it is bad as to all of them.⁸²

If the motion is denied the defendant must immediately answer the indictment or information either by demurring or pleading thereto.⁸³

4. New Trial.—A refusal to quash an indictment has been held to be no ground for granting a new trial.⁸⁴

5. Prohibition.—Since the denial of a motion to quash may be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment, a writ of prohibition will not lie to prevent a trial under the indictment.⁸⁵

6. Mandamus.—It has been held that mandamus is an appropriate remedy to secure the reversal of an order quashing an information.⁸⁶

7. Certiorari.—An order of the lower court quashing an indictment being of a discretionary nature is not the subject of review by writ of certiorari in the appellate court where it is not apparent that such judicial discretion has been abused.⁸⁷

prosecution elected to go to the jury upon the extortion count alone, but, with the consent of the defendant, the other counts were retained for the purpose of reference, and the trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury—the court had power, on a subsequent trial of the indictment, to refuse to strike out the bribery counts, and to retain such portion thereof as is necessary, to explain the reference in the count for extortion. *People v. [a] In People v. Kahn, 155 App. Div. 821, 140 N. Y. Supp. 618, the court in passing on this point said: "The confusion with respect to the practice and the right of a defendant in a criminal action to have a review of intermediate orders made to his alleged prejudice arises from a misconception of the holdings of the Court of Appeals in People v. Glen, 173 N. Y. 395, 66 N. E. 112; People v. Canepi, 181 id. 398, 74 N. E. 473, and People v. Sexton, 187 id. 495, 80 N. E. 396, 116 Am. St. Rep. 621. In each of those cases there was an appeal by the defendant from a judgment of conviction, and all that was held was that certain intermediate orders and rulings, notwithstanding the apparent restriction of section 313 of the Code of Crim. Proc., formed a part of the judgment roll, and were reviewable where a defendant had been convicted and appealed from the judgment entered thereon. In none of those cases was it held that a direct appeal could be had from such intermediate orders, but the only holding was that they were reviewable on an appeal from the judgment itself. Nor is there anything to the contrary in People ex rel. Hummel v. Trial Term, 184 N. Y. 30, 76 N. E. 732."

the court's discretion⁹⁰ it is not reviewable except to the extent that any discretionary order may be reviewed.⁹¹ A writ of error is only available to the person making the motion.⁹²

The state may appeal, in some jurisdictions, from an order sustaining a motion to quash an indictment or information,⁹³ but the appeal can-

These motions, and the rulings thereon cannot be detached from the cases themselves, and made the subject-matter of review by the supreme court, in the exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction."

[c] On appeal by bill of exceptions, or on motion for a new trial or on motion for arrest of judgment the order is not reviewable. People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533, 38 Am. Rep. 73.

Review of discretionary orders generally. See 2 STANDARD PROC. 149; and the title "Review."

[a] Rhode Island.—The effect of the court and practice act, §301, is to give a defendant the right to take exception to the decision of the court in overruling pleas, motions, and demurrers, for matters not jurisdictional. So that an exception will lie to a denial of a motion to quash. State v. Smith, 29 R. I. 513, 72 Atl. 710.

[b] In Pennsylvania "it is well settled that for error of law fairly deducible from the record, the quashing of an indictment may be reviewed and reversed on appeal, but the decision ought not to be overruled except for clear error or plain abuse of discretion." *Com. v. [a] Bail Pending Appellate Review. It is within the sound discretion of the court, where a motion to quash has not be allowed if after sustaining a motion to quash to one or more courts, one good count remains.⁹⁴

Record.—The record in the appellate court must be in such shape as to present a case entitling the appellant to a review of the order.⁹⁵ An exception to the ruling, where necessary, must appear in the record.⁹⁶ A bill of exceptions is necessary in some jurisdictions.⁹⁷ and therefore where the motion to quash is not a part of the record proper it must be embodied in the bill.⁹⁸ In some states, however, a bill of exceptions is unnecessary.⁹⁹

sometimes provided that upon the sustaining of the demurrer the defendant must be discharged and his bail exonerated, unless the court order the cause to be resubmitted to the same or another grand jury.⁷² In other states it is provided that if the demurrer is sustained because the indictment contains matter which is a legal defense or bar, the judgment is final and the defendant is discharged from any further prosecution for the offense.⁷³

(V.) Where Demurrer Overruled.—By the common law, upon the overruling of the demurrer to an indictment for felony, the judgment was respondeat ouster; but if the defendant demurred to an indictment for a misdemeanor and failed on the argument, he did not have judgment to answer over, but the decision operated as a conviction and the judgment was final.⁷⁴

But generally in this country if the demurrer is overruled the defendant has a right to plead to the indictment;⁷⁵ if he fails to do so

The state may appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer to an indictment or information,⁸¹ and this right is not affected by a direction of the court submitting the cause to another grand jury,⁸² but the appeal cannot be allowed if after sustaining a demurrer to one or more counts, one good count remains.⁸³

mode of objecting may be employed, however, where the objection goes to the jurisdiction of the court,⁸⁰ or, in some case, where it goes to the character of the evidence which should be admitted.⁹⁰

G. INSTRUCTIONS AND MOTIONS TO DIRECT VERDICT.—INSTRUCTIONS DURING TRIAL.—Although rarely done, it has been held that the objection to an indictment may be raised by instructions during the trial.⁹¹ A defect in an indictment cannot be taken advantage of by directing the jury to find a verdict of not guilty.⁹²

89. In State v. Mjelde, 29 Mont. 490, 75 Pac. 87, it was held that an objection to the introduction is a proper method of raising the objection of duplicity where such objection is addressed to the jurisdiction of the court rather than to the form of the accusation, as, for example, where an information for grand larceny is objected to on the ground that it joins several distinct offenses, each of which alone would constitute petit larceny.

90. Where the offense is charged to have been committed upon a day later than the date of the complaint, objection may be taken to evidence of an offense committed after the filing of the complaint. State v. Ryan, 68 Conn. 512, 37 Atl. 377; State v. Wolfarth, 42 Conn. 155.

[a] Where certain property alleged to have been stolen has been properly described and other portions improperly described the proper procedure is to object to any evidence concerning the property improperly described. Shafer v. State, 74 Ind. 90.

[b] Where the indictment contains a surplus statement or averment, the objection may be raised by a motion to exclude testimony in support of such an averment. Thornton v. Com., 113 Va. 736, 73 S. E. 481.

91. In United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 460, 6 L. ed. 693, the court says: "Undoubtedly, according to the regular course of practice, objections to the form and sufficiency of an indictment ought to be discussed upon a motion to quash the indictment, which may be granted or refused in the discretion of the court, or upon demurrers to the indictment, or upon a motion in arrest of judgment, which are matters of right. The defendant has no right to insist that such objections should be discussed or decided during the trial of the facts by the jury. It would be very inconvenient and embarrassing to allow a discussion of such topics during the progress of the cause before the jury, and introduce much confusion into the administration of public justice. But, we think, it is not wholly incompetent for the court to entertain such questions during the trial in the exercise of a sound discretion. It should, however, be rarely done, and only under circumstances of an extraordinary nature."

[a] Surplus Averments Reached by Instruction to Jury.—One of the methods by which surplus statements or averments in an indictment may be reached is by requesting an instruction to the jury to disregard the averment and all evidence in support of it. Thornton v. Com., 113 Va. 736, 73 S. E. 481.

92. Wood v. State, 46 Ga. 322; State v. Beach, 147 Ind. 74, 43 N. E. 946, 46 N. E. 145, 36 L. R. A. 179.

[a] In Cohen v. State, 7 Ga. App. 5, 65 S. E. 1096, the defendant made a futile attempt in this manner to raise the objection that the statute upon which the accusation was founded was unconstitutional.

[b] Motion To Direct a Verdict.—A motion to direct a verdict in a state case cannot be made to take the place of a motion to quash, or used to test the sufficiency of an indictment. State v. Cameron, 176 Ind. 385, 96 N. E.

II. MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL.—A motion for a new trial presupposes a valid indictment and it cannot be properly based upon any objection to the sufficiency or validity of the indictment or errors in the proceedings upon the indictment prior to an issue of fact joined by plea to the indictment.⁹³

I. MOTION IN ARREST OF JUDGMENT.—The treatment of matters relative to motions in arrest of judgment will be found elsewhere.⁹⁴

J. BILL OF PARTICULARS.—In some jurisdictions it has been held that where the indictment is so vague, indefinite or indistinct as to mislead the accused and embarrass him in the preparation of his defense, the defendant may protect himself against defects in the form of the indictment by demanding a bill of particulars of the matters omitted.⁹⁵

K. HABEAS CORPUS.—Since the writ of habeas corpus will not issue unless the indictment is so defective that the proceedings are void, or the court under whose warrant the petitioner is held is without jurisdiction, and cannot be used merely to correct errors, it follows that neither the sufficiency of the information or indictment nor the sufficiency of the evidence before the grand jury can be attacked by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.⁹⁶

XV. WAIVER.—A. IN GENERAL.—1. By Failure To Make Timely Objection.—The general rule is that where an objection is not made at the time prescribed by law, the ground of objection is waived.⁹⁷ The rule that objections not made in the lower court will found the indictment was without jurisdiction to act.³

B. WAIVER OF PARTICULAR GROUNDS OF OBJECTION. — 1. By Pleading to the Merits. — a. Generally. — By entering a plea of not guilty a defendant waives his right to demur;⁴ or make a motion to quash or set aside⁵ or plead in abatement.⁶

Where the cause on appeal is remanded for a new trial it is ordinarily too late to move to quash the indictment.⁷

In Case of Joinder. — The foregoing general rules as to waiver would, of course, have no application where there was a proper joinder of a plea with a demurrer or motion.⁸

b. Admission of Genuineness. — The general rule is that the defendant by pleading and going to trial on an information or indictment admits its genuineness as a record.⁹

c. Objections as to Preliminary Examination or Commitment. — By failing, before pleading to the merits, to raise the objection that he had no preliminary hearing,¹⁰ or that the law had not been complied

[a] Where the accused is prosecuted for a third offense, the objection that the information did not charge the offense as a third offense and did not state whether there had been a conviction for the prior offenses may be raised after pleading to the information. People v. Buck, 109 Mich. 687, 67 N. W. 982.

[b] Locus of Offense Not Stated. An objection that the information does not show the offense to have been committed in a county within the state, nor within the state, is in the nature of an objection that the court has no jurisdiction and also that the facts stated do not constitute a public offense under the laws of the state and is not waived by failure to demur. *People v. awarded was allowed to move to quash on the ground the record failed to show due presentment of the indictment, although no previous mention of the defect was made.

[a] Reason for the Rule.—In State v. Collyer, 17 Nev. 275, 30 Pac. 891, the court says: "A party ought not to be permitted, after taking his chances of a trial, to take advantage of any irregularity in the selection of a grand jury, of which he had knowledge before his plea of not guilty was entered. By pleading to the indictment it will be considered that he consented to the irregularity, and thereby waived his right to make any objection to the method of selecting or impaneling the jury."

[b] Even though an unconstitutional law, or one assumed to be unconstitutional, has been followed in making the organization of the grand jury,¹³ but the rule is not applicable where the whole proceeding of forming the panel is void, as where the jury is not a jury of the court or term in which the indictment is found;¹⁴ or where the jury has been selected by persons having no authority whatever to select them;¹⁵ or where they have not been sworn.¹⁶

c. Irregularities in Proceedings of Grand Jury.—Any mere irregularities in the proceedings of the grand jury will be waived by pleading to the merits.¹⁷

f. Insufficiency as to Matters of Form.—(I.) In General.—If the accused wishes to take advantage of any defects or imperfections as to matters of the form of the indictment or information which do not tend to prejudice his substantial rights, he must do so before pleading to the merits, or such defects are deemed to have been waived.¹⁸ the panel. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 3 Sup. Ct. 1, 27 L. ed. 857.

[a] The objection that the minutes do not affirmatively show that the foreman of the grand jury was duly appointed and sworn comes too late after the jury is sworn. State v. Owens, 130 La. 746, 58 So. 557.

14. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 3 Sup. Ct. 1, 27 L. ed. 857.

But in Mississippi under the Code of 1906, §1413, it is held that an objection to an indictment based on the ground that the grand jury was not sworn is not well taken, when first raised after conviction on motion in arrest of judgment. Hays v. State, 96 Miss. 153, 50 So. 557. Compare Hardy v. State, 96 Miss. 844, 51 So. 460, where motion to quash was made without objection.

[a] Lack of Knowledge by Accused.—No exception to this rule arises upon proof that an indictment was found upon insufficient evidence and that the accused did not know, and had no means of ascertaining this fact until after the trial. Latourette v. State, 91 Ark. 65, 120 S. W. 411.

[a] Reason for the Rule.—In State v. Brown, 163 Mo. App. 30, 145 S. W. 1189, the court said: "The obvious purpose of the statutory requirement that the names of the witnesses for the prosecution be indorsed on the information is to enable the defendant to prepare his defense." And if the defendants announce themselves as ready for trial before securing a ruling on their motion to quash the information, they must be held to have waived any objections they might have had to the trial court's action in forcing them to trial.

h. Want of Authority To File Information.—By failing to demur or move to quash an information before pleading not guilty defendant waives the objection that the prosecuting attorney had no authority to file the information because of the fact that the grand jury was in session.³¹

i. Failure To Deliver Copy to Accused.—Failure to deliver to the defendant a copy of the indictment is waived by going to trial.³²

j. Waiver of Objections Made.—Objections which have been properly made are not ordinarily waived by thereafter pleading and going to trial.³³ But objections which have not been disposed of may be waived by such conduct of the defendant.³⁴

2. Waiver by Demurrer.—By demurring generally to an indictment or information for a defect which should have been taken advantage of by a special demurrer, the accused waives such defect,³⁵

[a] Where the indictment charged in one count that the assault was made on a certain person, and in the other count that it was made on two other persons, but it was shown that the assault was one continuous transaction, the state was not required to elect on which count of the indictment it would proceed. Davidson v. State, 5 Ala. App. 106, 59 So. 687.

[b] Where the motion to elect is made before trial it is properly refused, but if made at the close of the state's case the matter rests in the discretion of the court. People v. Kellogg, 105 App. Div. 505, 94 N. Y. Supp. 617.

58. In Keeler v. State, 15 Tex. App. 111, the court said: "We will not discuss at this time just what offenses can be charged by different counts in the same bill. The following can not only be charged in the same indictment, but the state cannot be forced to elect upon which count defendant will be tried. In an indictment for the theft of a certain piece of property, counts for swindling, embezzlement, receiving, and, if an animal, altering mark or brand, branding the horse, mule, ass, cattle, etc., without consent and with intent to defraud. Under an indictment for burglarly, a count for the intended offense may be inserted unless murder or rape be the intended felony, and one or the other of these offenses be actually committed. In this state of the case, we advise that the party be indicted for the murder or the rape, omitting all mention of the burglarly. In forgery, counts for uttering or attempting to utter and pass the forged document, may be inserted. This short enumeration is not to be understood as embracing all of the offenses which may be charged by different counts in the same indictment; but that which we wish to call special attention to is, that the state cannot be compelled to elect upon which count the defendant shall be tried in the cases above enumerated."

[b] In a prosecution for rape, though the indictment charge different acts on different dates in the several counts, election will not be compelled where nothing appears on the face of the indictment to indicate that the different counts were not introduced solely for the purpose of meeting the evivictim of an assault or a homicide may be given different names in different counts,² and it is proper to allege the ownership of the property which is the subject of the crime in several different persons, in order to meet any uncertainty in the evidence.³ But after the evidence is in, the court should require the state to elect upon which count a conviction will be asked, or submit the case to the jury upon instructions authorizing a conviction under either count, as they find the facts to be, but not upon both,⁴ though the defendant cannot complain of a failure so to do where he is convicted upon only one count.⁵

state to elect as between different means set out in several counts by which it is alleged the crime was committed, the matter resting in the discretion of the trial court.⁷

d. Charging Defendant as Principal and Accessory.—Where the defendant is charged in different counts with having committed the crime as principal and as accessory, in those states where by statute it is provided that one guilty as an accessory is to be regarded as a principal, the matter of requiring an election as to which count the prosecution will rely upon is addressed to the discretion of the court,⁸ and it is held generally that between counts charging liability as principal and accessory before the fact,⁹ accessory before the fact and accessory after the fact,¹⁰ or as principal in the first degree and as principal in the second degree,¹¹ an election will not be required, since the two counts but charge the same offense in different modes.¹² Where, however, under the statute one charged as a principal cannot be convicted as an accomplice, and vice versa, an election should be required between counts charging liability as a principal and as an accomplice.¹³

e. Time When Election Will Be Required.—The court will not require an election, where the counts relate to the same transaction, at the opening of the trial,¹⁴ or after the opening statement on behalf of the state.¹⁵ Thus the election need not be made before the introduction of evidence,¹⁶ and it is sufficient if it be made at the close of the evi-to be drawn in a fictitious name, may be joined in the same bill of indictment, all the offenses being felonies and of the same nature according to the code. [a] In Mayo v. State, 30 Ala. 32, after citing many authorities the court says: "The principle to be extracted from these authorities is, that the court should always interpose either by quashing the instrument, or by compelling an election, where an attempt is made as manifested by either the indictment or the evidence, to convict the accused of two or more offenses growing out of distinct and separate transactions."

[b] Distinct larcenies cannot be joined in the same indictment. State v. Jourdan, 32 Ark. 203. But Com. v. Sullivan, 104 Mass. 552, permits it to be done and holds that the matter rests entirely in the discretion of the court.

[a] United States compiled statutes (Rev. St. [1901], §1024), 1913, §1690, provides: "When there are several charges against any person for the same act, or transaction, or for two or more acts or transactions connected together, or for two or more acts or transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses, which may be properly joined instead of having several indictments the whole may be joined in one indictment in separate counts; and if two or more indictments are found in such cases, the court may order them to be consolidated."

[b] In Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 14 Sup. Ct. 410, 38 L. ed. 208, the court sustained an indictment charging in different counts the defendant with the commission of two murders, "distinct crimes, the victims being different persons, during the course of its opinion the court said: "While recognizing as fundamental the principle that the court must not permit the defendant to be embarrassed in his defense by a multiplicity of charges embraced in one indictment and to be tried by one jury, and while conceding that regularly or usually an indictment should not include more than one felony, the authorities concur in holding that a joinder in one indictment, in separate counts, of different felonies, at least of the same class or grade, and subject to the same punishment, is not necessarily fatal to the indictment upon demurrer or upon motion to quash or on motion in arrest of judgment, and does not, in every case, by reason alone of such joinder, make it the duty of the court, upon motion of the accused, to compel the prosecutor to elect upon what one of the charges he will go to trial. The court is invested with such discretion as enables it to do justice between the government and the accused. If it be discovered at ing upon the circumstances of the particular case and requiring the exercise of a considerable degree of discretion by the trial judge.²² It has been stated that if in reviewing the record the court can see no prejudice resulting to the defendant, a reversal will not be had although it is bad practice not to compel an election where distinct felonies are charged in different counts.²⁴

In misdemeanors the prosecutor may join several distinct offenses in different counts of the same indictment and try them at the same time no election being required,²⁵ though not if the number of counts is so any time during a trial that the substantial rights of the accused may be prejudiced by a submission to the same jury of more than one distinct charge of felony upon two or more of the same class, the court, according to the established principles of criminal law, can compel an election by the prosecutor. . . . In the present case, we cannot say from anything on the face of the indictment that the court erred or abused its discretion. . . . The indictment showed that the two murders were committed on the same day, in the same county and district, and with the same kind of an instrument. These facts alone justified the court in forbearing, at the beginning of the trial, and before the facts were disclosed, to compel an election by the prosecutor between the two charges of murder. When, however, the evidence was concluded—indeed, as soon as the defendant testified in his own behalf—the wisdom of the course pursued by the court became manifest; for it appeared that the two murders were committed at the same place, on the same occasion, and under such circumstances, that the proof in respect to one necessarily threw light upon the other. . . . It is, therefore, clear that the accused was not confounded in his defense by the union of the two offenses of murder in the same indictment, and that his substantial rights were not prejudiced by the refusal of the court to compel the prosecutor to elect.”

[c] In United States v. Bickford, 4 Blatchf. 337, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,591, an indictment contained over one hundred counts each charging a distinct felony, transmitting false papers to the pension office in support of applications for bounty land; a few days before trial prosecutor gave notice that testimony would be offered on only twenty different counts. On trial the court refused to require a further election.

[d] There is no impropriety in trying a prisoner for different offenses at the same time, if the offenses are charged in the same indictment, and are of the same grade, and subject to the same punishment. People v. Gates, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 311; People v. Rynders, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 425.

Motion to quash the indictment or certain counts thereof for misjoinder, is equivalent to compelling an election,³² and is the proper remedy where it appears on the face of the indictment or on the opening of the case that two or more distinct and separate offenses are charged.³³

(II.) Necessity for.—Though the counts charge separate and distinct offenses the defendant may be lawfully tried therefor unless he make seasonable objections thereto,³⁴ though it has been held that in such case the court should require an election without motion.³⁵ Failure to require an election is not ground for the arrest of judgment.³⁶

(III.) Time for Motion.—The motion to compel an election comes too late in some states, when not made until after plea and after all the evidence is in,³⁷ as the motion should be made before plea.³⁸ Though, in some jurisdictions, if the objection is not made until after plea it lies in the discretion of the court whether to compel the state to elect and the ruling of the court is not ground of error.³⁹ And it has been held that the motion to require the state to elect may be made at any time during the trial.⁴⁰

c. Time for Election.—Where a party is charged with different felonies in one indictment he can, as a matter of right, demand that an election be made by the state before trial,⁴¹ so if it appear from the indictment that distinct and separate offenses are charged, election may be made on its reading to the jury,⁴² or if it appear from the evidence, election should be made when that shows the existence of different transactions and different offenses.⁴³ In some cases it seems the court in its discretion need not require the state to elect until after the close of the evidence for the state,⁴⁴ though the election should in all cases be made not merely before the case goes to the jury, but before the prisoner is called upon for his defense.⁴⁵

d. Sufficiency of Election.—The election by the state should clearly designate the count under which a conviction is sought.⁴⁶ Where the court in its instructions restricts the consideration of the jury to a particular count or counts, it is equivalent to an election on the part of the state to rely on such count or counts.⁴⁷

41. Com. v. Manson, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 31.

[a] In Burges v. State, 81 Miss. 482, 33 So. 499, the accused, after the jury was impeached, moved the court to require an election, which motion was denied. The evidence both for the state and defense was introduced, after which the state made its election. The court in reviewing the case held that it was error not to require the election before any evidence was introduced for the state.

[a] Where the indictment while containing several counts on its face shows that the transaction is not severable, but the proof discloses that several distinct transactions are set out, on timely demand, the court should require an election. *Bass v. 44. Where an information contains two or more counts charging distinct and separate offenses of the same nature, the trial court may, in the exercise of a sound discretion, require the state to elect on which count it will rely for conviction, either before the commencement of the trial, or after the state has produced its evidence in chief and before the accused is required to make his defense. Blair v. State, 72 Neb. 501, 101 N. W. 17.

[a] Where the defendant was charged with several distinct embezzle-ments in different counts and a motion that the state be required to elect was made, the action of the trial court in withholding its ruling upon this motion until the close of the introduction of the state's testimony in chief, at which time the motion was sustained and the state required to elect, held not to be an abuse of discretion. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631, 65 N. W. 792.

State*, 46 Tex. Crim. 100, 79 S. W. 301; Moore v. State, 37 Tex. Crim. 552, 40 S. W. 287; Smith v. State, 34 Tex. Crim. 123, 29

There is no merit in the contention that the court failed to require an election where the state entered a nolle prosequi as to the first of two counts,⁴⁸ or offered proof of but one count.⁴⁹

c. Effect of Election. (I.) As a Cure for Misjoinder.—Where two distinct offenses are improperly charged, the misjoinder is cured by the election of the state to prosecute for only one offense.⁵⁰

(II.) On Second Trial.—Where the court on the first trial submits the case under a particular count, this is tantamount to an election to rely on that one and a dismissal of the other counts, and on a succeeding trial the case must be submitted under that same count.⁵¹

(III.) As an Abandonment of Other Counts.—An election to try on one count does not acquit the defendant of the other charges,⁵² though it obliterates from the indictment the charges not selected,⁵³ and is a practical abandonment of the other counts.⁵⁴ And it has been held that where the state elects to proceed on one count, it is equivalent to a verdict of not guilty on the others.⁵⁵

C. ELECTION BETWEEN DIFFERENT TRANSACTIONS DEVELOPED DURING TRIAL.—1. When Election Required.—Where the indictment for a felony permits proof of, and several distinct offenses are attempted to be proved, under a single count, an election must be made by the prosecution to stand on one particular offense⁵⁶ developed in the evi-

He was expected to meet one charge at a specified time, but was required to defend against and meet six different acts occurring during a period of fourteen months, upon one of which the jury was asked to convict. . . . No jury should be set to fishing or hunting for a charge which they are called upon to try. Such a course deprived the defendant of a fair trial, and compelled him, without warning, to defend against acts of which he had no notice." See also People v. Davis, 175 Mich. 594, 141 N. It is not necessary that an election be made when the parties announce themselves ready for trial,⁷¹ or immediately after the opening statement of the prosecution during which reference is made to each offense,⁷² or at the close of the testimony in chief of the prosecutrix.⁷³ So it is held that the election need not be made until after the close of the state's case,⁷⁴ but must be made before the defense opens.⁷⁵ Other courts hold that failure to make election until all of the state's evidence is in, is such a violation of the legal rights of the defendant as calls for a reversal.⁷⁶

[a] In Com. v. Coyne, 207 Mass. 21, 92 N. E. 1028, the court says: "The decisions without exception, while recognizing the right to compel an election, are not entirely in accord as to when the defendant must exercise it, but by our practice, and the great weight of authority, he should do so at the close of the government's evidence, and before being called upon to open his defense. *Com. v. 76. People v. Flaherty, 162 N. Y. 532, 57 N. E. 73.

[a] In cases of statutory rape where there is evidence that the accused has committed the crime on more than one occasion before the finding of the indictment, the state should be required to elect before the trial is begun which one of the several acts committed it will rely on to secure a conviction. Newsom v. Com., 145 Ky. 627, 140 S. W. 1042.

[b] Permitting the prosecution to

On a second trial where the first trial has shown several acts any one of which the state may rely upon for conviction, the state should on request of defendant, make its election at the beginning of the trial.⁷⁷

4. Election by Whom Made. — The state has the authority to elect upon which of several transactions it will predicate its prosecution; election is not made by the accused.⁷⁸

5. Sufficiency of Election. — a. In General. — The court may exercise some discretion with regard to the definiteness of the election;⁷⁹ however, the election must be sufficiently definite and certain to distinguish the particular transaction relied upon,⁸⁰ and a failure to make prove seven distinct acts of intercourse under an indictment charging defendant with the crime of sexual intercourse with a female not his wife, under the statutory age, on a date named, and authorizing it, after all its evidence from many witnesses has been concluded, to elect which one of the seven crimes attempted to be proved should be treated as the particular crime charged in the indictment, is such a violation of the legal rights of the accused as calls for a reversal. "We do not mean to say that a trial court should not, under any circumstances admit corroborative evidence in advance of evidence tending to prove the offense charged, but there was no excuse for taking that course in this case. The grievance of the defendant herein is founded on much broader lines than the mere order of procedure, and is that the court sustained the efforts of the district attorney to prevent him during seven days of the trial from finding out as to which one of the seven offenses testified to by the complainant he was indicted for and was to be tried for. This was done on the erroneous view of the law that the indictment covered not simply one offense, but each and every one of seven distinct offenses down to such time as the district attorney should be pleased to elect, or the court should compel him to choose, one offense for presentation to the jury, at which moment the other six offenses would cease to be covered by the indictment. This is a view for which we have been unable to find any support either in principle or authority." People v. Flaherty, 162 N. Y. 532, 57 N. E. 73.

80. State v. Collins, 8 Kan. App. 398, 57 Pac. 38; State v. Saxton, 2 Kan. App. 13, 41 Pac. 1113.

[a] Where the information contained two counts, one charging the commission of the offense on a certain date, and the other charging its commission between two dates, at the commencement of the trial the accused moved for an order requiring the state to elect upon which count it would claim a conviction. This motion was denied, but with liberty to renew it at the close of the case for the state. Before he closed its case, the state's attorney, in the absence of the jury, but in the presence of the court, stated that he elected to stand on the first count. The court did not then understand this statement to amount to an election, but it was so intended by the state's attorney, and understood by counsel for the defendant, and, at the close of the evidence of the state, the court, on hearing the stenographer's notes read, ruled that it constituted an election at the time it was made. Held, no abuse of discretion. State v. Sebastian, 81 Conn. 1, 69 Atl. 1054.

[b] Where after the formal election by the district attorney, the court said: "The act you select is the first act of sexual intercourse between these parties, and you claim it occurred in the latter part of January or the first part of February and prior to the 20th such election definite and certain is reversible error.⁸¹

b. Implied Election.—Where the evidence tends to show several distinct offenses yet the case is tried throughout on the theory that the state relies for conviction upon proof of a specific act on a specific date, the state is held to have voluntarily made its election.⁸² In the absence of a specific election the prosecution will be deemed to have elected by implication to rely upon the first alleged offense shown,⁸³ though some day of February." Held sufficient election. People v. Soto, 11 Cal. App. 431, 105 Pac. 420.

[c] In a prosecution for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors an election "upon a sale of intoxicating liquor by defendant to James Carson," is insufficient when from the evidence it appears that several sales were made to such person and of different kinds of liquors. *State v. [d] In a prosecution for statutory rape, where the prosecutor stated that he would rely upon an offense committed between the 19th day of January and the 26th day of January, 1909, and the evidence showed that the defendant and prosecutrix had occupied the same room between those dates, held that a sufficient election had been made, without the state specifying a specific act occurring on a specific date. State v. Biggs, 57 Wash. 514, 107 Pac. 374.

[a] "The term elect implies a knowledge of facts which go to make up two or more offenses. And while a solicitor may, by his own acts and questions, involuntarily effect an election; yet, to hold him to have elected to proceed for a certain offense, he must have learned enough to enable him to individualize the transaction, and then pursue his inquiry with a view of learning the details and particulars of the act or transaction thus individualized. To hold him to an election without going this far, would, in many cases, amount to a denial of justice." Jackson v. State, 95 Ala. 17, 10 So. 657.

courts decline to recognize this rule.⁸⁴ But the one offense must be identified, and the mere asking of preliminary questions will not amount to an election.⁸⁵

c. Election by Court.—Where the election may be deferred to the end of the trial, there is no error in overruling defendant's motion to require an election where the court in its instructions selects the act charged in the indictment as the only one the jury may consider,⁸⁶ or the court confines the consideration of the jury to one particular alleged offense.⁸⁷

6. Effect of Election.—a. Generally.—An election once made is binding throughout that trial and the prosecution will not be permitted to abandon an election once made and elect anew.⁸⁸

[e] Where evidence has been introduced for the purpose of proving, and tending directly to prove, an act of seduction at the time alleged in the information, the state will be deemed to have elected that date, and the jury will not be allowed to convict on evidence of an offense committed on a prior date. People v. Bressler, 131 Mich. 390, 91 N. W. 639.

[f] Where the prosecution examined the prosecutrix at length as to an offense committed on the date charged in the information and later upon discovery that at this date she was of the age of consent introduced evidence of intercourse several months before when she was not of age of consent, it was held that the state not having made an election of any prior or other offense must be held to have elected to stand on the offense occurring on the date charged in the information, and a conviction could only be had on that offense. State v. Hoben, 36 Utah 186, 102 Pac. 1000.

[g] Where the indictment charges the offense to have been committed on a given day and the prosecutor wishes to introduce evidence of its commission on another day, he should specify beforehand the day to which his proof will apply, otherwise, he will by introducing evidence referring the offense to one day be confined to that day. *State v. [a] When an election is made in writing at the close of the evidence upon the part of the state, it cannot modify such election after all the evidence is admitted. State v. Falk, 46 Kan. 498, 26 Pac. 1023.

[b] An election improperly made on motion of the defendant cannot be complained of by him. Memmler v. State, 75 Ga. 576.

b. On Subsequent Trial.—It has been held that an election once made holds through all future stages of the case, on the second trial as well as the first.⁸⁹ But there is authority to the contrary.⁹⁰

c. As Abandonment of Offenses Not Elected.—An election to stand upon a particular transaction does not bar the state on a subsequent prosecution from proving an offense which might have been proven on the first prosecution.⁹¹

Where an indictment charges but one substantive offense, an election to rely upon such offense is a nullity, and does not eliminate from the case any lesser offense necessarily included in such substantive offense.⁹²

7. Misdemeanors.—a. General Statement.—The doctrine of “election” does not apply with the same force to prosecutions for a misdemeanor as it does to felony indictments.⁹³

b. Under Several Counts.—While in a felony case an election will be required if separate and distinct offenses are disclosed by the testimony,⁹⁴ yet in a misdemeanor case separate and distinct offenses may be proved under different counts and no election will be required,⁹⁵ the matter resting in the discretion of the court.⁹⁶

c. Under a Single Count.—However, if the indictment contains but one count it is error not to require the state to elect upon which offense it will ask a conviction,⁹⁷ but if the charge be for a continuous offense an election is not necessary.⁹⁸ It is held that in case of a prosecution for illegal sale of liquor the defendant is entitled to have the state elect on which of several sales it will rely.⁹⁹

D. ELECTION BETWEEN DIFFERENT CHARGES IN THE SAME COUNT. Duplicity in an indictment may be taken advantage of by motion to compel an election on the part of the prosecutor;¹ if the duplicity is not apparent on the face of the indictment the motion to elect is properly denied,² unless the duplicity is later made apparent, when the defendant should ask and the court compel an election.³

Where the same count charges several offenses the fault is cured by the state electing to proceed upon one charge and entering a nolle prosequi as to the others.⁴ Where the count contains several violations of a statute alleged in the conjunctive an election will not be required.⁵

5. Schultz v. State, 135 Wis. 644, 114 N. W. 505, 116 N. W. 259, 571. See

Distinct ways of doing the same offense, not antagonistic to each other, may be set forth conjunctively in the same count and in such case there can be no election, but the prosecution proceeds on all the means alleged in the count.⁶

Where a single count sets out two separate and distinct transactions but alleges that it was the combined effect of these two transactions in co-operation which constituted the means or cause of the crime, an election as to which transaction the state will ask a conviction, will not be required, as in legal effect the count states but one transaction produced by two co-operating causes.⁷

E. ELECTION AS TO WHICH OF SEVERAL STATUTES THE STATE WILL PROCEED UNDER.—Where the indictment or information may be filed under one of several statutes the state cannot be required to elect and designate under which statute it will proceed,⁸ though the penalty prescribed in each may be different.⁹

An election made by the prosecutor in framing the indictment under a certain statute, is matter of which the defendant cannot complain.¹⁰

XVII. AIDER BY VERDICT.—A. GENERAL RULE.—1. Generally.—The rule that the verdict will cure defects of form as contradistinguished from those of substance¹¹ is based upon the proposition

City of Liberty v. Moran, 121 Mo. App. 682, 97 S. W. 948.

[a] Where the indictment charged that defendant "unlawfully and feloniously did carnally know and abuse" prosecutrix, held that there was but a single offense charged, "carnal abuse" and "carnal knowledge" being synonymous terms, therefore no election was required. Curtis v. State, 89 Ark. 394, 117 S. W. 521.

[a] In a prosecution for embezzlement where there is but one count the fact that several offenses arising out of the same transaction may be proved under that count will not necessitate an election. State v. Pratt, 98 Mo. 482, 11 S. W. 977.

[b] An election will not be required between averments of the same count charging rape by means of force and threats. Sharp v. State, 15 Tex. App. 171.

7. State v. Vance, 38 Utah 1, 110 Pac. 434.

[a] "The purpose to be conserved by an election for which offense the state will seek a conviction is to protect the defendant from his prosecution for two or more like offenses (misdemeanors) under one count of an indictment." Burt v. State, 159 Ala. 134, 48 So. 851.

8. State v. Leonard, 56 Wash. 83, 105 Pac. 163. See State v. Isensee, 12 Wash. 254, 40 Pac. 985.

[a] "Where the criminal act is single, and the counts of the indictment charge the violation of two or more statutes by that single act, or where the proof discovers that condition, the office of election is not present." Burt v. State, 159 Ala. 134, 48 So. 851.

[b] "We know of no rule of law which requires the county attorney to state the particular section of the code, under which the defendant is being tried." State v. Newman, 34 Mont. 434, 87 Pac. 462.

[c] Where evidence is offered under but one clause of a section of a statute, the state need not elect what particular offense under that section the defendant must answer. Leonard v. People, 81 Ill. 308.

that in support of a verdict the court will presume to have been proved on trial any fact the existence of which must have been involved in or inferable from the proof of those facts which are alleged and which the verdict has found.¹²

2. Application of Rule to Criminal Cases Generally.—Because of the fact that none of the statutes of amendments and jeofails extended to criminal proceedings,¹³ defective indictments were not, as pleadings in civil cases, aided by verdict.¹⁴ But the rule has nevertheless been applied to criminal cases,¹⁵ and there are many statutes limiting the right to raise belated objections to formal defects.¹⁶

The result of its operation is to prevent the defendant from urging after verdict merely formal or technical defects in the indictment. But defects which are so substantial that the accusation is absolutely void may be raised on motion in arrest of judgment.¹⁷

based upon the presumption that the general verdict is responsive to the good count.³⁹ But if the evidence relevant to the bad count is submitted to the jury with the rest, over the objection of the defendant, a general verdict of guilty will not stand.⁴⁰

Likewise when a count is in the alternative, with some of the averments good and others bad, and no objection is taken, a general verdict will be referred to the good averments and a judgment of conviction sustained.⁴¹

Offenses With Different Punishments.—An indictment which in separate counts, some of which are defective, charges offenses with different degrees of punishment, will not sustain a general verdict of guilty because the court cannot know upon which count to pass judgment.⁴²

Where the jury fixes the punishment it cannot be ascertained upon which count the punishment was based, and the verdict cannot be sustained.⁴³

b. Effect of Objection.—The general rule of aider, heretofore stated, is applicable, however, only where an objection to the defect is interposed for the first time after verdict,⁴⁴ or where the objection though timely, is too general, covering the good as well as the bad counts.⁴⁵ Where a demurrer to the bad count is erroneously overruled, the presumption that the verdict is based on the good count loses its force and the verdict will not be sustained.⁴⁶

2. Special Verdict.—A special verdict based on a good count will be sustained although the indictment contains other counts which are insufficient,⁴⁷ but it is otherwise if the verdict is based on counts some of which are good and some bad.⁴⁸

or those who partake of its prerogative, such as idiots and lunatics, or whose rights are under its particular protection as objects of public charity,⁵⁶ is in the nature of a bill in equity,⁵⁷ and to which the same rules are generally applicable.⁵⁸

When a relator has some individual interest to be protected, he may join his personal complaint with the information, forming an information and bill in equity.⁵⁹ But except for the purposes of costs, there of a person who refuses to deliver, may be recovered by information because the defendants may be regarded as having intruded themselves on the state's property within the meaning of the statute. State v. Corbin, 16 S. C. 533.

Any citizen has a right to call upon the state's attorney to redress a public wrong. The fact that private rights may also be involved and that through the acts of the state's attorney in the interests of the public, private wrongs, as well, may directly or indirectly, be redressed is immaterial."

2. When Information Will Lie.—Equity has original jurisdiction of informations on behalf of the state in the nature of an injunction bill in chancery, in all cases coming within the scope of the original jurisdiction conferred upon the court.⁶¹ Thus the proceeding by information is proper to assert the Crown's or state's rights to property,⁶² to protect property of lunatics and others incompetent to act for themselves,⁶³ to establish⁶⁴ and administer or regulate a charity,⁶⁵ to pre-information and bill will not lie. State v. Shively, 10 Ore. 267.

6. "Informations in every respect follow the nature of bills, except in their style. When they concern only rights of the crown, or of those whose rights the crown takes under its particular protection they are exhibited in the name of the king's attorney or solicitor general as the informant; and . . . in the latter always, and in the former sometimes, a relator is named, who in reality sustains and directs the suit. It may happen that this person has an interest in the matter in dispute, and sustains the character of plaintiff as well as of relator; and in this case the pleading is styled an information and bill. . . . The difference in form between an information and a bill consists merely in offering the subject-matter as the information of the officer in whose name it is exhibited, at the relation of the person who suggests the suit in those cases where a relator is named, and in stating the acts of the defendant to be injurious to the crown, or to those whose rights the crown thus endeavors to protect. [a] "The matter of complaint is offered to the court by way of information, given by the proper officers of the crown or government . . . , and not by way of petition. When the suit immediately concerns the rights of the crown or government alone, those officers proceed purely by way of information. When the suit does not immediately concern the rights of the crown or government, its officers depend upon the relation of some person, whose name is inserted in the information, and who is termed the relator. . . . Informations, however, differ from bills little more than in name and form, and therefore the same rules are generally applicable to both. Informations respecting charities constitute the most striking exception; for in those the court will not require the same strictness, either as to parties, or to pleadings, as is ordinarily required in bills." 8. Dismissal for Want of Prosecution.—Because the attorney general has absolute control over the manner of conducting the proceedings, an information exhibited solely in his name cannot be dismissed by the defendant for want of prosecution,¹⁶ but this rule has no application to informations on the relation of a private person.¹⁷

9. Costs.—In the absence of statute the attorney general cannot, in a court of equity, be made to pay costs,¹⁸ but a relator is usually named so that if the suit be improperly brought and the information be dismissed, costs may be awarded against him.¹⁹ The attorney general may receive costs, however.²⁰ Since costs rest in the court's discretion,²¹

I. DEFINITION.—Inducement, in pleading, is the statement of matter, which is introductory to the principal subject of the declaration or plea, and which is necessary to explain or elucidate it.¹

II. WHEN NECESSARY OR PROPER.—A. IN GENERAL. When the fact which constitutes the cause of actions does not depend on any peculiar transaction or circumstance, to give it effect, no inducement is necessary.² But where the right of action depends on personal or contractual relations,³ or the injury affects plaintiff in his professional capacity and damage is claimed therefor,⁴ or the wrong is against goods owned or in possession of the plaintiff,⁵ or consists of an intrusion upon property of which he has the title or possession,⁶ or where defamatory words are innocent in their meaning, when not connected with extrinsic circumstances,⁷ the introductory matter is an essential part of the pleading, though not of the gist of the action.⁸

B. JUDICIAL NOTICE. — An exception to the rule that a foundation for the action in extrinsic circumstances must be laid, as an inducement, or otherwise, in the pleading, exists as to matter of which the courts take judicial notice, for example, the duty of a public officer.⁹ The general rule of pleading, that it is not necessary to plead¹⁰ matters of which the court takes judicial notice, applies to matter of inducement.¹¹

C. PRESUMPTIONS. — That which the law presumes need not be alleged by way of inducement,¹² and the unnecessary allegation of such matters does not justify or require evidence in support of them.¹³

D. PERSONAL OR CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS. — It is the proper office of the inducement to set out the personal relations of one person to another, when those relations are the foundation for the action, as that of husband and wife, in actions by the husband for damages, for personal injury to the wife, for alienating affections or for criminal conversation;¹⁴ or that of parent and child in an action by the parent

[b] "In an action for an injury to the relative right of persons, the relation of husband, or master in respect for seduction or personal injury;¹⁵ or the reason for joinder of parties, as in actions against married women.¹⁶ So in an action ex delicto for breach of duties growing out of a contractual relation, the contract is matter of inducement.¹⁷

E. TITLE AND OWNERSHIP.—In actions for injury to real or personal property,¹⁸ or in actions on contracts by personal representatives, or assignees of personal interests,¹⁹ and in actions generally where title or ownership is only incidentally involved and not the gist of the action, for the purpose of laying the foundation for the action by the plaintiff, it is the proper function of the inducement to set up title or ownership of the plaintiff of the property, real or personal, or of the subject of the controversy.²⁰

20. See 1 Chitty Pl. 379, 380; Steph. Pl. 309, and more fully the title "Title."

[a] In personal actions title is mere inducement, at least in a pleading point of view, as regards the declaration. 1 Chitty Pl. 379.

[b] "To the rule, that the commencement of particular estates must be shown, there is this exception, that it need not be shown where the title is alleged by way of inducement only." Steph. Pl. 309.

[c] In an action in debt on a lease the title of the lessor "is usually shown by way of inducement preceding the statement of the lease, as when the action is at the suit of an heir, by alleging that the lessor was seized of the premises in his demesne as of fee." 1 Chitty Pl. 364; Forms, 9 STANDARD PROC. 1206, I, A.

[d] Form.—Title by Devise.—"And the said E. F. being so seized as aforesaid, he the said E. F. afterwards, to-wit, on, etc., at, etc. (venue) aforesaid, duly made and published his last will and testament in writing bearing date, etc., and attested and subscribed in the presence of the said E. F. by three credible witnesses, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and thereby (amongst other things) gave and devised the said demised premises, with the appurtenances, unto the said plaintiff, to hold unto and to the use of the said plaintiff, and his heirs and assigns forever. And the said E. F. afterwards, to-wit, on, etc., at, etc. (venue) aforesaid, died so seized of the reversion of and in the said demised premises, with the appurtenances as aforesaid, without altering his said will, as to his said devise of the said demised premises, with the appurtenances. Whereupon and whereby the said plaintiff then and there became and was seized of the said reversion of his demesne as of fee. And being so seized, etc." 2 Chitty Pl. *591. And see form of is never a necessity. The matter usually stated in the inducement may appear in any part of the pleading.²¹ It may appear parenthetically,²² but logically and for the purpose of perspicuity the matter of inducement should precede the statement of the gist of the action,²³ where it may be conveniently referred to in subsequent counts without unnecessary repetition.²⁴ This reference to general facts applying to all counts does not conflict with the code provisions that each cause of action shall be separately stated, at least where such preliminary facts are incorporated in subsequent counts by reference.²⁵ A defect in matter of inducement may be supplied by the defendant's plea or answer.²⁶

B. CERTAINTY IN PLEADING. — 1. In General. — One of the rules of pleading laid down by Stephen is: "Less particularity is necessary in the statement of matter of inducement or aggravation, than in inducement in covenant by heir, etc., 9 STANDARD PROC. 1206.

23. Grand v. Dreyfus, 122 Cal. 58, 63, 54 Pac. 389.

[a] "Where a variety of facts preceded the contract, and are so connected with it that the statement of them is necessary to render the count intelligible, it is obviously better to adopt a formal inducement, than in the description of the consideration or of the contract to show those facts by one continued sentence of great length." 1 Chitty Pl. 290.

[b] "The inducement, or averment by way of introductory allegation, is peculiarly proper where a party is charged upon, or in respect of, the breach of a contract or implied duty, resulting from any particular character or capacity of the defendant. Thus, in a declaration against an attorney for negligence, or a carrier, . . . for the loss of goods, etc., it is usual and proper to show, by way of inducement, or at least by other averments in the declaration, that the defendant followed the occupation in respect of which the plaintiff employed him. If no such allegation be contained in the declaration, the defendant cannot be charged thereon for the breach of a duty which results only from the particular character which he held." 1 Chitty Pl. 291. 25. Hefferlin v. Karlman, 29 Mont. 139, 74 Pac. 201, partnership sufficiently alleged in second count—"being partners as aforesaid."

[a] In Sinclair v. Fitch, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 677, 689, in construing the code provision requiring the separate statement of each cause of action and holding that the first cause of action stated could not be aided by statements of the second, the court added: "I do not intend to be understood as saying that a plaintiff may not, preliminarily to a statement of the causes of action, make those general averments as to the case, which are applicable to both statements, so that each one with the preliminary averments would be perfect in itself."

[b] "It is not only allowable, but correct practice requires, to avoid unnecessary repetition of the same matter, that in the subsequent counts reference should be made to the first, where the inducement is the same, in which case it is considered as if it were repeated in each count. 1 Chitty Pl. 473. The first count may, therefore, fail as to the cause of action stated in it, and yet stand good as to the inducement in aid of the others." Curtis v. Moore, 15 Wis. 134.

26. "Most certainly was it (the complaint) sufficient after the answer was interposed, which supplied both inducement and colloquium by the statements that the plaintiff killed Nehill

the main allegations."²⁷ The same rule applies to indictments.²⁸ In alleging matters of inducement it is not necessary to state with certainty, time,²⁹ place,³⁰ or names,³¹ and in some instances they may be omitted;³² but there must not be a misdescription.³³ In alleging title by way of inducement, a general statement is sufficient,³⁴ or mere possession.³⁵ If a contract is alleged as the consideration for a promise and that the slanderous words (if spoken at all) were spoken of and concerning such killing." Langton v. Hagerty, 35 Wis. 150. See Hefferlin v. Karlman, 29 Mont. 139, 74 Pac. 201.

[a] "It is said that as the office of an inducement is explanatory, it does not in general require exact certainty." 1 Chitty Pl. 291.

[b] Matter of inducement not being of the gist of the action is less likely to become the subject of controversy than the principal allegations; nevertheless it may be material and may be controverted, as where a person brings an action for injury to property of which he has no ownership, then, though the injury is the gist of the action, the material issue might be on ownership alleged in the inducement. See 1 Chitty Pl. 299, 401; Steph. Pl. 243; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Walrath, 53 Wis. 669, 10 N. W. 151; McGregor v. Gregory, 11 Mees. & W. (Eng.) 287; *Winter v. [a] The hardships resulting from the rule laid down in Bristow v. Wright, supra, have been greatly relieved by statutes of amendments and jeofails. See 1 STANDARD PROC. 912, note 24.

[b] "But as the inducement in such case relates to a material matter, there will be a fatal variance, if, instead of relying on the general statement of his title, interest or right, the plaintiff enter into a more particular and detailed statement thereof, and there be a misdescription." 1 Chitty Pl. 385.

which constitutes the gist of the action, the contract may be stated in general terms.³⁶ It is sufficient by way of inducement to allege an act duly done,³⁷ or according to its legal effect.³⁸

2. Description.—The rule permitting matters of inducement to be stated in a general way and by way of recital has an exception where the fact constituting the gist of the action depends on the very terms of the matter in the inducement. Such matter in an inducement must be stated with directness and certainty.³⁹

. IV. DUPLICITY.—The statement of matter by way of inducement does not render a pleading double though by itself it constitutes a cause of action or a defense.⁴⁰

V. DENIALS AND PROOF.—Matters of inducement merely introductory are not proper subjects of denial;⁴¹ but the inducement may contain matter not of the gist of the action, but nevertheless necessary as a foundation of the plaintiff's right to bring an action for the wrong, and therefore traversable.⁴² The former practice of permitting matters of inducement to be controverted under the general issue was changed by rule of court in England, which required matter not of

37. Indictment for Conspiracy To Conceal Assets From Trustee in Bankruptcy.—"The allegation is simply that the person named therein as trustee was 'duly appointed trustee.' These words, of course, cover in a popular sense everything necessary to complete the appointment. It is true that, under some circumstances, and, indeed, under many circumstances, it is not sufficient to allege in a general way that a thing was 'duly' done; but details must be stated to such an extent that court can judge whether what was done in law 'duly' done. This rule, however, would be too burdensome if applied to everything which is merely incidental, or which only leads up to the real substance of the offense. Therefore, it is not ordinarily required, except as to what is really a vital element of the crime." Kerch v. United States, 171 Fed. 366, 96 C. C. A. 258. Compare 5 STANDARD PROC. 212.

[a] It is sufficient "if the introductory matter or inducement be stated according to its legal effect." 1 Chitty Pl. 292.

39. "It is also a rule that if a necessary inducement of the plaintiff's right, etc., even in actions for torts, relate to and describe and be founded on a matter of contract, it is necessary to be strictly correct in stating such contract, it being matter of description." 1 Chitty Pl. 385.

40. 7 STANDARD PROC. 943.

[a] "Thus, it may be pleaded without duplicity, that after the cause of action accrued, the plaintiff (a woman) took a husband, and that the husband afterwards released the defendant; for though the coverture is itself a defense, as well as the release, yet the averment of the coverture is a necessary introduction to that of the release." Steph. Pl. 262.

41. Thorwarth v. Blanchard, 86 Vt. 296, 85 Atl. 6; Steph. Pl. 243. See 7 STANDARD PROC. 34.

[a] "Matter of inducement is not traversable, unless essential to make out the case." Thorwarth v. Blanchard, 86 Vt. 296, 85 Atl. 6.

42. See Reeves v. Lutz, 179 Mo. App. 61, 162 S. W. 280.

[a] "It is laid down that in general, traverse is not to be taken on matter of inducement, that is, matter brought forward only by way of explanatory introduction to the main al-

the gist of the action to be specially traversed.⁴³ A rule that matters of inducement are not required to be proved under general issue has been established in some states by judicial decision,⁴⁴ in others by rule.⁴⁵ A matter of inducement may be a "material allegation" under a code and may be controverted under a general denial.⁴⁶ The material allegations in an inducement should be proved if properly denied.⁴⁷ It is not necessary to prove immaterial matters.⁴⁸ During the period of strict rules as to variance, some distinctions were made as to strictness of proof between matters of inducement and the main issues,⁴⁹

legations; but this is open to many exceptions, for it often happens that introductory matter is in itself essential, and of the substance of the case, and in such instances, though in the nature of inducement, it may nevertheless be traversed." Steph. Pl. 243.

43. 1 Chitty Pl. 401. See Rules, 1 Chitty Pl., Appendix (11th Am. ed.) 742, 745.

[a] "Under the new rules, the inducement, when properly pleaded, must be traversed, if it is intended to deny it, and not guilty puts in issue only the publication of the libel maliciously, and in the sense imputed in the innuendo." McGregor v. Gregory, 11 Mees. & W. (Eng.) 287, 295.

44. Brunhild v. Chicago Union Trac. Co., 239 Ill. 621, 88 N. E. 199; Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Jerka, 227 Ill. 95, 81 N. E. 7; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chapman, 220 Ill. 428, 77 N. E. 248; McNulta v. Lockridge, 137 Ill. 270, 27 N. E. 452, 31 Am. St. Rep. 362. See Ricket v. Stanley, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 169; and 7 STANDARD PROC. 70.

[a] "Whether the rule above laid down is in strict accord with the principles of common law pleading as they existed prior to the adoption of the rule of the court of the Hilary Term, 1834, is a matter of little practical concern, since the rule of stare decisis requires us to enforce the law as we find it, unless considerations of a very controlling character were presented." Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Jerka, 227 Ill. 95, 100, 81 N. E. 7.

45. Atlantic C. L. R. Co. v. Partridge, 58 Fla. 153, 159, 50 So. 634. Rule 71 prefixed to 14 Fla., substantially and sometimes literally the rules of Hilary term.

[a] "The defendant's plea was 'not guilty,' which, under the rules of court operated only 'as a denial of the breach of duty, or wrongful act alleged to have been committed by the defendant, and not of the facts stated in the inducement (corporate existence, ownership and operation of railroad, and employment of deceased, husband of defendant)." Somerset & C. R. Co. v. Galbraith, 109 Pa. 32, 38, 1 Atl. 371.

46. See Reeves v. Lutz, 179 Mo. App. 61, 162 S. W. 280.

[a] "It seems to be well settled that, in an action for the wrongful conversion of personal property, under the general denial the defendant is entitled to give in evidence any facts which disprove the plaintiff's title to the property." Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Walrath, 53 Wis. 669, 675, 10 N. W. 151.

[b] Ownership may be controverted under general denial. Emerson v. Thompson, 59 Wis. 619, 18 N. W. 503.

47. "In general, however, every allegation in an inducement, which is material and not impertinent and foreign to the cause, and which consequently cannot be rejected as surplusage, must be proved as alleged, and a variance would be fatal." 1 Chitty Pl. 292.

48. A contract alleged merely by way of inducement to an action for negligence in doing the work need not be proved. "There are no terms of a contract stated and no attempt to state a case under a contract. It is only mentioned at all as a mere incident by way of inducement showing why defendants came to be engaged at the work." (Raising the house injured.) Armelio v. Whitman, 127 Mo. App. 698, 106 S. W. 1113.

49. See Winter v. White, 3 Moore (Eng.) 674, 695, 696.

[a] "And the first part of the rule, that allegations of matter of substance may be substantially proved, but allegations of matter of description must be literally proved, applies peculiarly

but the distinctions were not clearly established,⁵⁰ and under statutes or amendments and jeofails would now probably not be important.⁵¹

VI. IN PLEAS.—An inducement is used in certain specific denials to set out the pleader's version of the transaction, as explaining and qualifying his specific denial following in the absque hoc.⁵² The requirements of such inducement are that the facts be sufficient in substance to defeat the cause of action, though stated only in the manner and with the certainty of inducements in general.⁵³ The inducement being necessarily an indirect, argumentative denial, by affirmative matter, to comply with rules of pleading, the specific denial, in negative form, known as the absque hoc, becomes necessary.⁵⁴ The inducement must not contain a direct denial.⁵⁵ The method of pleading to the special traverse was merely to join issue on the absque hoc, no traverse of the inducement was proper.⁵⁶

VII. IN CRIMINAL CASES.—Where the offense charged depends on special circumstances or extrinsic facts the existence of which to averments in an inducement." 1 Chitty Pl. 292.

50. 1 Greenl. Ev. (13th ed.), §63, n. 1.

[a] In the leading case of Bristow v. Wright, 1 Smith's L. C. *737 (Hare & Wall., 8th Am. ed.) 1417, 2 Dougl. 665, 99 Eng. Reprint 421, which had so much to do with the enactment of statutes of amendment, the matter of inducement, a lease, was stated with unnecessary particularity and misstated. In this case, on review Lord Mansfield reversed his holding at the trial and held the variance fatal.

51. See 1 STANDARD PROC. 912.

52. Steph. Pl. 183. See also 2 STANDARD PROC. 21.

[a] Stephen suggests objections to this form of traverse, from the pleader's standpoint, on grounds of legal strategy, not the most conducive to furtherance of justice. He says: "That the inducement tends to open the real nature of the party's case, by giving notice to his adversary of the precise grounds on which the denial proceeds; and thus facilitates to the latter the preparation of his proofs or otherwise guides him in his further proceedings." He adds: "But where allowable, it should still be occasionally adopted, in a view to the various grounds of necessity or convenience by which it was originally suggested." Steph. Pl. 183.

53. State v. Chrisman, 2 Ind. 126; 1 Chitty Pl. 620.

[a] "It is a rule, that the inducement should be such as in itself amounts to a sufficient answer in substance to the last pleading. For (as has been shown) it is the use and object of the inducement to give an explained or qualified denial; that is, to state such circumstances as tend to show that the last pleading is not true; the absque hoc being added merely to put that denial in positive form, which had previously been made in an indirect one. Now an indirect denial amounts in substance to an answer; and it follows, therefore, that an inducement, if properly framed must always in itself contain without the aid of the absque hoc, an answer, in substance, to the last pleading." Steph. Pl. 183.

[b] "Where the defendant states his right only as inducement or conveyance, so much certainty is not required. Thus, it is sufficient to allege in a plea to a declaration in trespass, that the defendant was possessed of a close, from which his cattle escaped into the close of the plaintiff, in consequence of the defect of a fence which the latter ought to have repaired." 1 Chitty Pl. 534.

54. Steph. Pl. 184. See preceding note.

[a] "The affirmative part of the special traverse is called its inducement; the negative is called absque hoc." 1 Steph. Pl. 169.

55. Steph. Pl. 184, 189.

56. Steph. Pl. 174, 180. See 1 Chitty Pl. 620.

the court does not judicially notice, and which make the act in question criminal, such facts or circumstances are proper and necessary matters of inducement.⁵⁷ Such inducements are subject to the same rules as to manner of pleading, that apply in civil actions.⁵⁸

Haddonfield & C. Tpk. Co.*, 65 N. J. L. 97, 46 Atl. 700; State v. Hageman, 13 N. J. L. 314.

[c] "The first count in each indictment, charging only neglect to repair (the highway), is bad, for while it alleges that it was the legal duty of the defendant to keep the highway in repair, and that by reason of its neglect the highway was ruinous, yet it does not set forth the facts out of which such a duty would arise. As there is no law of which the court takes judicial cognizance, imposing that duty on the defendant, the special circumstances creating the duty must be distinctly alleged before the defendant can be required to answer for neglect." 2 Bish. [a] In a case of indictment for conspiracy to defraud, the court said: "There are several objections suggested, which are common to all the counts in the indictment, such as the imperfect description of the estate which William Mayberry pretended to own in Gray, and promised to sell and convey to Pennell; the omission to describe Pennell, by addition or otherwise, and the failure to describe the bonds and notes, the cancellation of which the defendants conspired to obtain, which alleged defects the counsel for the defendants contends are fatal to the indictment. These several matters are introduced into the indictment by way of inducement. They do not constitute the material allegation in the indictment, and it is not necessary that they should be described with that degree of minuteness and particularity which is requisite in setting out the material allegations which constitute and give character to the offense charged." State v. Mayberry, 48 Me. 218, 237.

[b] "Under the strict rules of common law pleading, as well as under the more liberal rules of the code, matters of inducement need not be set out in detail or by direct charge, but may be in general terms." Mason v. State, 55 Ark. 529, 18 S. W. 827.

I. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST INFANTS.—A. PARTIES. The propriety or necessity of joining infants as parties is governed by general rules elsewhere discussed,¹ as is also the question when the action should be by or against the infant and when by or against his guardian,² and the necessity for the appointment of a next friend or guardian ad litem.³

Affidavit of Right To Sue.—It is sometimes required that a next friend must file an affidavit showing his right to sue.⁴

In an action by an infant the usual and proper course is to entitle the cause in the name of the infant by his guardian or next friend,

The effect of the infant's attainment of majority is elsewhere discussed.¹³

B. PROCESS AND SERVICE OF PROCESS AND PAPERS. — 1. Requisites of Process. — If the plaintiff is an infant the form of the original writ or summons may be the same as in other cases.¹⁴ If the action is against the infant he should be named in the process as a defendant,¹⁵ and should be directed to appear according to law, that is, by his guardian or guardian ad litem as the case may be.¹⁶ His correct age should be given where it would affect the manner of service.¹⁷ Substantial similarity between the process served on the minor and that served upon his parent or guardian, suffices.¹⁸

2. Service of Process.¹⁹ — a. Purpose of Service. — The purpose of serving a minor with process is to attract the attention of his friends or relatives, that a due regard may be had to the infant's rights, and that the mind of the court may be directed to them.²⁰

b. Necessity for Service. — (I.) Generally. — To enable the court to exercise jurisdiction over infant defendants they should be served with process in such manner as the statutes or rules of the jurisdiction require,²¹ unless in some legal manner they are already before the

14. Bouche v. Ryan, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 472.

15. Where the infant must be personally served the process should be directed to him by name. But though the summons does not name him as defendant, if a copy of the summons, directing the guardian to appear as such, is served upon both the infant and his guardian, the failure to name the infant as defendant is amendable and when attacked collaterally will be considered as amended, and the decree based thereon is valid. Burgett v. Wiliford, 56 Ark. 187, 19 S. W. 750, 35 Am. St. Rep. 96.

[a] But where the infant need not be served personally (1) it is unnecessary that the process be directed to the infant personally. It is sufficient and proper to direct the guardian ad litem of the infant as such to appear in the action. Cornell v. Cornell, 131 Ky. 650, 115 S. W. 795. (2) Where, however, suit is begun by the service of a notice that a petition will be filed and requiring the defendant to appear, the notice is jurisdictional and must be directed to the infant himself rather than to his guardian, even though the latter only need be personally served. Sleeper v. Killion (Iowa), 147 N. W. 314.

8 STANDARD PROC. 476.

[a] Although the infant is not served with process, "the presence of a next friend or guardian ad litem to represent an infant party, as the case may be, and his recognition by the court, in proceeding with the cause precludes an inquiry into his authority in a collateral proceeding, and requires remedial relief to be sought." The judgment remains in force until declared void by some impeachment proceedings instituted and directed to that end. Preston v. Dunn, 25 Ala. 507; Harris v. Bennett, 160 N. C. 329, 76 S. E. 217.

[b] Where the guardian ad litem accepted service, the judgment obtained without the required personal service on the infant is voidable only, and cannot be attacked collaterally. Dwyer v. Wright, 14 Pa. Co. Ct. 406. See also Claypoole v. Houston, 12 Kan. 324.

[c] A writ of error by minors after attaining their full age to reverse a judgment made against them without being served with process is a direct, not a collateral attack. Moore v. Prince, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 352, 23 S. W. 1113.

[d] Where Represented by Guardian Ad Litem. — Judgments rendered against resident minor defendants, who have no general guardian, and who have not been personally served, are voidable, even though they are represented by a guardian ad litem. Wheeler v. Ahrenbeak, 54 Tex. 535.

[e] If a statutory guardian has been served with process in a partition suit the judgment is conclusive on the minor. In the absence of any suggestion of fraud a court of equity will not afterwards inquire into it. Dampier v. McCall, 78 Ga. 607.

upon the infant is not required; in such jurisdictions service upon the infant alone is insufficient.⁴⁷

Where the parent or guardian is the plaintiff service upon him as the representative of the infant does not give the court jurisdiction over the person of the infant,⁴⁸ and in such case it is unnecessary that he be served.⁴⁹ The proper person to receive service under such circumstances is the infant's general guardian if he have one.⁵⁰ Some statutes make provision for the appointment of a guardian ad litem in Laws, 1907, §4046. W. Va.—Ferrell v. Ferrell, 53 W. Va. 515, 44 S. E. 187.

[a] Reason For Rule.—In Cornell v. Cornell, 131 Ky. 650, 115 S. W. 795, the court in speaking of the fact that summons on the infant himself when under fourteen was no longer required said: "The General Assembly at that time (1882) recognized the utter helplessness and inability of a child under that age to reason and look after its own interest; that it was a waste of money to require summonses and copies to be issued and served upon them." See also Kegans v. Allecorn, 9 Tex. 25.

[b] In Chancery, "the writ should be served on the father or guardian of the infant, or if none, then upon the person with whom the infant resides, or under whose care he is, unless the court or judge otherwise orders, but the court or judge may order that service made or to be made on the infant shall be deemed good service." Dan. Ch. Pr. (8th ed.) p. 110, 274. See also Hibbler v. Sprowl, 71 Ala. 50; Walker v. Hallett, 1 Ala. 379; Thompson v. Jones, 8 Ves. Jr. 141, 32 Eng. Reprint 306; 8 STANDARD PROC. 465. Compare Nichols v. Mitchell, 70 Ill. 258.

[c] Service on both the father and mother is not required, but the fact that both were served does not affect validity of service made. Cox v. Interstate Coal Co., 157 Ky. 373, 163 S. W. 231.

[d] Service upon the mother and infant under fourteen is sufficient although it is not shown the father is dead. Betty v. Petrie, 138 Ky. 426, 128 S. W. 320.

[e] If the mother is the guardian of the minors, service of the summons on the mother is a proper service upon the infants. Cohen v. Ripy, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 1078, 33 S. W. 625.

[f] Where the person with whom the infant resides is a minor also, but is at an age of mature discretion, is a co-defendant and is served with process in the action, this service is sufficient. Lawrence v. Conner, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 86, 14 S. W. 77.

[g] Service on the mother is sufficient where the infant has no general guardian. Peck v. Adsit, 98 Mich. 639, 57 N. W. 804.

[h] Presumption of Custody.—Where, in an action against infants under fourteen years of age, process has been served upon their step-father, it should be presumed that he had the care and control of them. Louisville, etc. Exposition v. Johnson, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 323.

[a] In Kennedy v. Williams, 59 S. C. 378, 38 S. E. 8, the court said: "While it is indispensable that the summons should be served personally on the minor in order to give the court jurisdiction, this requirement is not so stringent as to service of the summons on the parent or guardian. The service of the summons on the parent or guardian is intended to make them, to that extent, a party to the proceedings. When, however, the parent or guardian is a plaintiff, he thereby becomes a party to the action, and there is no necessity in serving him with a summons which has been issued at his instance."

50. Gayle v. Johnston, 80 Ala. 395, decree reversed because there was no proof the person served was a guardian, such cases.⁵¹ But service upon the plaintiff in such a case, has been held sufficient where his interests were not adverse to those of the child,⁵² and there was no fraud.⁵³

(III.) Number of Copies Served. — If the parent, guardian or other person on whom service must be made is a codefendant with the minor, it is not necessary that he be served with two copies of the summons,⁵⁴ and the service of one copy of the summons upon the parent or guardian of several minor defendants is sufficient to include all,⁵⁵ but each of the minor defendants must be served with a separate copy.⁵⁶

(IV.) Where Infant Is Absent, or Whereabouts Unknown. — Where the infant is absent from the jurisdiction or his whereabouts are unknown, he must be served⁵⁷ in the same manner⁵⁸ as adults under similar cir-such fact being denied. See also Cook v. Rogers, 64 Ala. 406; Mullins v. Mullins, 120 Ky. 643, 87 S. W. 764.

51. When Parent, Guardian, Etc., Plaintiff.—When persons named in statute who might be served with process for infants are all dead or plaintiffs, the clerk should appoint a person to represent the infants, and upon whom summons might be served for them. See generally, the titles "Returns;" "Service of Process and Papers."

[a] A return of "served" is sufficient. Doe v. Bradley, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 485.

[b] A return of "executed" is irregular, but sufficient to sustain a decree upon collateral attack. Rigby v. Lefevre, 58 Miss. 639. See also Erwin v. Carson, 54 Miss. 282.

[c] Return held sufficient to show service on a widow and her minor children, viz.: "This summons came to hand September 4th, 1871, at 2 o'clock P. M., and on this 5th day of September, 1871, I served this summons on Sarah Sanders in person, and on Sarah E. Sanders and Charles Sanders by delivering to each of them a true and certified copy of this summons, with all the endorsements thereon. All of this done in Nemaha county, state of Nebraska." Parker v. Starr, 21 Neb. 680, 33 N. W. 424.

[d] That a return does not expressly state that the service was made within the state will not invalidate the proceedings where such fact may be inferred. Middleton v. Stokes, 71 S. C. 17, 50 S. E. 539.

persons,⁷³ acting in the proper capacity;⁷⁴ or that no such persons could be found,⁷⁵ or it should be shown that the age of the infant is such that the law makes a service upon the minor alone sufficient.⁷⁶ The return must be verified in some jurisdictions.⁷⁷

Amendment of Return. — The court may allow the return to be corrected by amendment.⁷⁸ Lapse of time will not bar an amendment

73. Ia.—Allen v. Saylor, 14 Iowa 435. Ky.—Rodgers v. Rodgers' Admr., 17 Ky. L. Rep. 358, 31 S. W. 139; Jenkins v. Crofton' Admr., 10 Ky. L. Rep. 456, 9 S. W. 406. Okla.—Bolling v. Campbell, 36 Okla. 671, 128 Pac. 1091, 1093.

[a] Should show service on parent, guardian, etc., where service on them is required. Ala.—Estes v. Bridgforth, 114 Ala. 221, 21 So. 512. Ky.—Feltner v. Huff, 118 S. W. 936. Miss.—Erwin v. Carson, 54 Miss. 282; Winston v. McLendon, 43 Miss. 254; Mullins v. Sparks, 43 Miss. 129.

74. Service on Parent To Be for the Infant.—If the parent is also a party defendant the return must show that service was made upon the parent for the infant. It is better in all cases that the fact of service being made upon the parent for the infant should distinctly appear in the return. Cook v. Rogers, 64 Ala. 406. See also Dillivan v. German Sav. Bank (Iowa), 124 N. W. 359, decided on the authority of Allen v. Saylor, 14 Iowa 435. Compare Rodgers v. Rodgers' Admr., 17 Ky. L. Rep. 358, 31 S. W. 139; and supra, I, B, 2, c. (III).

[a] But in Melcher v. Schluter, 5 Neb. (Unof.) 445, 98 N. W. 1082, it was unnecessary that the return show service on the guardian as such merely because he was also a party defendant, since he obviously had been made a party merely because he was guardian and had to be served as such.

[b] A return showing that the minors reside with their mother or that she is their general guardian is sufficient without stating that she is the person in charge of them. Robinson v. Clark, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 1401, 34 S. W. 1083.

[a] The legal effect of a return nil habet in partition, in which a minor is a defendant, is that there is no one in the county upon whom service of the writ against the minor could be made. Girard L. Ins. Co. v. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank, 57 Pa. 388.

[b] Return showing service on the mother without a showing as to inability to find the father or guardian is insufficient under the statute of Kentucky. Lloyd's Admr. v. McCauley's Admr., 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 535.

[c] Showing Where Service Is on Person Having Control of Minor. Where service can be made on the person having custody, etc., only in the absence of the parents or guardian of a minor under fourteen, a return which does not show the absence of the parent or guardian, and that the person served had the custody or control of the minor is insufficient. Dillivan v. German Savings Bank (Iowa), 124 N. W. 350, on the authority of Allen v. Saylor, 14 Iowa 435.

76. Keys v. McDonald, 1 Handy (Ohio) 287, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 146.

[a] Presumption as to Age.—In Melcher v. Schluter, 5 Neb. (Unof.) 445, 98 N. W. 1082, the court said: "The ages of the minors are not disclosed anywhere in this record, and we think it will be in keeping with the strictness which the law enforces upon those who deal with the interests of minors to test the sufficiency of the return upon the assumption that they were below the age of fourteen."

[b] But a failure to state such age is not a fatal defect if that fact is conclusively established by the evidence upon the trial. Ringstad v. Hanson, 150 Iowa 324, 130 N. W. 145.

Conclusiveness.—The return of the officer cannot be contradicted in a collateral proceeding.⁸⁰

c. Record and Presumptions.—In the absence of record evidence to the contrary,⁸¹ where the court has heard and determined the case, and the record shows that infant parties were represented by a guardian ad litem it will be presumed that such infants had been served with process.⁸²

79. Spellmyer v. Gaff, 112 Ill. 29, 1 N. E. 170.

[a] The lapse of sixteen years in a chancery case is no reason why the court should not allow a sheriff to amend his return. Spellmyer v. Gaff, 112 Ill. 29, 1 N. E. 170.

80. The conclusive effect of the sheriff's return showing service upon one as guardian cannot be evaded by showing that the minors had no guardian at the time of service, where such fact does not appear of record. Levan v. Milholland, 114 Pa. 49, 7 Atl. 194.

81. Ill.—Benefield v. Albert, 132 Ill. 665, 24 N. E. 634. Ia.—Tharp v. Brennenan, 41 Iowa 251; Pursley v. Hayes, 22 Iowa 11. Ky.—Brown v. Brown, 157 Ky. 804, 164 S. W. 70 (presumption overcome by return); Beverly v. Perkins, 1 Duv. 251. Compare Sutton v. Louisville, 5 Dana 28.

As to what the return should show see supra I, B, 2, d.

[a] The return to a summons against infant defendants which recites that it was executed by delivering a true copy to each of the persons named in it negatives the presumption that the service was on any other person than the infants. Beverly v. Perkins, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 251.

[b] Such a presumption is rebutted when the return shows in addition how the process was executed and that it was not executed as required by law. Cheatham v. Whitman, 86 Ky. 614, 6 S. W. 595.

[c] Although the record shows that the minor has no father or guardian living but is silent as to the mother and that service was duly made upon the infant only, in a collateral attack on a decree of partition a recital of due service upon the infant in the order renders it valid. Cocks v. Simmons, 57 Miss. 183; Billups v. Brander, 56 Miss. 495; Crawford v. Redus, 54 Miss. 700.

82. Ark.—Bedding v. Smith, 13 S.

E. 997, where there was a discrepancy in the name of an infant and process was served on, and the decree of sale was against, the landowners, and advantage was not taken of the discrepancy by a plea in abatement. N. Y.—Bosworth v. Vandewalker, 53 N. Y. 597. Tenn.—Hopper v. Fisher, 2 Head 253.

[a] If the decree fails to show service of process on the minor defendants, service on the minors in the absence of record evidence to the contrary will be presumed. Benefield v. Albert, 132 Ill. 665, 24 N. E. 634.

[b] Record Silent.—Although the record shows no prayer for process and no issuing of summons and no notice of the appointment of a guardian ad litem, that summons was issued and served may be presumed. Harvey v. Harvey, 25 S. C. 283. See Cole v. Lewis, 159 Ky. 747, 169 S. W. 490, where pleadings and papers were lost.

[c] From a judgment showing proper service, it may be presumed service was issued and served properly. Tedgerall v. Bouknight, 25 S. C. 275.

[d] A judgment for the sale of a minor's land, which recites, that "citation has been properly issued, served, and returned as the law directs," on collateral attack is valid, even if it appears that a process issued in the case was not properly served, because there may have been a former process which was duly issued and served. Lyle v. Horstman (Tex. Civ. App.), 25 S. W. 802.

[e] Where the record and entries in the docket show the appearance of an attorney for the infant, a petition for and the appointment of a guardian, a guardian's answer, a trial and decree, the fact of the service of the subpoena on the infant is presumptively established. Sloane v. Martin, 77 Hun 249, 28 N. Y. Supp. 332, affirmed in 145 N.

Proof of service of summons need appear of record only in case the declaration or complaint is not answered;⁸³ such a presumption, however, is rebuttable.⁸⁴ And it has been held that there can be no presumption against an infant that process was served, but that the record must affirmatively show this fact.⁸⁵

f. *Cure and Waiver of Defects.*⁸⁶—The failure to make legal service of the process is not cured by the appointment of a guardian ad litem,⁸⁷ or by appearance of the parent in his own behalf,⁸⁸ or by service of summons and complaint after judgment rendered.⁸⁹ But an irregularity in service may be waived by the appearance of the infant.⁹⁰

g. *Revivor of Action.*⁹¹—On the death of a defendant the action may be revived against the infant heirs by motion and order without the service of summons.⁹² Service of the order of revivor is necessary

Y. 524, 40 N. E. 217, 45 Am. St. Rep. 630, 28 L. R. A. 349.

[f] Presumption as to Residence and Custody of Infant.—Where a record of a judgment which is offered in evidence shows that the infant was served with process, if there is nothing in the record to suggest the contrary, the infant will be presumed to have been residing with, and to have been under the charge of, his parents. Brown v. Lawson, 51 Cal. 615, 617, in which case the father was plaintiff, and hence service upon him was unnecessary.

[g] Where there is no record showing of the acceptance of the appointment by the guardian appointed for the defendants to a bill of revivor, his appearance, or notification to appear or any other act by him, the infants are not shown to have been in court and the judgment is erroneous. St. Clair v. Smith, 3 Ohio 355.

83. Bosworth v. Vandewalker, 53 N. Y. 597, 601.

84. Hedlicka v. Evans (Iowa), 145 N. W. 84.

[a] Recital in the judgment not conclusive. Smith v. Reid, 134 N. Y. 568, 31 N. E. 1082, affirming 19 Civ. Proc. 363, 11 N. Y. Supp. 739; Sledge v. Elliott, 116 N. C. 712, 21 S. E. 797. [a] Where it appears that the infant is a non-resident, the record must show publication in the mode prescribed by the statute. The fact that a person, styling himself guardian ad litem, appeared for the infant and made a defense, is insufficient. Where a decree against an infant defendant is assailed on error, the uniform holding of the court has been that it cannot be supported unless the record shows affirmatively, that in the precise mode the statutes and rules of practice prescribe, the infant has been brought before the court, and to represent and defend in his behalf a guardian ad litem has been appointed. *Rowland v. to obtain jurisdiction of the infants.⁹³ This order is served in the same manner as a summons.⁹⁴

C. PLEADINGS. — 1. Actions by Infants. — a. Complaint or Declaration. — In an action by an infant the fact of infancy should be alleged,⁹⁵ but the age of the infant need not be stated.⁹⁶ Disaffirmance of a contract made during plaintiff's minority need not be alleged where the bringing of the action itself amounts to such a disaffirmance,⁹⁷ nor where it is properly a matter of defense.⁹⁸

The appointment of a representative for the infant being a traversable fact, it should be alleged.⁹⁹ It need not be averred that the consent of the next friend to the appointment has been filed.¹

96. Stewart v. Chadwick, 8 Iowa 462, 463. Compare Keys v. McDonald, 1 Handy (Ohio) 287, 12 Ohio Dec (Reprint) 146, holding that the process should show the infant's correct age.

Thrall*, 44 Barb. 173; Hulbert v. Young, 13 How. Pr. 413. Tenn.—Robertson v. Robertson, 2 Swan 197, appointment must be shown by the record.

[a] But in Bent v. Maxwell, Land Grant & R. Co., 3 N. M. 167, it was held unnecessary that the bill should show an order appointing a prochein ami had been entered of record before the bill was filed. The recital of the fact that the infants appear by a next friend is sufficient, the presumption being that whatever steps if any were necessary to warrant that appearance had been properly taken before the bill was brought. See, however, Wilson v. Vandyke, 2 Harr. (Del.) 29, holding that the pleading should show permission from the court for the next friend to sue.

[b] A mistake in the allegation as to whom the appointment was made by does not conclude the plaintiff on a motion to dismiss. Albrecht v. Canfield, 92 Hun 240, 36 N. Y. Supp. 940.

In actions by or through guardian, see 10 STANDARD PROC. 868, et seq.

[c] Manner of appointment need not be alleged. In re Snyder, 136 N. Y. Supp. 670.

1. Dodd v. Moore, 91 Ind. 522; Lumpkins v. Justice, 1 Ind. 557.

Right of or Damage to Infant — The declaration or complaint should show that right or obligation sued upon belongs to the infant,² and that he is entitled to the damages claimed.³

A complaint for the breach of a promise of marriage need not aver the consent of the parent or guardian although plaintiff is an infant.⁴

b Demurrer. — Where the plaintiff's infancy is not apparent from the declaration or complaint the fact that he purports to be suing by a next friend or guardian is not ground for demurrer.⁵ But where the legal incapacity of the plaintiff to sue because of his infancy is apparent on the face of the complaint, it may be objected to by demurrer,⁶ as may the failure to allege the authority of the next friend, guardian, or guardian ad litem, to represent him in the action.⁷

c Plea in Abatement. — Where a suit is brought by a minor in his own name, without representation, his incapacity to sue may be pleaded in abatement if not apparent from the face of the complaint.⁸ At common law, if infancy is not pleaded in abatement, the objection is

3. Damage to Plaintiff. — In an action to recover back money obtained of the plaintiff, a minor, it is not necessary to make any other than the general allegation of damage to the plaintiff. Kellogg v. Kimball, 122 Mass. 163.

[a] In an action for damages for personal injuries the infant plaintiff must allege facts sufficient to show that he is personally liable for medical services rendered necessitated by the injuries but not paid for. An allegation to the effect that he had incurred liability for such necessary services, is, however, sufficient without stating that there are no persons upon whom the law places the liability. Gibbs v. Poplar Bluff L. & P. Co., 142 Mo. App. 19, 125 S. W. 840. Compare Karpenski v. South River, 83 N. J. L. 149, 83 Atl. 639.

Where plaintiff sued on the common counts for services rendered for defendant while plaintiff was a minor, the defendant answered "that said services were rendered in compliance with a contract made between plaintiff and defendant . . . and that the plaintiff, after he was of full age, and with a full knowledge of the facts, ratified and confirmed said agreement." On demurrer, the averment of ratification was held sufficient. Voiles v. Beard, 58 Ind. 510.

21. A complaint in an action against an infant for necessities (1) is sufficient if it contains allegations which if alleged in a declaration at common law would have stated a cause of action of debt, for board and lodging, or goods furnished. *Goodman v. Such an answer pro forma leaves the plaintiff to prove his case and throws the infant upon the protection of the court.' 2 Kent Com. 258." Braswell v. Downs, 11 Fla. 62.

As to judgments by default, see infra, I, G. 2.

[c] Effect of Answer.—(1) The answer of an infant, however, neither admits nor denies the matters set forth in the bill and the effect of it is to put the complainant to the proof of all the material averments in his bill. Rieman v. Von Kapff, 76 Md. 417, 25 Atl. 387. (2) An infant cannot be bound by the answer of his guardian, if he shows his dissent to it within the proper time, although such answer will be evidence against him if at such time he neither amends nor makes a new answer, which he may do. *Prutzman v. [e] Objection to Jurisdiction. There are no exceptions in favor of infants to the statutory requirements, that objections to the jurisdiction of the court must be taken in the mode is neither evidence in his favor³⁰ nor against him.³¹ It has been held that the answer of an infant cannot be excepted to for insufficiency.³²

Form of Answer.—While a guardian ad litem should make a full and specific answer,³³ since the court will not permit the infant's rights to be prejudiced by the guardian's failure to do his duty in this respect,³⁴ a formal answer which neither admits nor denies the plaintiff's allegations but places the infant under the protection of the court, is held to be sufficient, being equivalent to a denial of the plaintiff's case.³⁵

(II.) Infancy as a Defense.—The plea of infancy is a personal privilege, available only to the infant,³⁶ or his heirs,³⁷ or personal representative,³⁸ but not to persons merely in privity of estate.³⁹ The general rule is that this defense to become available must be pleaded specially,⁴⁰ though it would seem that this rule does not apply to a defend-prescribed. Boyd v. Martin, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 382.

[b] In an action upon a mortgage executed by a husband and his infant wife, a plea of infancy to be sufficient must, in addition to the allegation of the wife's minority, either aver that ant who is still an infant and therefore under the protection of the court,⁴¹ and it has been held that this defense may be proved under the general issue,⁴² and that the plea of infancy is not a dilatory plea but one going to the foundation of the action.⁴³

c. Replication.—In actions at law, matters in avoidance of a plea of infancy, such as ratification, should be pleaded in the replication.⁴⁴

3. Verification of Infant's Pleadings.—The pleadings of an infant may be verified by his next friend or guardian ad litem.⁴⁵ Because the guardian ad litem may know nothing of the facts the answer of the infant need not be verified in some states,⁴⁶ though verification may be

The answer pleaded infancy, denied concealment of non-age and alleged that agent of plaintiff knew of defendant's infancy at the time of the sale. Knowledge of the agent was denied by replication. The court held that the denial of the defendant that he concealed his infancy was not a good plea. 4. Time To Plead.⁴⁸ — Where the rules of court specify a definite time in which dilatory pleas must be filed, such time does not begin to run against an infant until the appointment of his guardian ad litem.⁴⁹

5. Amendment of Pleadings. — A mere defect in the form of the pleadings as bringing the action in the name of the next friend rather than in the name of the infant,⁵⁰ or in not stating in the complaint that the infants suing are the only ones entitled to bring the action⁵¹ may be cured by amendment. In some jurisdictions in equity, facts overcoming a plea of infancy should be introduced by amendment into the bill in equity.⁵²

6. Admissions in Pleadings. — An admission in a pleading is not binding upon the infant.⁵³

7. Parol Demurrer. — In actions at law involving his inheritance in lands the infant, at common law, could interpose what was called his parol demurrer, for the purpose of staying the action until his majority. This practice is now obsolete.⁵⁴

proper circumstances discontinue his action.⁶² An action on contract, against several defendants may be discontinued as to one of them who establishes the defense of infancy, without affecting the proceedings against the others.⁶³

F. TRIAL.—1. Generally.—The general rules governing trials apply to cases to which infants are parties.⁶⁴

2. Trial by Jury.⁶⁵—It has been held that a trial by jury cannot be waived by an infant party,⁶⁶ nor by a special guardian,⁶⁷ but a judgment rendered by the court without a jury is not void.⁶⁸

3. Questions of Law and Fact.—The question of the infancy of a party is one of fact for the jury,⁶⁹ but the question of the due appointment of a next friend is for the court.⁷⁰

The question of whether there has in fact been a ratification,⁷¹ or an avoidance of an infant's deed or contract⁷² is a question for the jury,

[a] Time of Trial.—In case an infant appears and makes an issue, it may be noticed for trial at once, like other issues. Newins v. Baird, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 306.

[a] The case was not prematurely submitted where an answer for the infant was filed some three months previously, denying the allegations of the amended petition, and the answer of the guardian ad litem, to the effect that he had examined the record in the case and was unable to make any defense other than that already made, was filed before judgment. Childers v. Bales (Ky.), 124 S. W. 295.

[b] Control of Action.—After issue joined the guardian ad litem may accept short notice of trial, pursuant to his right to control the action. Newins v. Baird, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 306. See generally, 10 STANDARD PROC. 754. Compare supra, 1, B. 2, c, (VI).

as is also the question whether such action was taken within a reasonable time.⁷³

Whether alleged negligence⁷⁴ or fraud⁷⁵ of an infant is a question of law or one of fact, is determined in accordance with general rules elsewhere discussed.

Necessaries.—The question as to whether the articles, claimed in a particular case to be necessaries, are such is a mixed question of law and fact;⁷⁶ it is a question for the court to determine whether or not the articles in question belong to a class that are necessaries,⁷⁷ and it is for the jury to determine whether they are necessary and suitable to the estate and condition of the infant.⁷⁸

b. When Cause Should Be Referred. — In cases of compromise or where a consent decree is entered, it is usual to refer the cause to a master to inquire if the decree be for the benefit of the minor.⁸³ The next friend cannot withdraw himself from the suit without a reference to a master.⁸⁴

c. Notice. — All parties in interest including infants, upon a reference to a master, should be given notice of proceedings in the master's office.⁸⁵

[a] Effect of Failure To Notify Guardian Ad Litem.—Where testimony is taken before a master in chancery without any notice to the guardian ad litem of infant defendants, it is not admissible as against the infants, for want of notice, and this is true, even though the guardian may have made no objection at the hearing. Boyer v. Boyer, 89 Ill. 447; Turner v. Jenkins, 79 Ill. 228. See Mote v. Morton, 52 Fla. 548, 555, 41 So. 607.

[b] The failure of the master to give notice cannot be waived or cured as far as the infant defendants are concerned, by the fact that the guardian ad litem had notice of the application for the final decree, and did not appear to resist the same. Mote v. Morton, 52 Fla. 548, 553, 41 So. 607.

[c] It is the duty of the master to see that all parties entitled to notice are duly summoned and to preserve the notices with proof of service and his report should show this fact. Mote v. Morton, 52 Fla. 548, 552, 41 So. 607.

5. Variance.⁸⁵ — As in other actions the evidence, in actions against infants, must correspond with and establish the allegations in the complaint or petition.⁸⁷

6. Verdict and Findings.⁸⁸ — A statute providing that findings may be waived by the several parties to an issue of fact, includes infants as well as adults.⁸⁹

A verdict cannot be based upon infancy where it has not been properly made an issue.⁹⁰ But a verdict may be in favor of an infant defendant because of his infancy and against his adult co-defendants.⁹¹

G. JUDGMENT OR DECREE.⁹² — 1. Generally. — A judgment must be upon the issues presented, in an action against an infant.⁹³ The judgment in favor of⁹⁴ or against⁹⁵ the infant should be rendered for or against him individually and not for or against his next friend or guardian.⁹⁶

[a] The proper form of judgment is to recite that the plaintiff by her next friend, naming him, do have and recover the amount of the judgment for the sole use of the minor, and the judgment should also recite that the money when collected is to remain in court until the qualification of a regular guardian or the minor reaches his majority. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Stuart, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 642, 20 S. W. 962.

[a] No judgment against a party as guardian, can have the effect to charge either the person or the estate of the infant ward. Tobin v. Addison, 2 Strobb. L. (S. C.) 3.

[b] Mere technical inaccuracy in the description of the capacity in which the representative of the infant appears does not render the proceedings and judgment void. Martin v. Weyman, 26 Tex. 460, 468.

The decree or judgment in favor of an infant and other co-parties should not be joint where it would thus become possible for the co-parties to collect or enforce the judgment without security to the infant,⁹⁷ though such a judgment or decree may be binding upon the adult co-parties.⁹⁸ It should be entered at the time prescribed by law.⁹⁹

A decree for the conveyance of infant's lands is proper according to some¹ but not according to other authorities.²

2. Judgment by Default.—A judgment taken by default against an infant is erroneous and voidable,³ but such a judgment is not

97. Armstrong v. Walkup, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 372.

98. If the adults file a petition for a partition of land belonging to them and some minors, a decree in conformity to their prayer although not binding on the minors is, however, conclusive on them by way of estoppel. Kindell v. Titus, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 727, 742.

99. See generally the titles "Decrees," "Judgments."

[a] It is not necessary that twenty days shall elapse between the appointment of a guardian ad litem and the entry of judgment against the infant except in case of judgment by default. Newins v. Baird, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 306.

[b] The fact that the guardian ad litem consents to the entry as of a date prior to the actual rendition of the decree, does not show fraud where the purpose was merely to get an earlier hearing on an appeal. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 124 U. S. 659, 10 Sup. Ct. 638, 33 L. ed. 1917.

[a] An infant is entitled to his day in court after becoming of age even though his answer to the bill, made by his guardian admitted the case to be as alleged. Lockwood v. Stradley, 1 Del. Ch. 298.

[b] Form of Saving Clause.—See Hendricks v. McLean, 18 Mo. 32, 40, the saving clause of the decree was as follows: "And this decree is to be binding on the infant, unless, being served with process for that purpose, he shall, within six months after he shall have attained his age of twenty-one years, show unto this court, good cause to the contrary." See also MéLemore v. Chicago, etc. R. Co., 58 Miss. 514.

[c] A judgment in ejectment did not divest the infant of property but simply held he had no title, and consequently reservation of a day to show cause against it is improper. Paragould Trust Co. v. Perrin, 103 Ark. 67, 145 S. W. 886.

[d] Saving Clause in Interlocutory Decree.—(1) Where it is objected that no day was given to infant to show cause against the decree after she came of age, it is sufficient to answer that the decree is only interlocutory, and that this omission may be corrected hereafter. Pickett v. Chilton, 5 Munf. (Va.) 467. (2) See Winston v. Campbell, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 477, wherein one of the defendants against whom there had been an interlocutory decree during his minority, was allowed, upon coming of full age, to amend his answer upon motion.

[a] An application by a guardian to sell his ward's real estate is in reality an application by the infant, or on her behalf, for power and authority to do acts for her benefit and interest and cannot be regarded as proceedings against the infant and hence does not entitle the infant to any other day in court unless upon suggestion, as amicus curiae, it should appear that the guardian was about to abuse the trust, or was seeking power to injure and misapply the estate. Mason v. Wait, 5 Ill. 127, 133.

[b] Where There Is Fraud on the Part of the Next Friend.—Probably where the infant's realty is involved, a minor complainant who has obtained less than he is entitled to or has a decree rendered against him may vacate the judgment where there has been fraud, collusion or misstatement of his rights by his next friend. Bennett v.

A decree failing to give such right is not void so as to subject it to attack collaterally.⁴⁷ The substance of this practice has been preserved by statutes giving the infant a certain time after arriving at majority to attack the decree, and in such case it is unnecessary to reserve that right in the decree itself.⁴⁸ In some jurisdictions, however, statutes make no such exception to the conclusiveness of a decree, in the case of infants.⁴⁹ In others, the rule allowing an infant a day after minority is abrogated by statute authorizing the appointment of a guardian ad litem.⁵⁰

Statutes which give an infant the right to show cause against a judgment, do not extend that right beyond those cases in which under the old practice such right was reserved in the decree.⁵¹ The right of the infant must be limited to the extent of showing cause existing at the rendition of the decree, and not such as afterwards arose.⁵²

An infant is not entitled to a day in court after attaining his majority to show cause against a judgment ordering the sale of his lands.⁵³ But he has this right where he is directed to convey.⁵⁴

Where the right to show cause was reserved in the decree, the infant upon attaining majority could by appropriate process be brought into court for the purpose of having the decree made absolute,⁵⁵ and a similar practice is sometimes provided by statute.⁵⁶ Until made absolute, the decree was of no force against the infant.⁵⁷

Concluding Infant at Earlier Date Than Statutory Limit.—Where our statute allows an infant three years after full age to assail a decree, the party interested in concluding the infant defendant at an earlier day may within six months after he attains the age of twenty-one years, summon him to appear and show cause against the decree, or serve him with a copy of it. *McLemore v. Statutes frequently make special provision for the setting aside of judgments against infants.⁶⁸

After attaining majority, see supra, I, G, 8; infra, I, G, 9, f.

The infant may be estopped from denying the validity of the decree by having received benefits under it.⁶⁹

Ratification of Irregularities.—Where after attaining majority, the infant takes some step in the action, such as a motion for new trial or an appeal, he thereby ratifies the previous proceedings and is bound by any subsequent determination or disposition thereof.⁷⁰

As Against Bona Fide Purchasers.—It has been held that an irregular judgment against an infant will not be set aside to the prejudice of bona fide purchasers without notice.⁷¹

b. Grounds.—(I.) Generally.—As the rights and interests of infants are under the special protection of courts of equity, they may in general vacate every judgment by which injustice has been done the infant,⁷² but such relief will not be granted for mere technical errors in the procedure.⁷³ The infant may set up only such grounds as relate to his own interests.⁷⁴

In some jurisdictions any error or irregularity which might have been but was not corrected by motion for new trial or by appeal, is not sufficient ground for setting aside the judgment.⁷⁵

(II.) Particular Grounds.—If it appears that the infant's interests were not properly cared for,⁷⁶ as where the guardian, intentionally or otherwise, failed to disclose important facts in the case,⁷⁷ an adverse judgment may be set aside.

Laches.—Likewise if the minor is guilty of laches he cannot impeach a judgment rendered against him.¹⁰

g. Parties.—In proceedings to set aside a judgment the infant should not be represented by one who was guilty of the alleged misconduct in the proceedings.¹¹

When an infant attempts to impeach a decree ordering the sale of his property he must make a party to the proceedings him who holds the property under the decree;¹² but in attacking a judgment against him he need not join in his action parties who have no further interest in the litigation and against whom no relief is sought.¹³

h. Notice to Adverse Parties.—Proceedings to set aside a decree by the infant, on coming of age, can only be had on notice to the other parties to the decree.¹⁴ But a want of notice is waived by filing

[b] If he fails to serve such notice the proceeding is irregular and subjects his bill to a demurrer or to a

answer, even though the want of notice is pleaded therein.¹⁵

i. Pleadings.—The bill or complaint of the infant should disclose his right to show cause against the judgment;¹⁶ it should show that the action is brought within the time allowed by statute,¹⁷ the grounds upon which the attack is made,¹⁸ and must show a good defense to the original action.¹⁹ The judgment or order, it has been held, should be set forth.²⁰

The adverse party is entitled to meet the case made by the infant, with appropriate pleadings.²¹

j. Review and Determination.—The whole record will be examined for error.²² The court will not, however, set aside the judgment or decree for error or irregularity which did not prejudice the infant's substantial rights.²³ When the court vacates a decree it will place the parties in statu quo as nearly as can be conveniently done,²⁴ and 20. Ryan v. Fielder, 99 Ark. 374, 138 S. W. 973.

21. Answer.—The adversary party, where the infant attacks the judgment on errors of fact as well as law, has a right to answer. Park v. Bolinger, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 303, 8 S. W. 914, but it was not decided whether he would be limited to a demurrer or a plea of subsequent release of error if the attack was on errors of law only.

22. On application in any form showing cause against a decree, by an infant, the whole record will be examined to find such error, just as on an appeal by an adult. Lafferty v. Lafferty, 42 W. Va. 783, 26 S. E. 262.

23. See Hebron v. Kelly, 77 Miss. 48, 23 So. 641, 25 So. 877.

[a] Showing Required.—A judgment should not be vacated on motion or complaint until it is adjudged that there is a valid defense to the action in which the judgment was rendered, since the statute contemplates setting aside a judgment only for such errors as affect the substantial rights of the infant, and where actual injustice has been done him. Martin v. Gwynn, 90 Ark. 44, 117 S. W. 754; Richards v. Richards, 10 Bush (Ky.) 617.

[b] When the rights of third parties without notice have intervened and the infant has suffered no substantial wrong an irregular judgment against him will not be set aside. Harris v. Bennett, 160 N. C. 339, 344, 76 S. E. 217; Syme v. Trice, 96 N. C. 243, 246, 1 S. E. 480.

will render such a decree as should have been rendered in the first instance even to changing property and possession, although the inconvenience to others may be considerable.²⁵

10. Enforcement of Judgment.²⁶—An execution may issue against an infant's property upon a judgment rendered against him, as in the case of an adult;²⁷ but an execution against the infant's property on a judgment against the guardian is void.²⁸ If there is a guardianship proceeding pending, the judgment instead of directing the issuance of execution may decree that the amount be paid through that proceeding.²⁹

The probate court may issue an order commanding the guardian to pay a judgment against his ward.³⁰ The execution should follow the form of the judgment,³¹ but a variance between the judgment and execution is cured by statute in some states.³²

32. Act of Assembly, 1848; Marshall v. Fisher, 46 N. C. 111, 117.

Restraining or Staying Enforcement.³³ — An infant may procure an injunction suspending the levy of an execution until he can go before the court in which the judgment was rendered and show error in it.³⁴ And it has been held that an execution sale of the infant's property may be enjoined where a sale under authority of the probate court would prevent loss to the ward's creditors.³⁵ The court may withhold the issuance of the execution or prevent any step toward the collection of a judgment in favor of the infant until there is a proper person authorized to receive the money for him.³⁶ But the fact that the court has ordered the next friend to give bond before receiving the proceeds of the execution does not prevent the officer from enforcing the execution.³⁷

H. NEW TRIAL.³⁸ — New trial, in actions to which infants are parties, is governed by the general rules applicable to this subject,³⁹ except where there are statutory provisions specially applicable to infants, as there are in some jurisdictions.⁴⁰

I. APPEAL AND REVIEW.⁴¹ — 1. Generally. — The remedies by way of appeal,⁴² petition in error,⁴³ and certiorari⁴⁴ are available to an infant against whom a judgment has been rendered.

[a] Limitation on Right To Restrain. — Where an infant was personally served but no guardian ad litem was appointed to represent him, and the record was silent as to his non-age and a default judgment was taken against him, he is not entitled to restrain the levy of an execution issued upon the judgment without taking steps to vacate or modify the same. *Cook v. 37. Oxford K. Mills v. Sutton, 127 Ga. 162, 56 S. E. 298, as payment to the lawfully authorized officer will be protection for the defendant, and the officer must see that the bond has been

2. Parties.—All persons who appear by the record to be interested in the action should be made parties to the appeal or writ of error.⁴⁷ An infant should prosecute his appeal by his next friend or guardian ad litem,⁴⁸ who may appeal without any appointment or permission

Supp. 445; 10 STANDARD PROC. 805.

[c] Appeal on Behalf of Several. An appeal should not be dismissed because not joined in by certain interested minors where the body of the notice includes their names as appealing by their guardian ad litem, P., although it is signed by P. on behalf of all the parties as "their attorney" only, since he thereby purports to represent all the parties as attorney and it was not essential that he also sign as guardian ad litem for part of them. *Noble v. [a] It is irregular for a minor to appeal by himself instead of through his guardian but the court acquires jurisdiction regardless of §§3480, 3482 of the code which require an infant to sue and defend by guardian, and he affirms his action by resisting a motion to dismiss after attaining his majority. *First Nat. See infra, I, K, 1, b.

[b] Where the statute is silent as to the method in which an infant shall appeal the rules of the common law govern. Cook v. Adams, 27 Ala. 294.

[c] Appeal Alone as Poor Person. Under the Indiana code an infant plaintiff may prosecute his appeal as a poor person without a next friend. Hood v. Pearson, 67 Ind. 368.

[d] Appeal by Third Person.—By statute the general guardian or guardian ad litem may appeal for an infant, but a third person cannot in his individual capacity take an appeal in behalf of such minor from an order denying his petition for the removal of their general guardian. In re McLaughlin, 101 Wis. 672, 78 N. W. 144.

[e] In Tennessee any person who will give the bond required by law may sue out a writ of error for an infant as his next friend. Ridgely v. Bennett, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 206.

on the part of the appellate court.⁴⁹ The guardian ad litem cannot, however, appeal in his own name.⁵⁰ If the guardian fails to appeal on behalf of the infant, some one as next friend may do so.⁵¹

Since the prosecution of a writ of error is in the nature of a new suit, the minor may select a different person to represent him than the guardian ad litem or next friend in the lower court,⁵² and a guardian whose interests are adverse to those of the infant will not be permitted to appeal for him.⁵³ The authority of a next friend to represent the minor expires on the majority of the infant;⁵⁴ he cannot thereafter sue out writ of error.⁵⁵

3. Time for Instituting.—Statutes in some states permit an infant to take appropriate proceedings for the review of a judgment against him, at any time during his minority⁵⁶ and within a given time after attaining majority.⁵⁷ In the absence of such statute, how-

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Run Pending Disability.—The statute of limitations cannot be pleaded in bar to writs of error prosecuted by infant plaintiffs unless the statutory limit of time has expired since the infant arrived at his majority. McKee v. Hann, 9 Dana (Ky.) 526.

[b] Where judgment is rendered against an infant and adult defendants and error is brought by all after the expiration of a year from the rendition of judgment but within a year from the time that the infant attained his majority, such writ of error is not barred by the statute of limitations but is within the saving clause. Priest v. Hamilton, 2 Tyler (Vt.) 44, 50.

[c] Where the proceedings in laying out a street over land belonging to minors, were erroneous for failure to give any previous notice, and to make any estimate of the amount of damages sustained by the owners, and where more than a year elapsed before either of the owners came of age, a writ of certiorari was ordered on a petition filed by one of the owners at the first term after he came of age, although notice had been given to the tenant in possession to remove the buildings from the land, and he had communicated that notice to the guardian of said minors within a year after the street was thus laid out. Stone v. City of Boston, 2 Mete. (Mass.) 220.

4. Bond.—The person representing the infant must give the required security for costs unless the statute otherwise provides.⁵⁹ He may waive an appeal bond by the adverse party.⁶⁰

5. Service of Process and Papers.—Service of notice or other process pertaining to an appeal to which an infant is a party respondent, should be made upon the latter's representative,⁶¹ or otherwise as provided by statute.⁶²

6. Dismissal of Appeal.—It has been held that an infant's appeal, being an act voidable by the infant, may be dismissed on motion of the guardian ad litem.⁶³ An infant's appeal will not ordinarily be

58. When the statute has no saving or exception clause in regard to infants they must take proceedings for the direct attack upon motion for a new trial, appeal or similar proceedings within the same time that is required of adults. Welsh v. Koch, 4 Cal. App. 571, 88 Pac. 604.

[a] Consent decree cannot be set aside by appeal at subsequent term; the only remedy available is an original bill in the nature of a bill of review. Jones v. McKenna, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 630.

59. Ridgely v. Bennett, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 206; Daniel v. Mason, 90 Tex. 162, 37 S. W. 1061; Tanner v. Ames' Estate (Tex.), 37 S. W. 373; Simon v. Blanchett (Tex. Civ. App.), 37 S. W. 346. See also Swain v. Follows, 18 Q. B. D. 585. See in general the titles "Appeal Bonds;" "Undertakings."

[a] In Texas (1) a guardian ad litem is not required to give bond to perfect appeal or writ of error taken by him in his fiduciary capacity. Simon v. Blanchett (Tex. Civ. App.), 37 S. W. 346. (2) But in Daniel v. Mason, 90 Tex. 162, 37 S. W. 1061, it was held that art. 2106, Vernons Sayle's Tex. Civ. St., 1914, applies only to appeals and writs of error to the court of civil appeals and not to proceedings on error from the court of civil appeals to the supreme court.

[b] The infant need not join with the next friend in an appeal bond. Biggins v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 110 S. W. 561.

[c] A guardian ad litem is liable individually on an appeal bond, whether or not he has authority to bind the estate of the infant. Harper v. Cilly, 25 Ohio C. C. 770.

[d] The infant plaintiff does not lose his right of appeal by reason of the fact that his guardian ad litem has become insolvent and hence unable to pay defendant's costs. Wice v. Commercial Ins. Co., 7 Daly (N. Y.) 258.

[e] Effect of Failure To File Bond. Instead of dismissing the appeal for the guardian ad litem's failure to file the required bond, the court may retain the record for a reasonable length of time and to enable appellant to serve the undertaking, file it below, and have it properly certified up by amended return. Tyson v. Tyson, 94 Wis. 225, 68 N. W. 1015. See generally the title "Undertakings."

60. A guardian ad litem or next friend may waive the execution of an appeal bond by the opposite party. Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 10 Sup. Ct. 638, 33 L. ed. 1047.

61. Vickers v. Hawkins, 128 Ga. 794, 58 S. E. 44.

62. The Oklahoma statute (1) provides for service of process upon a petition in error as in the commencement of an action, or upon the infant's attorney of record. Rev. Laws, 1910, §5238; Bruner v. Nordmier (Okla.), 150 Pac. 159; Groves Nat. Bank v. Baker (Okla.), 148 Pac. 714; Scott v. Brown, 40 Okla. 184, 137 Pac. 113. (2) Service on the next friend (Groves Nat. Bank v. Baker [Okla.], 148 Pac. 714), (3) or guardian only (Scott v. Brown, 40 Okla. 184, 137 Pac. 113), is insufficient.

[a] The infant's attorney may waive in writing the issuing or service of process. Bruner v. Nordmier (Okla.), 150 Pac. 159, construing Rev. Laws, 1910, §5239.

63. Such motion made by the guardian at the term next after that at which he was appointed was held to have been seasonably made because he had not, at the term when he was appointed, dismissed because he is not properly represented,⁶⁴ or because of irregularity in perfecting it.⁶⁵

7. Hearing and Determination.—An appeal by the infant brings up the whole record for review.⁶⁶

It is the duty of an appellate court to protect the rights of infants and to give them the benefit of every ground of defense of which they might have availed themselves in the court below, either in the way of pleading or objections to incompetent or illegal evidence, even though the infants have not appealed from the decree below or assigned or argued any errors in the appellate court,⁶⁷ but this rule is not always strictly adhered to.⁶⁸ Thus, where the infant is represented by a guardian ad litem and by competent counsel, errors not affecting had opportunity to consider his position and the rights of his ward. Robbins v. Cutler, 26 N. H. 173.

Compare Byrnes v. Butte Brew. Co., 44 Mont. 328, 119 Pac. 788, referring to some of the above cases and distinguishing them by saying in every instance the errors affected the fundamental rights of the infant.

[a] Finding Against Infancy.—In an action before a justice the defendant pleaded infancy, and the justice from examination was of the opinion that he was not an infant and did not appoint a guardian, and the jury found that the defendant was not an infant. On appeal it was held that the infancy of the defendant could not be assigned for error, it being against the record, and the fact as found by the jury. Ingersoll v. Wilson, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 437.

[b] Where the evidence is conflicting the judgment will not be reversed for insufficiency of evidence, following the general rule in such cases. Webster v. Page, 54 Iowa 461, 6 N. W. 716.

[c] Absence of Evidence.—(1) A reversal of a decree against an infant simply because the evidence is not in the record, will not be ordered. McEndree v. McEndree, 12 Ind. 97; Alexander v. Frary, 9 Ind. 481. (2) But where the record is silent, and no proof of plaintiff's claim against the infant appears to have been offered, the error is fundamental and will be considered although it has not been specifically assigned. Stammers v. McNaughten, 57 Ala. 277. See also Footall's Succession, 32 La. Ann. 97.

[d] Release or Waiver of Errors. Where a writ of error is brought to reverse a judgment recovered on a note against an infant, who appeared by attorney, a promise, made by him after he became of age to pay the note, is neither a release nor a waiver of the error, nor a bar to a writ of error. Goodridge v. Ross, 6 Mete. (Ky.) 487. See generally the titles "Appeals," vol. 2, p. 472; "Writ of Error."

the substantial rights of the infant which were not saved by objection and exception will not justify a reversal, in the absence of fraud or collusion.^{68a} If the infant does not appeal the court cannot, on the appeal of an adverse party, grant relief to the infant, though it may make such disposition of the case as will permit the infant to protect his rights in the court below.⁶⁹

Where the record fails to show that the infant was properly represented in the action below, the judgment may be reversed.⁷⁰ But the failure to have a guardian ad litem appointed for the appeal may be cured by an appointment in the appellate court.⁷¹

A judgment may be affirmed as to an infant and reversed as to his adult co-parties,⁷² or affirmed as to the latter and reversed as to the infant,⁷³ unless the judgment is necessarily joint as to all the parties.⁷⁴

69. Where the court dismisses a bill and likewise the cross-bill of the infant defendant and the complainant appeals, the upper court has no power to re-instate the cross-bill or to grant any relief upon it. But the court may reverse and remand the cause so that the guardian ad litem of the infant may file another cross-bill, if necessary to protect his rights. Parks v. Parks, 66 Ala. 326.

and infant defendants are not liable for costs,⁷⁷ but the next friend or guardian ad litem may be taxed with costs.⁷⁸ In some jurisdictions, however, an infant plaintiff⁷⁹ or defendant⁸⁰ is liable for the costs of suit.

In equity cases costs against an infant follow the general rule and rest in the court's discretion.⁸¹ Whether an infant will be allowed his costs against the adverse party depends upon the general rules governing the allowance of costs.⁸²

[c] Where Plaintiff Ignorant of Infancy.—In Knapp v. Crosby, 1 Mass. 479, the court would not award costs to the infant plaintiff in error "because it did not appear that the original plaintiff knew that the defendant was an infant at the time of the recovery of the judgment."

[d] An infant who incurred a liability by holding himself out as an adult copartner, and who recovers judgment relieving him of liability because of his infancy will not be allowed his costs, costs being within the court's discretion under Code Civ. Proc., §3229. Yamato Trading Co. v. Hoexter, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 491.

[e] An infant administrator cannot recover costs of filing a cross-bill filed as if he had been an adult when the suit was commenced,⁸³ and his representative will be released from any liability;⁸⁴ but if on reaching majority, he disclaims all benefit of the proceeding he cannot be held liable for costs.⁸⁵

Compensation of a guardian ad litem or next friend is sometimes taxable as an item of costs.⁸⁶

2. Security for Costs.—At common law the right to demand security for costs when there is an infant plaintiff is denied,⁸⁷ for the reasons that the infant did not choose his next friend and that the court which is always anxious to have cases in which infants were concerned brought to its notice has jurisdiction to stay such suits if not for the infant's benefit,⁸⁸ but this rule does not apply to appeals by the infant.⁸⁹

A next friend who seeks to withdraw, however, will be required to give security for costs.⁹⁰ And in some jurisdictions a guardian or next friend cannot commence a suit on behalf of an infant without first giving bond and security for costs.⁹¹ While in others, the requiring of security rests in the discretion of the court.⁹²

There is no necessity for an intervention on the part of the late infant, the amendment of the record or suggestion of majority thereon being sufficient for this purpose.¹⁹ It is not required that the plaintiff file an amended petition.²⁰

b. Where Unrepresented. — If pending the action of an infant who is not represented by guardian, he reaches majority, he may adopt the action thus erroneously commenced and ratify what has been done therein,²¹ upon which the action will proceed with the same effect as if it had been properly commenced.²² There is no necessity for any amendment of the record.²³

II. JUDICIAL EMANCIPATION.—A. IN GENERAL.—Provision is sometimes made for the removal of the disabilities of non-age by a petition in equity, but courts of chancery have such power only when conferred by statute.³⁰

B. COMPLIANCE WITH STATUTE.—The proceeding being purely statutory should be in substantial conformance with the requirements of the statute;³¹ a literal compliance, however, is not necessary.³²

[a] "In this country, from an early day, courts of the highest respectability have refused to follow the English rule, and have held that, where it is for the benefit of the minor, courts of equity have the power, by virtue of their general jurisdiction over the estates of minors and others under disability, to authorize a change from real to personal and from personal to real, this question arose in 1809, in Huger v. Huger, 3 Dessausure 18, decided by the Court of Chancery of South Carolina, and the court, after showing that the reason upon which the English rule was based did not exist in this country, reached the conclusion that it had the undoubted jurisdiction to authorize the change." Hale v. Hale, 146 Ill. 227, 250, 33 N. E. 858, 20 L. R. A. 247.

[b] A court of equity, as the guardian of infants, has full power in its discretion to authorize or confirm a private sale of lands belonging to such a person. Sutton v. Schonwald, 86 N. C. 198, 202; Rowland v. Thompson, 73 N. C. 504.

[c] "The principal reason for denying this jurisdiction in England appears to be, that by changing the nature of the minor's estate from real to personal or from personal to real, the rights of third persons who will be entitled in case of the minor's death will be materially affected, as in that country real and personal property descend in different channels. That reason, it is very manifest, does not obtain in this country, as here, both species of property go by descent or distribution to the same persons. The interference of the court, therefore, in sanctioning a conversion of the property from real to personal or from personal to real, does not materially affect the rights of the persons who, in case of the minor's death, may become entitled to succeed to his estate. But even in England, cases are to be found where the power to authorize a change in the nature of the estate of minors has been exercised and upheld, where such changes were manifestly for the minor's benefit." Hale v. Hale, 146 Ill. 227, 33 N. E. 858, 20 L. R. A. 247.

[d] "The chancery proceedings now under consideration cannot be considered a nullity, even if the court went beyond its powers. That court has always had jurisdiction over the person and estates of minors, and while it must be exercised according to law, equitable estates of minors.⁵⁶ So it is held that courts of equity have full power to authorize the conversion of property contrary to the provisions of a will and differing from the purpose and plans of the testator, where there is a necessity for such conversion for the preservation of the estate.⁵⁷

But in other jurisdictions courts of chancery are held not to have any inherent power to sell the real estate of minors, their powers in this respect being only statutory,⁵⁸ since the inherent power of the court yet if the court exceeds its powers under the law, it is not a naked assumption of power, as might be the case if the tribunal had no such jurisdiction. Its actions, then, being not a nullity, but, if void at all, only relatively so, strangers cannot disregard it." Kearney v. Vaughan, 50 Mo. 284, 288.

[e] Infants Whose Parents Are Living.—Property belonging to the minor, both of whose parents are living, may be sold or mortgaged, or any other step taken affecting their interest, in the same manner and with the same forms as in case of minors represented by tutors, the father occupying the place and being clothed with the powers of the tutor. Dauterive v. Shaw, 47 La. Ann. 882, 888, 17 So. 345.

[f] Order of Sale at Chambers or in Vacation.—A court of chancery has no power to grant at chambers an order for the sale of the legal estate of minors. Richards v. East Tennessee, etc. R. Co., 106 Ga. 614, 634, 33 S. E. 193, 45 L. R. A. 712; Rogers v. Pace, 75 Ga. 436; Pughsley v. Pughsley, 75 Ga. 95, 96.

[g] Unborn Children.—(1) Apart from legislative authority, a court has no power to decree the sale of property of minor heirs so as to affect the rights of unborn children in the same property. A decree affecting the property rights of unborn children is absolutely void as to them. Rome Land Co. v. Eastman, 80 Ga. 683, 6 S. E. 586. (2) "Even the power of the legislature to enact laws authorizing sales of land to affect the title of parties not in being has been questioned almost as often as it has been exerted; and it was only after a serious contest and struggle that such laws have been finally sustained by the courts as constitutional and valid." Downin v. Sprecher, 35 Md. 474, 482.

[a] "The exercise of this jurisdiction, through the process of petition, however originating, has been sanctioned and confirmed by long established practice; and the right of the court in this respect is no more to be disputed than its right to order the sale of property for investment under the more expensive procedure, by bill." *Bulow v. [b] Impossibility to carry out a last will and testament is, and was in 1887, a ground for decreeing a sale of real estate devised to minors, although the will itself directs that no sale take place until the youngest one attains majority. *Southern Marble Co. v. [a] "The management and disposition of the estates of infants, which I have thus referred to, and briefly stated, with the authorities, are among the mass of powers upon this subject which belong to the original and inherent jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery. They relate to their personal, and the income of their real-estate, the court having no inherent power to direct a sale of the latter for their maintenance or education; that power rests with the Legislature. It will be seen, therefore, that the only additional authority conferred upon the Chancellor, by the Acts of the Legislature in question, was the power to direct the sale of the real-estate,—to convert it into personalty for the purposes mentioned."

[b] "In Taylor v. Philips, 2 Ves. (Sr.) Sec. 23 (Anno. 1750), Lord Chancellor Hardwicke said: 'There is no instance of this court's binding the inheritance of an infant by any discretionary act of the Court. As to personal things, as in the composition of debts, it has been done; but never as to the inheritance; for that would be taking on the Court a legislative authority, doing that which is properly the subject of a private bill.' This observation was subsequently approved by Lord Chancellor Hart in Russell v. Russell, 1 Moll. 525." Stansbury v. Inglehart, 9 Mackey (D. C.) 134, 152; Hale v. Hale, 146 Ill. 227, 249, 33 N. and the proceeds may be reinvested for the best interest of those who may ultimately become entitled to the estate on final distribution.⁶²

Wards of Chancery.—Whenever an application is presented to the chancellor, seeking a sale or other disposition of land in which minors have an interest, they become wards of chancery,⁶³ and the chancellor himself is in legal contemplation the infant's guardian.⁶⁴

b. Jurisdiction Conferred by Statute.—In some states the powers of the courts of equity to sell the real estate of infants and reinvest the proceeds are regulated by statute.⁶⁵ These statutes must be ad-

[b] "The power exercised by the Court of Chancery as to the sale of the estate of infants of an equitable nature, is inherent, and not derived from statutory authority. The power conferred by statute relates to lands of which an infant is seized, and not to his equitable estates." Anderson v. Mather, 44 N. Y. 249.

[c] "The statutes above referred to, give the court of chancery power over infants' legal estates, only (4 Comst. 266). But the power is ample; and it would be a remarkable anomaly, if the court had not, also, a jurisdiction at least equally extensive, in respect to infants' equitable estates, which, by their very nature, are under its peculiar and exclusive care. There are remarks to be found in some of the reports, to the effect that the power of the court is derived wholly from statute, but so far as I have observed, they occur in cases involving sales of legal estates, and should be understood as referring to such estates only." *Wood v. [a] The court of chancery has never had, except by express legislative enactment, jurisdiction either to sell or hered to by the courts and strictly followed.⁶⁶ The inherent jurisdiction of chancery courts, where recognized, is not, however, necessarily destroyed by such statutes.⁶⁷

The rights both of guardians and executors to make sales of the property, whether real or personal, of wards and minors, are sometimes regulated by statute, by which particular courts are given jurisdiction.⁶⁸

Probate courts are frequently given certain specified powers with reference to such matters.⁶⁹ Their powers, however, are limited by the statute,⁷⁰ and do not necessarily deprive a chancery court of its

[b] Liberal Construction.—The statutes in relation to the sale of infants' lands are remedial in their nature, and should be construed liberally. Rhea v. Shields, 103 Va. 305, 309, 49 S. E. 70; Faulkner v. Davis, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 651, 669, 98 Am. Rep. 698.

[a] Administrator's Sale When Presumed Regular.—Probate courts are superior courts, and the regularity of their proceedings are presumed; and when the validity, derived under a guardian's or administrator's sale, comes in question, in a collateral suit, this court will only look to see if the probate court had jurisdiction, unless error be patent upon the face of the proceeding. Fleming v. Johnson, 26 Ark. 421, 437.

[a] The general jurisdiction over the persons and property of minors belongs to the chancery court. Courts of probate, by statute, are given limited powers over the estates of minors in the hands of administrators and guardians, but the statute is the limit of their powers, and their orders not authorized by the statute, are void.

c. Power of Legislature To Authorize Sale.—The legislature has the constitutional power and authority to authorize a guardian to sell the real estate of his ward;⁷² but it has been held that the legislature has no constitutional power to find and determine that there were debts owing, without any judicial inquiry as to the existence of such debts,⁷³ or to authorize the guardian or administrator to sell real estate vested in his minor wards or the minor heirs, without judicial direction and sanction,⁷⁴ as the legislature cannot exercise judicial powers.⁷⁵

2. What Property May Be Sold.—The exercise of the jurisdiction to control the property of infants is not dependent on the nature and quality of the estate of the infant, whether it is an absolute estate of present possession and enjoyment, or a future estate, but extends to estates of every character.⁷⁶

Helbig*, 27 Md. 452, 462.

[b] Non-Resident Infants.—It is competent for the legislature to pass a law authorizing the guardian of non-resident infants to petition, and a court of chancery to decree the sale of the land of such infants without process against the infant. Nelson's Heirs v. Lee, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 495, 509.

[e] The legislature of this state, has the constitutional power to enact a private statute, authorizing a guardian appointed in Ohio, to sell the lands of his wards in this state, either at public or at private sale, and to prescribe as a condition precedent to the exercise of such power, that the guardian shall execute a bond according to the laws of Ohio for the faithful application of the proceeds of the sale, with such sureties and conditions and in such penalty, as a judge of the court of common pleas of Ohio may approve and direct. *Boon v. 3. Authorization of Sale.—a. Necessity for Order of Court.

Under the common law there was no right or power vested in the guardian or trustee of an infant to change the nature of the infant's property from personality to realty or from realty to personality,⁷⁷ and the rule is that the property of a minor cannot be sold except under an order of the court in which is vested the control of a minor's property interests.⁷⁸

[b] Usually under the statutes, if not by the inherent powers of a court of chancery, the court has jurisdiction to order the sale of a minor's estate in remainder. Bill v. Burgess, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 41, 22 S. W. 84.

[c] Under the statute authorizing the sale of the real-estate of an infant (2 Rev. St. 194, §70) the court has jurisdiction to direct the sale of a remainder in fee, vested in interest in an infant; the term "real-estate," as used in the statute, includes every freehold estate and interest in lands; and where there is a vested remainder in fee there is a seizin in law, which answers the requirement of the statute that the infant shall be "seized" of the estate. b. Proceedings To Obtain Order for Sale.—(I.) Venue.—Application for the sale of an infant's real estate should be in the state where it is located,⁷⁹ and in the county prescribed by the statute.⁸⁰ Since the requirements of the statute are jurisdictional, the court can only proceed legally at the place and in the manner prescribed by the statute.⁸¹

(II.) Who May Petition for Sale.—The regularly appointed guardian of the minor is the proper party to petition the court for an order of sale,⁸² though it is held that on application of any of the parties in tion of the property of minors, the advice of a family meeting forms an essential part of the judgment or basis upon which it rests. Beale v. Walden, 11 Rob. (La.) 67. See also Blandin v. Blandin, 126 La. 819, 53 So. 15; Beanel v. Stewart, 117 La. 744, 42 So. 256; Tobin v. United States Safe Dep. & Sav. Bank, 115 La. 366, 39 So. 33; Beard v. Morancy, 3 Rob. 119, 122. Dowse*, 79 Ill. 66, 68; Loyd v. Malone, 23 Ill. 41, 49.

[b] Jurisdiction.—It is not necessary for the guardian to institute separate suits in the several counties in which the land is situated. The action is properly instituted in the county in which the ancestor died, the children all live, and much of the real estate is located, which is the jurisdiction to order a partition, if a partition may be had; and that court has power to grant complete relief, the subject of the action being the division of the proceeds of the land between the heirs. Phalan v. Louisville Safety Vault & Tr. Co., 88 Ky. 24, 27, 10 S. W. 10.

(IV.) Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem.—Where the proceeding is regarded as one in rem for the benefit of the infant it is not necessary that a guardian ad litem be appointed,⁸⁸ but in other cases, either because of a statutory requirement or because the proceeding is regarded as adverse to the infant, the court is required to appoint a guardian ad litem to resist the application and take care of the minor's interest.⁸⁹

If their names had appeared in the caption, they would have been there merely as formal parties, speaking by and through their guardian, and, it seems to us, the mere omission of the clerical formality of writing their names at the head of the petition is an objection too unsubstantial to render the solemn judgment of a court a nullity." *Revill's Heirs v. (V.) Petition or Application. — (A.) IN GENERAL. — To give the court jurisdiction a petition in writing should be presented by the guardian on behalf of the ward,⁹⁰ which should be addressed to the proper court.⁹¹

(B.) TIME OF APPLICATION. — Where the application upon an order of sale is made at a different term than the one specified in the notice, the proceedings will be void for want of jurisdiction.⁹²

[a] The petition is sufficient if it sets forth condition of ward's estate and necessity for sale. In re Hamilton's Estate, 120 Cal. 421, 52 Pac. 708.

[b] In Walker v. Goldsmith, 14 Ore. 125, 12 Pac. 537, the court said: "Counsel for the plaintiff has also argued with much ingenuity, that the petition of the guardian for the sale of the property was insufficient to give the

including fully and particularly the age, circumstances, and condition of the parties under disability, what other property, if any, they own or are in any way entitled to, and the chancellor should see that all requirements are complied with.⁹⁴

The petition should set forth the condition of the estate,⁹⁵ show that the sale would be for the benefit of the minor,⁹⁶ and all the parties concerned,⁹⁷ and describe the property sought to be sold.⁹⁸ It has been court jurisdiction to act in the particular case, for the reason that the petition is for the sale of the property to pay alleged debts. It is true, the petition mentions claims already accrued for the support of the children; but it then goes further, and alleges that they have no money or other estate whatever out of which to cancel such indebtedness for maintenance, or with which to provide for their future maintenance, etc.; and the future maintenance of said minors is elsewhere referred to in said petition as one of the reasons for making the sale. It is true, that payment of the alleged debt is also referred to as reason for making the sale; but in the present condition of this case before us, the only possible question that could arise on this part of the record is, Did the petition for the sale state any cause which, under the law, would have authorized the court to order a sale?—and we must say that it did. The petition showed there was no income from the estate, and that its sale was necessary to maintain said wards, . . . The case became coram iudice when a petition was presented containing facts which would authorize the court to act.”

[c] Where the application is by the father as natural guardian to sell the property for the support and education of the minor, the petition should clearly show that he is not able, for some good and sufficient reason, to support and educate the child. Campbell v. Goodin's Guardian, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 1137, 108 S. W. 248.

[d] Purpose of sale should be stated. Ryder v. Flanders, 30 Mich. 336.

[e] The infelicitous presentation of facts necessary to give court jurisdiction is a matter of little consequence, courts looking to the intent and not to the form. Ryder v. Wood, 55 Hun 607, 8 N. Y. Supp. 421.

94. Greenlaw v. Greenlaw, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 435, 442.

[a] In an application by a guardian to the court for leave to sell his ward's real estate the rule is, “That enough must appear, either in the application or the order, or at least somewhere upon the face of the proceedings, to call upon the court to proceed to act, and when that does appear, then the court has properly acquired jurisdiction.” Mulford v. Stalzenback, 46 Ill. 303, 307.

[b] A description of all the real estate of the ward should be contained in the petition; and, where the contrary does not appear it will be presumed that the real estate described in the petition includes all that the ward owns. Mauarr v. Parrish, 26 Ohio St. 636.

[c] The petition should describe all the land that the ward owns, and especially that which is sought to be sold; but any description therein will be sufficient, when collaterally assailed, if it provides the means of identifying the property. Hubermann v. Evans, 46 Neb. 784, 65 N. W. 1045.

held unnecessary to state whether the minors have any near relations in the state.⁹⁹

Alleging Personalty Exhausted.—Usually, it seems, the petition should allege that the personal estate has been exhausted;¹ but this is not required where the proceeding is for the purpose of reinvesting the proceeds of unproductive property.²

The residence of the minor should be stated affirmatively in the petition.³

(D.) VERIFICATION.—The petition should be verified by the oath of the petitioner,⁴ though in the absence of a statutory requirement fail-

[b] The description of the land need not necessarily be more specific, definite, and certain than is required in a conveyance of real property. Hence, a general description of the premises in the petition, as all the real estate of the wards situate in this state, or in any particular county or city therein, is not void for indefiniteness and uncertainty. Hubermann v. Evans, 46 Neb. 784, 65 N. W. 1045.

[c] Correction of Misdescription. Where the petition contained a mistake in the description of the lands, which it is shown was corrected after the petition was drafted, it will not be presumed, in the absence of evidence, that such correction was not made until after the filing of the petition. Deford v. Mercer, 24 Iowa 118, 92 Am. Dec. 460.

[d] An amended petition being filed, two years after the first petition, reciting that the land had been incorrectly described in the petition and judgment, and setting out a correct description by metes and bounds, the variance between the two descriptions amounting to several acres, it was error to amend the judgment of sale rendered two years before and order a sale of the newly described lot of land, in accordance with the terms of the original judgment, where no summons was issued on the amended petition and no report

(VI.) Notice of Petition or Application. — (A.) NOTICE TO MINOR. [c] Necessity of Showing by Whom Verified.—Where the statute requires that the bill shall be verified by the oath of the plaintiffs, it is not essential that the bill shall show that it was verified by the oath of the plaintiffs; it is sufficient if the affidavit to the bill simply recites: "Sworn to before me, at my county aforesaid, this 22nd day of October, 1886." The better practice, however, would be for the certificate to show on its face that the bill was sworn to by the plaintiffs, and not leave that fact to be supplied by evidence aliunde. *Lancaster v. 11. White v. Straus, 47 W. Va. 794, 35 S. E. 843.

Neither the infant's answer, nor the answer of adult defendants confessing that the sale would be for the benefit of the infant is sufficient to authorize such a finding by the court;¹² nor does the fact that the infants are complainants dispense with proof that the sale would be for their benefit.¹³ Where the question has been submitted to a commissioner the usual practice is for the court to base its decree on the evidence taken before such commissioner showing the propriety of the sale.¹⁴

The guardian of the infant has the right to be heard and represented in the naming of the commissioner, in their examination of the evidence adduced before them, and in the action of the court upon the return of the commissioner.¹⁵

Where the statute is silent as to the means to be resorted to, to satisfy the court and the record shows that the court has been satisfied, a presumption arises that the end was attained by proper and adequate means.¹⁶

(II.) Directing Terms of Sale.—The order should state the terms on which the sale is to be made.¹⁸ It may be amended to permit the sale on different terms from those stated in the original order.¹⁹

(III.) Fixing Time and Place of Sale.—The order authorizing the sale should fix the time and place of sale.²⁰

(IV.) Description of Property To Be Sold.—The land to be sold should be designated with certainty, in the order of sale.²¹

(V.) Directing Investment of Proceeds.—It is the duty of the court ordering the sale to direct the manner in which the funds arising therefrom, belonging to the minors, shall be appropriated.²²

4. Appraisement.—In some states the statutes require that there be made an appraisement of the minor's property before it is sold.²³ Under some statutes this appraisement is properly made after the filing of the petition and the order of sale has been made,²⁴ but it must be made before the sale.²⁵ Under other statutes the filing of the petition is a prerequisite to the appraisement,²⁶ and the appraisement is a

[b] A description of land as "being ninety-one acres of the southwest corner of lot number eleven," it being shown that party owning land had just that quantity of land and no more in the designated lot and his portion touched the southwest corner of the lot, held sufficient. Bloom v. Burdick, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 130, 37 Am. Dec. 299.

[c] An order "to sell the land of the ward named in the petition, adjoining the lands of John Bailey and others, containing about one hundred and ten acres" (it appearing that the ward had no other land), is a sufficient specification of the land sought to be sold." Pendleton v. Trueblood, 48 N. C. 96.

[d] An order authorizing the sale of one hundred acres more or less, without any definite boundaries, is void for failure to designate the land with sufficient certainty. Brock v. King, 48 N. C. 45.

authorized and void. Ducket v. Skinner, 33 N. C. 431; Leary v. Fletcher, 23 N. C. 259.

[f] Where Sale Is Private.—"While the description of the land in the order of sale is not as full as it should be it is sufficient to identify the property, and that is all that was required. The sale in this case as ordered by the court was a private sale, and the meagerness of the description could therefore have had no effect upon the price paid for the land by the appellees." *Jiron v. 5. Bond.—It is generally required that the guardian give a special bond to properly account for the proceeds of the sale,²⁸ which bond petition for the sale of real estate of the ward is filed, the court has no right to appoint commissioners to value the ward's estate. Woodcock v. Bowman, 4 Mete. (Ky.) 40; Watts v. Pond, 4 Mete. (Ky.) 61, 62; Mattingly's Heirs v. Read, 3 Mete. (Ky.) 524, 79 Am. Dec. 565.

27. The report of the commissioners appointed to appraise the estate of the infants, must be full and explicit on all the matters which, by the statute, they are required to ascertain and report to the court. Without this the court has no jurisdiction to decree a sale. Campbell v. Clay, 6 Bush (Ky.) 498; Woodcock v. Bowman, 4 Mete. (Ky.) 40, 42; Wells v. Cowherd's Heirs, 2 Mete. (Ky.) 514; *Bell v. [a] The commissioner's report should show that the property therein valued is all of the real and personal estate belonging to the infants whose lands are sought to be sold, as well as that it is to the infant's interest. Without such a report the sale would be void. Woodcock v. Bowman, 4 Mete. (Ky.) 40, 42; Mattingly's Heirs v. Read, 3 Mete. (Ky.) 524, 525, 79 Am. Dec. 565.

[a] In Cuyler v. Wayne, 64 Ga. 78, the court said: "As the question was discussed on the argument as to whether a guardian was required to give bond and security, especially when the clerk of the superior court is appointed a guardian for minors by the ordinary, or whether it is discretionary with the ordinary to require bond and security, we will express our opinion upon that question. In our judgment the law requires that bond and security should be given in all cases on the appointment of a guardian by the ordinary. Code sec. 1812. But the grant of letters of guardianship by the ordinary without taking bond, though erroneous, would not make the grant of the letters void as against a bona fide purchaser who had no notice that a bond had not been given."

[c] In Mississippi (1) the law does not require a bond to be given by the guardian, and if the court does not require one, none is necessary (Morton v. Carroll, 68 Miss. 699, 9 So. 896), (2) but if the court require a bond, a failure to execute such bond renders the sale void. Vanderburg v. Williamson, 52 Miss. 233.

[d] The sale bonds should be made payable to the court's commissioner, and the control of the fund reserved by the court until it is paid out in the purchase of other property. Crutcher v. Rodman, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 294, 81 S. W. 252.

[e] The court cannot dispense with sureties, even though the petition for the sale sets forth the inability to procure security, and a master's certificate to the same effect. Matter of Thorne, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 507.

[f] Duty of Surety on Bond.—A surety on a guardian's bond given on the sale of his ward's real estate is bound to see that his principal sells the land in the manner prescribed by law for the sale of real estate by executors and administrators, and this, by reference, adopts all the provisions should be executed before the sale;²⁹ and where the statute or order of court requires such a bond to be executed, a sale made without it will be void,³⁰ though this is not the universal rule, some courts hold-of the statute relating to such last named sales, and covers all the statute requires such officers to do in order to make a legal and valid sale, including the publishing and posting of notices, and making proper proofs thereof. If the license is properly granted, the bond covers all the acts of the guardian, as well as his neglects and omissions to make the sale in a legal manner, but not any illegalities or defects occurring prior to granting such license. Schlee v. Darrow's Estate, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717.

[g] Discharge of Bond.—The additional bond given by a guardian, in an application to sell the real estate of his ward, is not discharged by the fact that, on reporting the sale of the real estate, he produced the proceeds of the sale in court and then withdrew them by order of the court. State ex rel. Mount v. Steele, 21 Ind. 207, 83 Am. Dec. 346.

[h] Acts Amounting to Breach of Bond.—A failure to account for the purchase money, and to invest it according to the terms of the sale and the order of the court confirming the same, is a clear breach of the condition of the bond. Hunt v. Hunt, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 577.

29. Wyatt v. Mansfield's Heirs, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 779; Weld v. Johnson Mfg. Co., 84 Wis. 537, 54 N. W. 335, 998.

[a] The recital in the decree of sale that the guardian had given the required bond, authorizes the inference that it was given before, or simultaneously with, the decree, although dated the day after. Thornton v. McGrath, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 349, 353.

[a] Kentucky.—(1) In Elliott v. Fowler, 112 Ky. 376, 65 S. W. 849, it was held that where the bond required by §493 of the civil code of practice had not been executed to the infant, the judgment and sale were void; that the infant lost no rights under them, and the purchaser took none. See also Caulder v. Chenault's Exr., 154 Ky. 777, 159 S. W. 578. (2) But in an action under civil code practice, §490, for a sale of property jointly owned, the fact that no bond was executed to an infant owner constitutes no ground for setting aside the sale. Ellis v. Smith's Guardian, 147 Ky. 99, 143 S. W. 776; Dineen v. Hall, 112 Ky. 273, 65 S. W. 445, 66 S. W. 392.

[b] In Michigan, the absence of a sale bond in the probate proceedings for a guardian's sale of lands, although no such bond appears to have been ordered by the probate court, is a fatal defect, and one which is open to the wards in their suit for the lands against even a bona fide purchaser; notwithstanding the peculiar wording of the statute (Comp. Laws, §4622, subd. 2), "in case any bond was required," etc. It is held, construing the whole chapter together, that a sale bond is in all cases essential, and that no discretion is lodged with the probate judge in this regard, nor is any express or formal order required. Stewart v. Bailey, 28 Mich. 251.

[d] A failure to file a bond theretofore executed and approved, prior to the entry of the order of reference, will not invalidate the proceedings where

ing that such failure renders the sale erroneous but not necessarily void.³¹ A bond and an order reciting its execution should be considered together.³²

6. Oath.—The guardian is sometimes required, before making the sale, to take an oath to the effect that he will faithfully conduct the sale to the best interest of his ward,³³ and a failure to comply with the statute in this respect renders the sale void.³⁴

7. The Sale.—a. Notice of Sale.—Notice of the sale is usually required to be given, either by publication or some other method; this matter, however, is largely dependent on statute.³⁵ Where the statute or order of court requires notice to be given, failure to give such notice usually renders the sale void for want of jurisdiction,³⁶ though the rights of the infants are not jeopardized. Kelly v. Pitcher, 4 N. Y. Supp. 3.

[a] In the case of Watts v. Cook, 24 Kan. 278, it was held that "the failure of a guardian to give security, as required by section 15, chapter 46, Compiled Laws of 1879, upon obtaining an order for the sale of real estate, will not render void a sale regularly made and approved."

[b] "In McKee's Heirs v. Hann, 9 Dana (Ky.) 526, no bond was executed before the sale, yet the sale was sustained. The court in effect, decided that the execution of the bond was not essential to give the court jurisdiction. That the sale would be valid provided a bond was subsequently executed." Lampton v. Usher's Heirs, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 57, citing Gates v. Kennedy, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 167.

[c] Collateral Attack.—A sale of minor's property will not be held void in a collateral proceeding because the bond filed by the guardian for the purpose of obtaining the license to sell the real estate was not formally approved. Myers v. McGavock, 39 Neb. 843, 845, 58 N. W. 522, 42 Am. St. Rep. 627.

32. Higdon v. Lancaster, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 296.

[a] In an action for the sale of the real estate of infants the guardian executed bond to all the infants, which was approved by the court, but the order reciting the execution of the bond omitted the name of one of the infants. It was held that the bond and order of court, considered together, show that the bond was executed to all the infants, and that the purchaser cannot complain. Higdon v. Lancaster, 7 Ky. L. mere irregularities in the notice do not necessarily render the sale void.³⁷

b. Conduct of Sale.—(I.) In General.—The conduct of the sale must conform to the decree of the court ordering the same,³⁸ and to all statutory provisions relating to such matter.³⁹

(II.) Sale in Conjunction With Other Property.—In a proceeding to sell the land of an infant, it is improper to order the sale of the infant's land in conjunction with another tract in which the infant has no interest, the two tracts to be sold as a whole.⁴⁰ But it has been held that the special guardian may enter into a contract of sale conjointly with the adult owners.⁴¹

(III.) Sale in Parcels.—Persons making public sale of lands, may be given discretion to divide the tract, and sell in parcels, being responsible for the abuse of that discretion.⁴² The failure to sell all

The decree having authorized him to sell the land in one entire tract, or to divide the same and sell it in parcels, with authority to engage the services of a surveyor to enable him to make such division, and having determined to sell in parcels, he ought to have caused them to be laid off, by survey, prior to the sale; instead of attempting to describe them orally and by reference to a general plat, at the time of the sale; in which description he fell into errors, the consequence of which was, . . . the appellants (purchasers) were misled to their prejudice . . . The appellants, . . . ought, therefore, to be relieved from their said purchases." Talley v. Starke's Admx., 6 Gratt. (Va.) 339.

[b] If it is made to appear to the court that it will be more for the interest of the ward to sell the real

the land described in the order of sale will not vitiate the sale of a portion.⁴³

(IV.) Public or Private Sale.—In some states the property of an infant must be sold at a public sale to the highest bidder,⁴⁴ though in many jurisdictions the court has power to order the property to be sold at a private sale,⁴⁵ in which case the matter lies in the discretion estate at private sale, it may authorize the guardian to sell in parcels. Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 80, 2 Sup. Ct. 237, 32 L. ed. 639, quoting laws of Ohio.

[c] A decree or order for the sale of "the real estate described in the petition" justifies the sale of all the estate so described. Under such an order or decree, if but part be sold and report made and confirmed, no further proceedings being had, it is competent under the same order to proceed subsequently and sell the residue. Stow v. Kimball, 28 Ill. 93.

[d] Confirmation cures error in not selling lands in the order named in the license. Emery v. Vroman, 19 Wis. 689, 88 Am. Dec. 726.

44. Hobart v. Upton, 2 Sawy. 302, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6548; Dineen v. Hall, 112 Ky. 272, 65 S. W. 445, 60 S. W. 799; Clark v. Stanhope, 129 Ky. 521, 59 S. W. 859.

[a] Sale is void unless made at public auction, after proper notice of time and place thereof. Hobart v. Upton, 2 Sawy. 302, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6548, Laws of Oregon.

[b] In Alabama, the court of probate can only authorize a public sale by a guardian in the manner prescribed by the statute; a private sale under an order of the court, though sanctioned by the court, passes no title as against the ward. Hudson v. Helmes, 23 Ala. 745.

[c] In Florida, by the statutes, county judges were empowered to authorize a guardian to sell the estate of his ward "under such conditions as the interests of said infant may, in the opinion of said judge, seem to require." The judge made a general unconditional order permitting the guardian to sell, and the guardian sold the property at private sale. It was held that a private sale was not authorized by the order, and was wholly illegal. In the absence of a special order to sell at private sale, if the property could be sold at all under the order, the sale should have been public. Lenders v. Thomas, 25 Fla. 318, 17 So. 633, 18 Am. St. Rep. 266.

[d] Georgia.—A guardian has no authority, even under the decree or order of the court, to sell his infant ward's property at private sale. Home Land Co. v. Eastman, 80 Ga. 883, 600, 6 S. E. 586; Dawning v. Penbody, 56 Ga. 49, 42.

[e] A private contract with a guardian for the purchase of the ward's land at a stipulated price is contrary to public policy. Although, according to the evidence, the price agreed upon was not only fair, but in excess of the value of the property, still, the rule of law is violated. Dawning v. Penbody, 56 Ga. 49, 42.

[f] In Kentucky as every sale made under an order of court must be public and open reasonable credits, to be fixed by the court, the court has no power to authorize its commissioners to make a private sale or to sell for cash. Lathell v. Wells, 97 Ky. 84, 50 S. W. 10.

[g] Louisiana.—The property of a minor cannot be sold at a private sale to pay debts, although it may be sold at private sale to effect a partition. Orsillion v. Roy, 125 La. 514, 41 So. 576.

[h] A private sale of minor's property to pay debts is void, and it is none the less so because a family meeting advised it and the judge homologated the proceedings of the meeting. Blair v. Dwyer, 110 La. 322, 34 So. 464.

[i] Court may adopt and confirm private sale. "With the assent of the purchasers, if found beneficial to the infants, open full and scrupulous investigation." Ex parte Kirkman, 2 Head (Tenn.) 127.

45. U. S.—Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 80, 2 Sup. Ct. 237, 32 L. ed. 639 (quoting laws of Ohio); Boyd v. Willard, 80 Fed. 659, Ark.—Ellinger v. Johnson, 28 Ark. 471; Ind.—Blair v. Dwyer, 110 La. 322, 34 So. 464.

of the court.⁴⁶ But an order for a private sale does not authorize a public sale of the property.⁴⁷

Where the statute conferring the power to sell, and the order of the court carrying it out, are silent as to the manner of making the sale it is left to the discretion of the person authorized to make the sale.⁴⁸

(V.) Sale by Whom Made.—The sale, in the eye of the law, is regarded as being made by the court.⁴⁹ The court may direct that the sale be made by the guardian or guardians,⁵⁰ or commissioner appointed by the court,⁵¹ or other suitable person,⁵² but a father cannot be authorized to sell the lands of his minor child until he has been appointed guardian;⁵³ and one who is a part owner with the infant in the property ought not to be appointed,⁵⁴ though it has been held that the power to sell may be granted to anyone, even to the infants themselves.⁵⁵

Delegation of Power.—While the guardian need not act as auctioneer and may authorize someone to act for him in that capacity,⁵⁶ yet the law charges him with the general supervision and conduct of the sale, and his authority in that regard cannot be delegated.⁵⁷

(VI.) Time and Place of Sale.—(A.) TIME OF SALE.—The sale if not made at the time required by law, is illegal, and should be set aside by the court,⁵⁸ but confirmation will cure slight errors as to the date of the sale to protect a bona fide purchaser.⁵⁹

Adjourning Sale.—The sale may be adjourned for good cause by the guardian,⁶⁰ trustee making the sale,⁶¹ or on order of court.⁶²

(B.) PLACE OF SALE.—The sale must be made at the place specified in the decree ordering the sale.⁶³ In some jurisdictions the sale should

[b] Guardian Need Not Make Sale Personally.—In Myers v. McGavock, 39 Neb. 843, 866, 58 N. W. 522, 42 Am. St. Rep. 627, it was argued that the guardian should make the sale personally. The court said: "We have not been cited to any authority or statute showing that a sale of real estate made by a guardian is void because the guardian did not personally attend or cry the sale. It certainly cannot be said that because the statute says that a guardian may file his petition and procure the order of a court under certain circumstances for the sale of his ward's real estate, that therefore the guardian must draw the petition and the other papers in such proceeding and attend to it personally and cannot do the same by an attorney; and we see no good reason why a guardian may not entrust the conduct of the sale of the real estate which he is making to his attorney or an auctioneer; and we are quite clear that this sale is not void because the attorney of the guardian actually made or cried the sale of the property."

60. Gager v. Henry, 5 Sawy. 237, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,172. In this case the guardian adjourned the sale for four weeks, at which time it was made and it was duly confirmed by the court. The sale was held valid despite the fact that the statute provided for postponements of not more than one week at a time, and not more than four weeks in all.

61. In Richards v. Holmes, 18 How. (U. S.) 143, 147, 15 L. ed. 304, a trustee was authorized to sell real property on thirty days' notice. At the time and place designated, the sale was adjourned for want of bidders. The court held the subsequent sale valid, because there was an implied power in the trustee to adjourn the sale.

62. "The court possessed full power to extend the time for the sale. There is nothing in the statute prohibiting this, and cases might arise in which it would be the duty of the court to do so." Butler v. Stephens, 77 Tex. 599, 14 S. W. 202.

63. Brown v. Christie, 27 Tex. 73, 84 Am. Dec. 607.

[a] The decree directing the sale to be made upon the premises, the commissioner acts irregularly in making it at a different place, especially after advertising that it would be made on the premises. He should report to the court that it could not be made there for want of bidders, and obtain instructions for his future action. Talbot v. Starke's Admx., 6 Gratt. (Va.) 539.

take place at the court house door;⁶⁴ and a sale under an order granting to a guardian leave to sell "on the premises" is invalid;⁶⁵ but in others there is no such requirement.⁶⁶

(VII.) Reception of Bids. — Much liberality should be indulged in the manner of receiving bids, to the end that the estate of the minor be made to bring the best possible price.⁶⁷

[a.] The guardian having executed the premises does not affect the proceedings nor can they on that account be deemed fraudulent. It was a public sale to the highest bidder, authorized by statute and under the sanction and inspection of a court. Without circumstances of abuse fraud, therefore to support such an allegation the deed is valid to him. Jackson v. Wooley, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 446. But see Dugan v. Sawyer, 12 App. Div. 244, 43 N. Y. Supp. 303.

[b.] Good faith and an adequate consideration under the eye of the court makes a valid sale. March v. March, 5 Okla. Dec. (Ogden) 280.

[c.] In Lee v. Howell, 60 N. C. 200, the court said: "Why may not the guardian purchase at such a sale? Must he stand by and see the property sold at an undue value, or throw it into the lot of any ready buyer? It has been reported to court, and thus until the court is satisfied that the land brought a fair price. Why then may not the guardian become a purchaser? What reason is there to deny him the right to purchase? Is it possible that after a sale as in this case, and after by proceeding in court the owners have received the proceeds of the sale and appropriated the same to their own use, that they can turn round and claim title to the land? Surely there is no principle of law, justice or common sense that would authorize such a proceeding."

[a] "One standing in the relation of guardian will not be permitted to place himself in an attitude of hostility to the interests of his wards; nor to derive any benefit to himself at their loss; and if a purchase, by him, of the property of the wards, during the continuance of such relation, can be permitted to stand, under any circumstances, it will only be upon his showing, clearly, that he acted in the utmost good faith, that the price given was the full value, and that the transaction was for the benefit of the wards." Mann v. McDonald, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 275.

[b] A guardian sold his ward's land by auction, being himself the auctioneer, and employed an agent to bid on his account, and there being a question whether the bidding of his agent or a higher bidding by another person was the last before the hammer was down, the guardian declared it in favor of his agent. The court in declining against the guardian said: "The conduct of the guardian was sinister, not honest and disadvantageous to his ward. He was bound by his duty and oath to obtain the best price; and at the time of the sale a better price was offered. The guardian, acting fairly, states the guardian cannot either directly or indirectly become the purchaser,⁷⁰ and it is immaterial whether he act in good or bad faith.⁷¹

Purchase by Guardian Ad Litem.—The general rule seems to be that a guardian ad litem or a next friend of an infant cannot become the purchaser of his ward's property at a sale decreed by the court,⁷² although some courts hold that he may provided he acts in good faith.⁷³

Sale Void or Voidable.—At common law the effect of a purchase by a guardian is to render the sale voidable only,⁷⁴ and it cannot be [a] If the guardian purchases either directly or indirectly, the sale is voidable. Wyman v. Hooper, 2 Gray (Mass.) 141.

[b] Ratification Implied.—Where property of a ward has been purchased by his guardian, and the ward on arriving at age, receives the value of the property sold, with a full knowledge of what had been done by his guardian, it is an affirmation of the purchase by the guardian and vests property in him. Scott v. Freedland, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 409.

[c] Purchase On Behalf of Guardian.—(1) A guardian who petitions for the sale of his ward's estate, gets an order of sale, acts as the agent of the clerk and master in making it, cries avoided as against a bona fide purchaser.⁷⁵ But in some jurisdictions such a purchase renders the sale void.⁷⁶

Purchase by Other Persons.—The judge making the decree for the sale of the infant's lands cannot become, directly or indirectly, a purchaser of the property.⁷⁷

The spouse of the guardian is not ipso facto debarred from purchasing the property,⁷⁸ and it has been held that an administrator of the estate of the infant's ancestor, may be the purchaser.⁷⁹ The court has the power, with the consent of the reported purchaser, to substitute another person in his place.⁸⁰

the sale, takes the bonds, and gives information to the clerk and master, on which the report is made and sale confirmed will not be allowed to hold the land of his ward, purchased by another for him at such sale. Patton v. Thompson, 55 N. C. 285. (2) But in Hoskins v. Wilson, 20 N. C. 243, it was held that if another purchases at the guardian's sale for the guardian's benefit, but takes a conveyance to himself and afterwards conveys to the guardian, the purchase will not be void at law. And even in equity such sales are not ipsa jure, void; but the trustee purchases subject to the equity of having the sale set aside, if the cestui que trust in a reasonable time, chooses to say he is not satisfied with it.

[a] If a guardian, who has obtained license to sell the real estate of his wards, purchases the same himself, either directly or indirectly, the sale is voidable only by the wards, and as against the guardian, or a purchaser claiming under him with knowledge of the circumstances of the sale; but not as against one to whom before it is so avoided, he conveys or mortgages the estate, for a valuable consideration, and without notice that it had been bought at the guardian's sale for the guardian's benefit. Wyman v. Truax, 87 Mich. 324, 49 N. W. 604; McKay v. Williams, 67 Mich. 547, 35 N. W. 159. But see Sumner v. Sessoms, 94 N. C. 371, holding that where the person making a sale of land purchases himself directly, the sale is void, but that if he purchases through an agent, who afterwards conveys to him, the legal title passes, subject to the right of the parties interested, to divest it by a proper proceeding.

c. Report and Confirmation.—(1.) In General.—The person making the sale should file a report thereof with the court and after inquiry as to the manner and conduct of the sale, the court, if satisfied, should enter a decree confirming the same.⁸⁶ Confirmation of a guardian's

W. 10, holding that although the court by its judgment authorized the sale to be made either for cash or on certain specified credits, which were within those prescribed by law, and the sale was in fact made on credit, yet as the commissioner sold upon longer credits than was authorized by the judgment, this might have been a valid ground of exception for the purchaser if he had chosen to avail himself of it.

[b] The statute of limitations does not begin to run until after confirmation. Morrow v. James, 69 Ark. 539, 64 S. W. 269.

[c] Signing of Report by Guardian. A guardian's sale is not invalidated by the fact that the guardian has not signed the report of sale; the defect may be supplied by seasonable amendment under the order of the probate court. Ellsworth v. Hall, 48 Mich. 407, 12 N. W. 512.

[d] Receipt of Purchase Price Before Confirmation.—Until confirmation of the sale by the court, the guardian has no legal authority to receive the sale rests in the sound discretion of the court,⁸⁷ this discretion, however, must be exercised according to established principles.⁸⁸

(II.) Necessity for Report and Confirmation.—A report and confirmation of the sale are necessary to complete the sale and pass the title, and cannot be dispensed with,⁸⁹ and equity will not interfere with purchase money, and if the guardian should receive the purchase money he holds it as the mere depository of the payer of the money. State v. Cox, 62 Miss. 786. But see Mason v. Tinsley, 1 Tenn. Ch. 154, 156.

[a] In Bank of United States v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 128, 129, 8 L. ed. 890, Chief Justice Marshall delivering the opinion of the court said: "The eighth section of the law which authorizes the sale of real estate descending to minors, enacts, 'that all sales made by the authority of the chancellor under this act, shall be notified to, and confirmed by the chancellor, before any conveyance of the property shall be made.' This provision is totally disregarded. The sale was never confirmed by the court; yet the conveyance has been made. It is a fatal error in the decree, that it directs the conveyance to be made on the payment of the purchase money, without directing that the sale shall first 'be notified to, and approved by' the court."

[b] In Stilwell v. Swarthout, 81 N. Y. 109, it was held that an omission on the part of the administrators to report a sale to the surrogate, and to obtain an order confirming the report prior to a conveyance to the purchaser at the sale, is a fatal defect, and this defect is not cured by the provisions of the act "for the protection of purchasers of real estate upon sale made by order of surrogate." (§3, ch. 82, Laws of 1857, as amended by ch. 260, Laws of 1869).

[c] A sale under a surrogate's order for the sale of real estate, whose jurisdiction was special and limited, held void for want of confirmation. Rea v. McEachron, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 465, 28 Am. Dec. 471. Same as to a mortgage. Battell v. Torrey, 65 N. Y. 294.

[d] Approval of sale and deed by clerk, see Bunce v. Bunce, 59 Iowa 533, 13 N. W. 705.

[e] In Michigan under Comp. Laws, 1857, §3116, confirmation of the sale is not necessary to make it valid. Blanchard v. De Graff, 60 Mich. 107, 26 N. W. 849. See, however, Hunt v. Stevens, 174 Mich. 501, 140 N. W. 992; Winslow v. Jenness, 64 Mich. 84, 30 N. W. 905; Jenness v. Smith, 58 Mich. 280, 25 N. W. 191.

[f] The purchaser at an unapproved guardian's sale is liable for rents and profits, where he takes possession of the statutory requirement that a sale be reported and confirmed.⁹⁰

(III.) Time for Confirmation. — (A.) PREMATURE CONFIRMATION. — The fact that a sale is prematurely confirmed in the probate court does not make it invalid;⁹¹ though a judgment confirming a sale rendered on the same day the petition was filed and before the parties were brought before the court is premature and without jurisdiction.⁹²

(B.) DELAY IN CONFIRMATION. — Long delay in the confirmation of the sale will not render it void where such delay was not owing to any defect or bad faith in the action of the guardian;⁹³ delay has, however, been held to render confirmation a nullity.⁹⁴

(IV.) Objections to Confirmation. — Before confirmation is made all the objections within the limits of error, mistake, misunderstanding and misrepresentation as to the terms and manner of the sale are open for consideration.⁹⁵

(V.) When Sale Subject to Confirmation. — Unless void, the sale is subject to confirmation or disaffirmance by the court,⁹⁶ a sale which is the property. Ambleton v. Dyer, 53 Ark. 224, 13 S. W. 926.

[g] The recital of confirmation in the purchaser's deed is prima facie evidence of the fact, if the deed be properly acknowledged and recorded. Reid v. Hart, 45 Ark. 41. Compare Robertson v. Johnson, 57 Tex. 62.

90. Young v. Dowling, 15 Ill. 482.

[a] Sale will not pass even an equitable title in the absence of confirmation. Bone v. Tyrrell, 113 Mo. 175, 20 S. W. 796.

91. Henry v. McKerlie, 78 Mo. 416, disapproving earlier decisions.

[a] As a matter of regularity, the confirmation of a guardian's sale should precede the execution of the guardian's deed; but if it succeeds it, the confirmation relates to the deed and sanctions it. Dawson v. Helmes, 30 Minn. 107, 14 N. W. 462.

[b] "The fact that the order of confirmation was entered before the expiration of the time after the report was filed which the statute requires to elapse between the report and action on it, was merely an error which did not render the order void." Taffinder v. Merrell, 95 Tex. 95, 65 S. W. 177, 93 Am. St. Rep. 814; Greer v. Ford, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 389, 72 S. W. 73.

[c] In Mississippi, the sale should be reported for confirmation at the first term after it is made. Hoel v. Coursey, 26 Miss. 511.

92. Baldrige v. Baldrige (Ky.), 117 S. W. 253.

93. In re Harvey, 16 Ill. 127, in this case the report was made soon after the sale but it was not confirmed until seventeen years after the sale. But see Spellman v. Dowse, 79 Ill. 66.

94. Hoel v. Coursey, 26 Miss. 511, in this case it was held that the fact of the sale not being confirmed until more than six years after the sale had been made, and nearly a year after the death of the guardian, was fatal to the sale.

[a] Where a guardian never reported a sale of his ward's land to the probate court, but four years after the sale the purchaser presented his deed to the court, by which it was approved, neither the guardian nor the ward being present, there was no valid confirmation of the sale. Morrow v. James, 69 Ark. 539, 64 S. W. 269.

95. Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375, 391.

[a] The motion for confirmation and order form a part of the original proceedings under which the sale was ordered to be made, and on the hearing of the motion any objection may be urged that might have been made at the next term after the sale. Spellman v. Dowse, 79 Ill. 66.

[b] It is no objection to the ratification of a sale made under a decree, that a bill was pending at the time of the sale to vacate the decree, where the grounds for impeaching it are not stated, and it does not appear that any order was passed to restrain the proceedings of the trustee. Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375, 396.

96. Nelson's Heirs v. Lee, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 495.

[a] The court upon its own motion has the right to refuse to approve the voidable being susceptible to confirmation.⁹⁷ The sale must appear in all respects fair and proper, or it cannot receive the sanction of the court.⁹⁸ The court may refuse to confirm the sale where at a re-sale the property will bring a larger price,⁹⁹ where the guardian has sale if the sale was improperly made, and order a resale. McCallum v. Chicago Title & Tr. Co., 203 Ill. 142, 67 N. E. 823.

[b] The courts have the power to confirm and make valid a conveyance by an infant feme covert, which may be shown, during her infancy, to be equitable, expedient, or proper, looking to her benefit, but has no such power after such infant feme covert has attained full age. Glenn v. Clark, 53 Md. 580, 601.

98. Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375; Tomlinson v. McKaig, 5 Gill (Md.) 256, 276.

[a] If a guardian disposes of his ward's property in violation of the direction of the court, the mere fact that the court subsequently allowed the account of the guardian, in which he charged himself with the proceeds of the sale, it not appearing that the court knew that the guardian had disobeyed its orders or the source from which the money charged in the account was derived, cannot be construed as amounting to a confirmation of the unauthorized act of the guardian. Cox v. Manvel, 56 Minn. 358, 57 N. W. 1062.

[b] Sale by Unauthorized Person. A court of equity has no power to confirm a private sale of an infant's real estate made by an unauthorized person, or to order a commissioner to convey to such person in order that he may convey to his vendee. Kinslow v. Grove, 98 Ky. 266, 32 S. W. 933.

[c] When a court can see injustice will be inflicted by the ratification of a sale upon a party not in default, the sale should not be ratified. Bolgiano v. Cooke, 19 Md. 375; Penn v. Brewer, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 113.

[a] Confirmation will not be refused (1) on the ground alone, that the price was inadequate unless it is clearly made to appear that a resale will realize for the minor a sum substantially larger than that resulting from the sale attacked. Stivers v. Stivers, 236 Ill. 160, 86 N. E. 209. (2) A resale will not be ordered on an offer of an increased price alone. Lefevre v. Laraway, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 167.

[b] "The fact that its (the court's) attention was challenged to the fact that the property had been sold for an inadequate sum, by a person who stood ready to pay more upon a re-sale than the property had been sold for, did not divest the probate court of power to decline to approve the sale and order a re-sale in case the sale had been improperly made. We do not hold that an intermeddler may appear in the probate court at any time and object to the confirmation of a guardian's sale solely because he may think the property was sold for too small an amount, but do hold that when a prospective bidder at a re-sale appears in court and offers to make a bid in excess of the amount for which the property was sold, and as evidence that his proposed bid is made in good faith deposits in court, in cash, an amount in excess of the amount of his proposed bid, upon the objection of such proposed bidder the court may properly investigate the question of the propriety of approving the sale, and if it appears that there is legal objection to the approval of the sale, may disapprove the same and order a resale of the property." McCallum v. Chicago Title & Tr. Co., 203 Ill. 142, 67 N. E. 823.

(VI.) Effect of Confirmation—In the absence of jurisdictional irregularity, when the sale is made in good faith and confirmed, it is valid and effectual,³ and the title of the purchaser becomes perfected.⁴ Non-jurisdictional irregularities in the sale are cured by its confirmation,⁵ but confirmation of a void sale will not render it valid.⁶

Laraway*, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 167. (3) But in Daniel v. Leitch, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 195, the court said: "As the chief aim of the court is to obtain as great a price for the estate as possible, it is in the habit, under certain regulations, of opening the biddings." [a] The report of a guardian, when approved by the court, must be regarded as at least prima facie correct, casting on him who assails it the burden of proof to show error. Warfield v. Warfield, 74 Iowa 184, 37 N. W. 144.

[b] The confirmation of a sale is conclusive where the record does not show affirmatively that jurisdiction did not attach. Butler v. Stephens, 77 Tex. 599, 14 S. W. 202; Edwards v. Halbert, 64 Tex. 667; Robertson v. Johnson, 57 Tex. 62; Stroud v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 321, 67 S. W. 534.

[c] In New York, the burden is upon one claiming under a title, acquired at the sale of an infant's real estate, to establish by affirmative evidence that every requirement necessary to give jurisdiction has been complied with; there is no presumption of compliance in the absence of proof. *Ellwood v. [a] In Gates v. Kennedy, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 167, the court said: "If the court had jurisdiction of the case in the first instance, it had authority to act for the infant, and however irregular and unobligatory its subsequent action might have been, and although the sale might even have been void if he had not become a party and sanctioned it while the proceeding was in progress, it was, in our opinion, capable of confirmation by his act, and by the act of the court, against the will of the purchaser while the sale was yet incomplete."

[a] In Burrell v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 43 Minn. 363, 45 N. W. 849, the court said: "The order of confirmation is merely an adjudication that the 'sale proceedings' are regular, and

(VII.) Record.—The approval of the sale by the court need not necessarily appear by formal entry of an order, it being sufficient if the approval can be gathered from the whole record;⁷ and though the better practice would be to require an order of court entered upon its records approving the report of the sale, yet the want of this will not render the sale invalid.⁸

Entry Nunc Pro Tunc.—The order of the court approving the sale may be ordered entered on the records after the death of the guardian and years after the sale took place, on motion of the purchasers.⁹

(VIII.) Appeal and Review.—The action of the court in confirming or refusing to confirm a sale is subject to review on appeal,¹⁰ or by

in accordance with the execution, process, or decree under which the sale was assumed to be made, and that the sale was fairly conducted, and the price obtained an adequate one. If the sale was void because there was no judgment authorizing a sale to be made, or because, for any reason, the person making it had no authority to make one, no number of confirmations could make it valid. This was held in Dawson v. Helmes, 30 Minn. 107, (14 N. W. Rep. 462),—a case which fully covers and controls the present one.”

[b] The confirmation of a sale of the lands of wards does not validate it if any of the proceedings specified in § 3919, Rev. St. were omitted. Weld v. Johnson Mfg. Co., 84 Wis. 537, 54 N. W. 335, 998.

7. Henry v. McKerlie, 78 Mo. 416, and cases there cited.

[a] The approval by the court of the report of the sale ought perhaps to be entered of record. But it does not necessarily follow, that if no formal entry is found reciting this, that therefore the sale is void and liable to overthrow in a collateral proceeding. Jones v. Manly, 58 Mo. 559.

[b] In Pattee v. Thomas, 58 Mo. 163, it was contended that the sale was not approved, the court in answering this objection said: “It is true there is no formal entry of approval in this case, but the orders of the court cannot be understood in any reasonable way except as a virtual approval of the report and sales. The court receives the report and orders the money to be charged to the guardian, for the benefit of the minor children. It was impossible for the court to distribute the proceeds of the sale and make the orders which were made without a previous approval of the sale.”

[c] “Sometimes a confirmation will be presumed when there is some action of the court shown which shows that the sale was recognized and acted upon by the court.” Swenson v. Seale (Tex. Civ. App.), 28 S. W. 143.

[d] A formal order of court expressly confirming a guardian’s sale of land is not indispensable to the validity of the sale; the same may be shown by acts done by the court showing that it recognized and acquiesced in it as a completed sale. Robertson v. Johnson, 57 Tex. 62.

[e] “Where there is no evidence to show a report of sale, or confirmation thereof by the court, or any action by the court recognizing the same, the fact that the sale was ordered by the court and made by the guardian is not sufficient to establish a valid sale, and the same will not be presumed simply upon proof that the probate records have been loosely kept.” *Swenson v. [b] The purchaser may prosecute an appeal from the order confirming the other appropriate proceedings.¹¹ The purchaser may except to the confirmation of the report of the sale, and may prosecute an appeal from such confirmation.¹²

Where an appeal is taken from the order overruling the exceptions to the sale, and ratifying the sale as reported, the original decree authorizing the sale of the property is not open for review.¹³

d. The Deed.—The sale is not complete until the execution of the guardian's deed,¹⁴ which should follow in substance the order of the court.¹⁵ It is held that the deed should refer to such order and give its date,¹⁶ and must show that the notice of sale required by the order has been given.¹⁷ However, other courts hold that statutes so requiring are merely directory and such facts may be shown aliunde,¹⁸ and that though the deed does not refer to the proceedings in the court, if it appears by the record of the court and the deed that the

So the omission of the date of the decree authorizing the sale,²⁰ the omission of the name of one of several minors,²¹ or the insertion of irrelevant matter will not vitiate the deed.²² The reason for the sale need not be stated.²³

The deed may be by the guardian in his own name,²⁴ unless otherwise ordered by the court.²⁵ It should appear from the deed that the guardian was duly appointed.²⁶

In some jurisdictions the deed must be returned to the court for approval before it is valid.²⁷ A deed made prior to confirmation of the sale by the court is inoperative,²⁸ but where such a deed is afterwards reported and confirmed it becomes effective to pass title.²⁹ All necessary conditions precedent must be complied with or the deed will not pass title,³⁰ and a deed which shows that the property was not sold for the amount required by statute is void on its face.³¹ By statute in some states the deed must be executed within a certain period.³²

infant, and the proceeds must be invested as directed by the court.⁴¹ Under some circumstances the amount of certain incumbrances will be allowed out of the sale,⁴² though generally this cannot be done.⁴³

(III.) Duty of Purchaser. — The purchaser at a guardian's sale is not responsible for the order of the court in appropriating the proceeds of the sale,⁴⁴ and he is not required to see that the guardian invests or accounts for the proceeds.⁴⁵

8. The Record. — In order to divest the minor of his title it is necessary that the record show affirmatively that the requirements of the statute have been complied with,⁴⁶ and where the parties to be affected reside out of the jurisdiction of the court, the record must affirmatively show that every step necessary to give jurisdiction has been regularly taken, otherwise the proceedings are utterly void.⁴⁷

[b] The circuit courts are authorized, by statute, to order a sale of real estate descended to infants for their benefit; the jurisdiction being special and limited, the statute must be strictly complied with; and unless every fact prescribed by it appears in the record, a decree for a sale under it will be prima facie erroneous. Singleton v. Cogar, 7 Dana (Ky.) 479.

Setting Sale Aside.⁵⁰ — a. Generally.—The infant has a right to have a sale of his property set aside upon a proper showing.⁵¹ This right is not affected by the fact that he may have recourse against the guardian and his sureties,⁵² or that the proceeds of the sale have been applied to his benefit.⁵³

A judicial sale of an infant's property will only be set aside for substantial errors;⁵⁴ mere irregularities are not sufficient,⁵⁵ particularly if [a] "It is not however, any mere irregularity that can be made available as ground of impeachment by such bill; nor is it matter of complaint against the decree of sale that no day was given the infant defendants, after coming of age, to show cause against the decree. No purchaser under the decree could be expected to incur such hazard to his estate. Booth v. Rich, 1 Vern. 295; Bennett v. Namill, 2 Sch. & Lefr. 566; Mills v. Dennis, 3 John. Ch. 367." Gregory v. Lenning, 54 Md. 51.

the sale was advantageous to the infant,⁵⁶ or where such action would years." Pattee v. Thomas, 58 Mo. 163.

[c] The statutes providing that guardian's sales shall not be set aside for mere irregularities should be construed as applying to mere "irregularities" in the proceedings where the good faith of the probate proceedings is not impeached, but it cannot be held to apply where those proceedings are assailed on the ground of fraud from their very inception. Dormitzer v. German Sav. & Loan Soc., 23 Wash. 132, 193, 62 Pac. 862.

[a] A sale contracted by a testamentary guardian without authority, and afterwards confirmed as an advantageous one, will not be set aside where such sale was manifestly to the benefit of the infant. Hurt v. Long, 90 Tenn. 445, 16 S. W. 968.

[b] In Swan v. Newman, 3 Head (Tenn.) 288, the court said: "This being so, it might be unnecessary to consider the objections taken to the regularity of the proceedings under which the sale was made, because, as between the purchaser and the infants, where we can see that the sale was advantageous to the latter, and that a loss would result from setting it aside, we would not do so, for irregularities or defects which can be cured by decreeing the title to the purchaser, as we have all the parties before us. The purchaser can only claim the title, and that can be given to him notwithstanding there may be defects in the proceedings of such a character as that the infants would not be bound by them. But if it is clear to the Court, as it is in this case, where the property has since the sale depreciated in value, or on any other account, that it is to the interest of the infants that the sale should be maintained, that will be done by a divestiture of their title in favor of the purchaser, and holding him to his contract. All he can demand is a good title, and if the Court is able to give him that, he has no reason to complain that the proceedings were irregular; that is nothing to him. This, of course, can only be done where the parties interested are all before the Court, and a case is made out to give the Court jurisdiction. Otherwise the court could not decree him a good title, and for that reason would not compel him to pay his money. The case of Rowan v. Pope, decided at the last term at Nashville, and to be reported in the next volume of reports, was very similar to this in its principle."

[c] In the case of Durrett v. Davis, 24 Gratt. (Va.) 302, 316, 317, Judge Staples, in delivering the opinion of the court, after holding that mere formal defects would not affect the validity of the sale, said: "In considering them (the formal defects) this court has not been unmindful of the importance of a faithful observance of the various statutes enacted for the benefit of the infant, and for the protection of his inheritance. The power to sell the estate of those who have no capacity to be heard is a very grave one, and only to be exercised with great caution. Still it is an indispensable power, and is well-regulated in some tribunal in every well-regulated State. Sound policy requires that judicial sales shall not be brought into disrepute by the practice of vacating decrees for slight and minute defects in the preparation of causes, when the prejudice bona fide purchasers.⁵⁷ It is the policy of the law to uphold and maintain judicial sales, wherever it can be done without violating principle or doing injustice.⁵⁸ There are, however, two matters as to which purchasers are required at their peril to make inquiry, viz., that the court ordering the sale had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and that all proper parties were before the court when the order was made.⁵⁹ It has been held, however, that an irregular sale which is prejudicial to the interests of the infants will be set aside,⁶⁰ as relief is accorded to true meaning and spirit of the law has been observed. If the court clearly perceives that the sale when made was an advantageous one, it ought not to regard mere technical informalities which do not substantially affect the validity of the proceedings, or the rights and interests of the infant." Quoted with approval in Coleman v. Virginia Stave, etc. Co., 112 Va. 61, 70 S. E. 545.

[a] A decree for the sale of an infant's land, in a case in which he is a party, and over which the court has jurisdiction, is so far binding on the infant that he cannot, either by bill of review, or by an original bill, impeach it to the prejudice of a bona fide purchaser. Anderson v. Ammonett, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 1; Winchester v. Winchester, 1 Head (Tenn.) 461, 500. See also Wright v. Miller, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 103.

[b] The purchaser at the sale is presumed to have notice of any irregularity in conducting it, but bona fide purchasers after confirmation of the sale are not presumed to have such notice. Conover v. Musgrave, 68 Ill. 58; Mulford v. Stalzenbach, 46 Ill. 303.

[a] "If these sales cannot be upheld, or if set aside for trifling causes, the property of minors can only be sold at great loss to them." Conover v. Musgrave, 68 Ill. 58.

[b] "We are not insensible of the importance, as a matter of public policy, of upholding sales made by guardians and personal representatives whenever it can be done under the law. If such sales are generally held good, that fact increases the competition at the sales by enlarging the circle of bidders, by inviting the attention of a class who buy for use and are generally willing to pay a fair price; while if such sales are of doubtful validity, only speculative and chancing men are ready to invest at prices that justify the risk. Therefore it is for the interest of those whose estates have to be disposed of in this manner that the public generally should have confidence in the validity of the titles acquired." Higinbotham v. Thomas, 9 Kan. 328.

[a] That the guardian's bond was forged is not ground for setting aside a sale, as the purchaser is not required to look beyond the question of jurisdiction. If the jurisdictional facts appear of record the purchaser will be protected. Blake v. Blake, 260 Ill. 70, 102 N. E. 1007.

60. Swan v. Newman, 3 Head (Tenn.) 288; Cralle v. Meem, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 496.

[a] Mere technicalities will not warrant the court in upholding a sale of the ward's property which results in wrong and injustice to that ward. Gillespie v. Darroch (Ind. App.), 107 N. E. 475.

[b] After a sale of infants' land has been confirmed by the court, although the proceeding has been irregular, yet if the title of the purchaser can be made good, and it is for the interest of the infants to confirm the sale, the purchaser will not be released from his purchase; but if the interest of the infants is injured by the sale infants, on account of their infancy, where it would be denied to adults.⁶¹

Sufficient Grounds.—Among matters which have been held sufficient ground for setting aside a sale, are the following: error apparent in the face of the decree;⁶² mistake;⁶³ misunderstanding or misrepresentation as to the terms or manner of sale;⁶⁴ fraud;⁶⁵ collusion between the pur-

[a] The orphans' court has jurisdiction to enter a decree vacating a private sale made by a guardian under an order of court, ordering a reconveyance of the same and directing a restitution of the purchase money for gross mistake (in this case the sale of fifty-two acres for two hundred acres, upon the petition of the purchaser), even after the sale is confirmed, the purchase money paid, and the deed executed and delivered, where the rights of third parties have not intervened. Johnson's Appeal, 114 Pa. 132, 6 Atl. 556.

[b] The principle upon which courts of equity grant relief in cases of deficiency in the estimated quantity upon the sale of lands is that of mistake, and is as applicable where the rights of infants are involved as in other cases. McComb v. Gilkeson, 110 Va. 406, 66 S. E. 77, 135 Am. St. Rep. 944.

[a] In Walker v. Goldsmith, 14 Ore. 125, 12 Pac. 537, the court said: "We cannot try the question of fraud in this case, for the reason there are no pleadings and no issues on that subject. If fraud entered into the original proceedings of the guardian in procuring or conducting the sale, it might be a reason for setting aside his proceedings in equity, on the application of anyone injured by such fraud. In such case his proceedings were not absolutely void—but voidable at the election of the party injured—and such party ought to make his election by bringing a suit to avoid the sale within a reasonable time after obtaining majority—or after knowledge of the fraud. Acquiescence for an unreasonable time after notice of the fraud, and after such minor had reached his majority, would be a waiver of the right to complain of it."

[b] The fact that the lands sold for their full value does not affect the minor's equities; the doctrine, that fraud and damage must concur, does not apply to such a case. No one can be forced to submit to a sale at other people's estimate of value. Tong v. Marvin, 26 Mich. 35.

[c] An order giving a party authority to sell and convey, fraudulently obtained from a court, is no better than a power fraudulently derived from the party whose rights are injuriously affected by it. It may always be annulled at his instance, upon establishing the fraud, at least as to all persons who were parties or privies to such fraud. Clark v. Underwood, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 202.

[d] Agreement Restricting Bidding. Where the purchaser made an agreement with another prospective bidder chaser and the guardian;⁶⁶ of false statements made in the report,⁶⁷ and misconduct in the purchaser.⁶⁸

If the guardian has, either directly or indirectly become the purchaser at the sale, in those jurisdictions where he is not permitted to purchase,⁶⁹ or if he has made a profit therefrom,⁷⁰ the sale will be set aside. And where the guardian accepts, as part of the purchase price, the promissory note of the purchaser, and fails to pay such amount in money to the ward the sale will be set aside.⁷¹

If the date of the sale is erroneously advertised it will be set aside and a resale ordered, unless the land has passed to a bona fide purchaser.⁷²

Insufficient Grounds.—The following have been held insufficient grounds for setting aside a sale: the fact that the sale subsequently proved injudicious and unfortunate for the infant;⁷³ irregularity on whereby the latter did not bid at the sale, such agreement was sufficient ground for setting aside the sale. Devine v. Harkness, 117 Ill. 145, 7 N. E. 52; Loyd v. Malone, 23 Ill. 41, 43, 74 Am. Dec. 179.

the part of the guardian in executing the order of sale;⁷⁴ or that credit was extended to the purchaser, and no interest provided for.⁷⁵

The failure of the guardian to apply the proceeds of the sale to the benefit of the ward cannot be held to vitiate a sale as to the purchasers.⁷⁶ Nor will mere suspicion of fraud be sufficient ground for setting aside the sale.⁷⁷

Where Guardian Is Without Authority.—Where it does not appear the guardian was licensed by a court of competent jurisdiction,⁷⁸ or where the guardian failed to qualify,⁷⁹ or where his appointment is void,⁸⁰ a sale will be set aside. But where a court of general jurisdiction having authority to appoint guardians generally is without jurisdiction to make the particular appointment, the sale will not be set aside.⁸¹

Inadequacy of Consideration.—Mere inadequacy of price is not a sufficient cause for setting aside a sale,⁸² but where the price is grossly inadequate the sale will be set aside.⁸³

[b] In Louisiana, it is held that the formalities accompanying the sale of property belonging to minors, being exclusively ordained for their benefit, the minors alone, when they become of age, can take advantage of errors in the proceedings. Foutelet v. Murrell, 9 La. 299; Rousseau v. Tete, 6 Rob. 471; Melancon's Heirs v. Duhamel, 10 Mart. (O. S.) 225.

[c] "There could be no doubt of the right of the infant defendants, if they were living, to impeach the decree, if proper grounds were alleged and shown for such impeachment. And any substantial cause, such as fraud in obtaining the decree, or the non-observance of those requirements prescribed by the statute to confer jurisdiction to pass the decree; or, indeed, as it has been said, any matter that clearly shows that an improper decree has been made against an infant, though not obtained by fraud, collusion, or surprise, may be made the ground for impeaching the decree by original bill in the nature of a bill of review. . . . Bank of United States v. Ritchie, 8 Pet. 128." Gregory v. Lenning, 54 Md. 51.

[e] The fact that the proceeds of the sale were applied to the benefit of the wards, does not estop them from denying its validity after becoming of age. Wilkinson v. Filby, 24 Wis. 441. Chief Justice Dixon in a note to the case says: "I have met with the following decisions, in which it was held that minor heirs may, under some circumstances, be estopped from questioning the regularity or validity of sales made or assented to by their guardians, where the proceeds thereof have been applied to the use or benefit of such heirs. They are interesting cases upon the subject; and I deem it important that the attention of the profession should be called to them: Wilson v. Bigger, 7 W. & S. 111; *McPherson v. [f] It was the settled doctrine of the chancery courts of England that if the infant sought to impeach a decree on the ground of fraud, collusion, or error, he was not required to wait until he attained his majority, and might proceed by original bill, in which it will be enough for him to say the decree was obtained by fraud and collusion, or that no day was given him to show cause against it." *Richmond v. (IV.) Limitation of Actions.—Actions to set aside guardians' sales must be commenced within the time limit prescribed by the statute,⁹⁷ or permitted under the equitable doctrine of laches.⁹⁸ Sometimes the action must be brought within a specified time, after the confirmation of the sale,⁹⁹ or after the sale was made.¹

The infant may be given a reasonable length of time after arriving at majority,² or a specified number of years next after he becomes of age,³ or after the termination of his guardianship.⁴

The statute may except from its operation persons who are out of the state,⁵ but the grantee or heir of a ward is not within this exception, and the time limited commences to run, as to him, immediately on the transfer of the estate.⁶

There is a conflict of opinion as to what sales the statutes apply. some courts hold that they apply to all sales made by a guardian, whether

This principle is not limited to cases of voidable sales, but extends to those where the sale is void. Deford v. Mercer, 24 Iowa 118, 92 Am. Dec. 460, following Pursley v. Hayes, 17 Iowa 310.

[b] The right of rescission is not an absolute right, and one who desires to enforce such right should act with reasonable promptitude. Weems v. Masterson, 80 Tex. 45, 15 S. W. 590, in this case the sale was not attacked until thirty-three years after it took place, and it was held that the lapse of time barred the right to rescind.

[a] Where the statute provides "that no action for the recovery of any estate sold by a guardian, . . . shall be maintained by the ward, or by any person claiming under him, unless it be commenced within five years next after the termination of the guardianship," it is not a valid objection that the suit was not commenced within five years after the sale. Cooper v. Sunderland, 3 Iowa 114, 66 Am. Dec. 52.

5. See the statutes, and Hobart v. Upton, 2 Sawy. 302, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,548; Jordan v. Secombe, 33 Minn. 220, 22 N. W. 383.

[a] Where the statute excludes from its operation persons "out of the territory" when the cause of action shall accrue, and gives such persons a number of years "after their return to the territory" in which to bring their action, it is held that such a provision includes persons who never were residents of the territory, as well as those who were temporarily absent. Hobart v. Upton, 2 Sawy. 302, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,548; Jordan v. Secombe, 33 Minn. 220, 22 N. W. 383.

valid or void,⁷ while in other jurisdictions it is held that the statute does not afford protection to one claiming under a void guardian's sale, and cannot be pleaded to defeat an action to quiet the title in the ward.⁸ A statute providing that no person can question the validity of such sale, after the lapse of five years from the time it was made, is held not to apply to sales which took place prior to its passage,⁹ or as extending 7. Reed v. Ring, 93 Cal. 96, 28 Pac. 851 (compare McNeil v. San Francisco First Cong. Soc., 66 Cal. 105, 4 Pac. 1096); Hall v. Wells, 54 Miss. 289, "every sale which is included in the evil intended to be remedied is embraced."

[a] In Seward v. Didier, 16 Neb. 58, 20 N. W. 12, the court says: "It is claimed on his behalf that the five years' limitation of the decedent's act only applies in case the sale was valid. There would seem to be no necessity for a statute of limitations to protect a title valid in itself. The statute, without doubt, was intended to apply to all sales made by a guardian, executor, or administrator. Spencer v. Sheehan, 19 Minn. 338; Miller v. Sullivan, 4 Dill. 340; Good v. Norley, 28 Iowa 188. The last case was overruled in Boyles v. Boyles, 37 Iowa 592; but in our view the opinion in 28 Iowa is the better law."

[b] In Miller v. Sullivan, 4 Dill. 340, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,592, Judge Dillon says: "This is a wise statute, doubly wise in a new country, for reasons which fully appear in this case. It would be robbed of its virtue if it was confined to cases where the sale was valid, for such sales do not need the protection of such a statute. 'They that are whole need no physician.'"

[a] The limitation of five years within which an action is to be brought applies to defective sales under licenses from a court of competent jurisdiction, but not to sales where no petition or license ever existed. Tracy v. Roberts, 88 Me. 310, 34 Atl. 68, 51 Am. St. Rep. 394.

[b] "Inasmuch as the guardian ad litem's purchase was made void by statute, delay on the part of these plaintiffs in bringing proceedings to recover possession of the premises does not affect their rights." O'Donoghue v. Boies, 92 Hun 3, 37 N. Y. Supp. 961.

[c] In Minnesota, Laws 1864, ch. 45, §2, which provides that where an order of confirmation has been made prior to the passage of that act, no proceedings shall be had to set aside and vacate the sale after the expiration of two years from such passage, and that the conveyances of the guardian made in pursuance of any such sale shall not, after the expiration of said two years, be voided by any court, etc., does not apply to a sale made by a guardian without any license, or by one not a guardian. Dawson v. Helmes, 30 Minn. 107, 14 N. W. 462. Compare Smith v. Swenson, 37 Minn. 1, 32 N. W. 784.

9. Cooper v. Sunderland, 3 Iowa 114, 66 Am. Dec. 52.

[a] In Hall v. Wells, 54 Miss. 289, the court after citing Code, 1871, ch. 45, §2173, which provides that "no action shall be brought to recover any property heretofore sold by any administrator, executor or guardian, by virtue of the order of any Probate Court in this state, on the ground of the invalidity of such sale, unless such action be commenced within one year after this chapter shall take effect, if such sale shall have been made in good faith and the purchase money paid," said: "We adhere to the views expressed in Morgan v. Hazlehurst Lodge, 53 Miss. 665. The section of the code cited was not intended, and does not have the effect, to cure by express enactment illegal or defective proceedings in the Probate Court for the sale of property by administrators, executors or guardians. It has no retrospective operation, but is wholly prospective. It is founded on a view of the past, but looks to the future. It originated in the known fact that a very large proportion of the sales of property by virtue of the orders of Probate Courts was void, from various causes; and, as insecurity of titles to property is a great public evil, it was determined to provide a short statute of limitations applicable to all the time within which an appeal may be taken, referring rather to a proceeding other than an appeal.¹⁰

(V.) Question of Law and Fact.—The question as to whether the probate proceedings were "regular," in other words, in accordance with the laws regulating the sale of a minor's property, is not a question of fact for the jury, but a question of law to be determined by the court, and the same is true as to the effect of the order of the probate court relating to the sale, and the deed executed by the guardian.¹¹

(VI.) Judgment.—Upon a consolidation of an action to set aside and an action to confirm a sale, if the court determines the sale should stand, the judgment should confirm the original judgment or decree and sale.¹²

g. Indemnification of Purchaser.—Where the sale is set aside, a purchaser in good faith must be indemnified for all damages, costs and expenses to which he has been subjected.¹³

10. Collateral Attack.—If the court have jurisdiction, its decree or the proceedings affecting the sale of an infant's property are not subject to collateral attack, even though erroneous;¹⁴ the remedy, if cases falling within the existing evil; and the section under review contains the provisions to remedy it."

Jones*, 72 Ill. 276, 280.

ly, except as provided in §20 of Act of December 16, 1853 (Ore. Laws 739) which provides, that when the ward or any person claiming under him shall contest the validity of a guardian's sale "the same shall not be avoided on account of any irregularity in the proceedings; provided it shall appear: 1. That the guardian was licensed to make the sale by a county court of competent jurisdiction; 2. That he gave a bond that was approved by the county judge; 3. That he took the oath prescribed by statute; 4. That he gave notice of the time and place of sale as prescribed by law; and, 5. That the premises were sold accordingly at public auction, and are held by one who purchased them in good faith." See also Goldsmith v. Gilliland, 10 Sawy. 606, 613; *Hobart v. for want of jurisdiction,¹⁶ or the error is one affecting the jurisdiction, the sale may be collaterally attacked.¹⁷

B. MORTGAGE OF INFANT'S REAL PROPERTY. — 1. Jurisdiction. — The jurisdiction of proceedings to mortgage an infant's real property is substantially the same as in the case of sales of such property.¹⁸

2. Necessity for Order of Court. — To mortgage the real property of an infant the guardian must first obtain an order of court,¹⁹ and

16. Musgrave v. Conover, 85 Ill. 374.

[a] What Necessary To Give Jurisdiction.—In Young v. Lorain, 11 Ill. 625, the court in commenting upon the authorities said: "They all agree that enough must appear, either in the application or the order, or, at least, somewhere upon the face of the proceeding, to call upon the court to proceed to act; and all agree, that when that does appear, then the court has properly acquired jurisdiction, or, in other words, is properly set to work. When the jurisdiction is thus established, and the court is authorized to hear, it follows, as a necessary consequence, that it is authorized to adjudge, and that judgment being thus entered by authority of law, no matter how erroneous it may be, or even absurd—though it be made in palpable violation of the law itself, and manifestly against the evidence—is, nevertheless, binding upon all whom the law says shall be bound by it, that is, upon all parties and privies to it, until it is reversed in a regular proceeding for that purpose. While it remains a judgment, it can not be inquired into, nor its regularity questioned, in any collateral proceeding. . . . The inquiry is not whether the proof was sufficient, but was such a case presented to the court as called upon it, under the statute, to act, to deliberate, and to decide? Was its aid properly invoked? If so, then the court acted within its jurisdiction, and every presumption is in favor of its judgment."

[b] In Minnesota, "By Gen. St. (1866), c. 57, sec. 47 (being the same as Gen. St. 1878, c. 57, sec. 51), it is enacted that 'in case of an action relating to any real estate sold by . . . guardian, . . . in which the ward . . . shall contest the validity of the sale, it shall not be avoided on account of any irregularity in the proceedings, provided it appears . . . that the . . . guardian was licensed to make the sale by the probate court having jurisdiction,' etc. As held in Montour v. Purdy, 11 Minn. 278 (384), and Babcock v. Cobb, Id. 247 (347), the effect of this section is to authorize the proceedings of a probate court in reference to a guardian's sale to be drawn in question by a ward (including, of course, an ex-ward) in an action collateral to such proceedings and upon the grounds which the section specifies." *Davis v. and subject to be defeated by the appointment of another guardian and his election to avoid it.⁴² A guardian who has not control of the estate, but only of the custody of the minor, cannot make a lease of such estate.⁴³

A chancery court may authorize the lease of infant's property for such time as it shall deem beneficial to the infant.⁴⁴

Under the statutes of some states the lease should be approved by the court,⁴⁵ though failure to secure such approval merely renders the lease voidable and subject to be set aside by the proper court.⁴⁶ Where the statute requires the lease to be in writing this requirement must be complied with or the lease will be a nullity.⁴⁷

Direct and collateral attack upon the proceedings leasing an infant's property are governed by the same principles which apply to sales.⁴⁸

Appeal is governed by principles elsewhere discussed.⁴⁹

[a] Without the support of authority, it would seem that, granting the jurisdiction of an equity court to dispose of the fee in a minor's real estate when it clearly appeared this was manifestly in his interest, the disposition of a lesser estate upon the same ground might equally be sanctioned by the court. IV. CUSTODY OF INFANTS.⁵⁶—A. JURISDICTION.—The prerogative of the state arising out of its power and duty, as parens patriae, to protect the interests of infants has always been exercised by courts of chancery;⁵⁷ and courts of chancery are vested with a broad and comprehensive jurisdiction over the persons of infants.⁵⁸ Such jurisdiction

[a] Any matter affecting a child may become a subject of chancery jurisdiction, and it is immaterial whether it is brought to the attention of the court by bill, petition, or application for the writ of habeas corpus. Woodruff v. Conley, 50 Ala. 304.

[b] Origin of Jurisdiction.—"The jurisdiction of courts of equity over the persons and property of infants dates from a very early period in the history of these courts. In its inception this jurisdiction belonged to the King of England, the same constituting a part of his powers as parens patriae to protect his subjects, and was transferred by him to the court of chancery." Richards v. East Tennessee Ry. Co., 106 Ga. 614, 33 S. E. 193, 45 L. R. A. 712; Com. v. Barney, 29 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 317.

[c] In Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.) 181, the court says that the protection of infants from brutal treatment, by their parents, formed a part of the original jurisdiction of chancery, and as such might be exercised in this country as well as in England.

[b] Appointment of Probation Officers.—Probation officers like attorneys, masters in chancery, receivers, referees and other similar officers are mere assistants of the court in the performance of judicial functions. The power to appoint and remove such officers is necessary to the independent exercise of judicial power and the separation of the judicial department from the other departments of the government which are prohibited from exercising its functions. *Witter v. B. STATUTORY PROCEEDINGS AFFECTING THE CUSTODY OF INFANTS.

1. Generally.—In many if not most of the states statutes have been enacted providing for the care and custody of what are frequently termed dependent or delinquent children, and incidentally defining certain offenses on the part of adults in connection with such children.⁶⁵ The more recent of such statutes are known as "juvenile acts," and the court in which the proceedings under the statute are conducted is usually designated as the "juvenile court,"⁶⁶ or sometimes as the "children's court,"⁶⁷ or it may be given no special title; but in this discussion the term juvenile will be used with reference to all such statutes and courts.

2. Jurisdiction and Venue.—The statute provides what court shall have jurisdiction to enforce the proceedings under it.⁶⁸

Juvenile courts have original jurisdiction in all cases coming within the terms of the juvenile acts,⁶⁹ but only such jurisdiction as is given by statute.⁷⁰

The county of the infant's residence is ordinarily the proper venue for proceedings respecting the child's care and custody under such statutes.⁷¹

75. Arizona and Arkansas.—Upon the petition of any citizen, resident of the county, setting forth that a child is neglected, dependent, incorrigible, or delinquent, and is in need of the care of the court, or when any child under eighteen is charged with a crime. Ariz. Civ. Code, 1913, §3564; Acts of Ark., 1911, Act 215, §4.

[a] In California any person may file a petition showing that there is within the county, or residing therein, a neglected, dependent or delinquent person, and praying that such person be dealt with according to the "juvenile court law." St., 1913, p. 1285.

[b] In Colorado, any officer of the state board of child and animal protection or the juvenile court, or any person who is a resident of the county, having knowledge of a child in his county who appears to be a dependent or neglected child, may file the petition. Ann. St., 1911, §554.

[c] Delaware and New Hampshire. Under Del. Laws, 1911, ch. 262, §8, person, being a resident of the county, may file a petition.⁷⁶ In some states the proceedings are commenced by the filing of an affidavit.⁷⁷

5. Petition, Complaint or Affidavit.—The petition, complaint or affidavit, by which the proceedings are commenced, to obtain an adjudication of the status or condition of the child must state facts sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the court,⁷⁸ so it must state the facts constituting neglect, dependency or delinquency as defined in the stat-providing for a juvenile court in the city of Wilmington, any reputable citizen of said city having knowledge of a child who appears to be either neglected, dependent, or delinquent may file petition. To the same effect, N. H. Laws, 1911, ch. 125, §4.

[d] In Florida, any probation officer being a resident in the county where there shall be found any dependent or delinquent child may file a petition. Laws of Fla., 1911, ch. 6216, §3.

[c] In Georgia, any ordinary, recorder, or judge of a superior or city court may upon oath being made before him by a probation or police officer, or any citizen, that having made due inquiry he believes any child to be a delinquent or wayward child, issue his summons for the appearance of such child before the children's court. Code, 1911, vol. 2, §891.

[f] In Idaho all proceedings are by information or sworn complaint to be filed by the prosecuting attorney of the county as in other cases under the general laws of the state. Session Laws, 1911, art. 17, §154. But see §162, providing that when a child is a juvenile disorderly person within the meaning of §161, the truant officer, or any school teacher, or other reputable person may make complaint in the probate court of the county in which such child resides.

[g] In Indiana, by the board of children's guardians. Burns' Ann. St., 1908, §3659.

[h] In Michigan the officer making the arrest of a child under the age of seventeen shall file a petition. Pub. Acts, 1911, No. 325, §6.

[i] New Jersey, New York and Texas.—Any person having knowledge or information that child residing in or actually within the county is a delinquent child within the provisions of the act, may file a petition. N. J. Laws, 1912, ch. 353, § 6. To the same effect, N. Y. Laws, 1910, ch. 611, §3; Tex. Gen. Laws, 1905-7, ch. 64, §3.

[j] In North Dakota, any reputable person being a resident of the state may file with the judge or clerk of the court, a petition. Laws, 1911, ch. 177, §5.

[k] Pennsylvania.—As to when the powers of the court may be exercised in Pennsylvania, see Purdon's Dig., vol. 2, p. 1881.

[l] In Utah, proceedings in the interest of juveniles as defined by the Act, shall be commenced by a complaint or sworn statement filed with the clerk of the court. Laws, 1913, ch. 54, §4.

[m] In West Virginia by board of trustees or directors of any orphan asylum or children's home in the state. Code, 1913, §6.

77. La. Const. & Rev. Laws, 1908, vol. 3, p. 394.

[a] In Ohio, any person having knowledge of a minor coming within the purview of the statute may file an affidavit setting forth the facts. Gen. Code, 1910, §1647.

78. In re Lewis, 3 Cal. App. 738, 86 Pac. 996; In re Mundell, 3 Cal. App. 472, 86 Pac. 833; State ex rel. Rea v. Kinmore, 54 Minn. 135, 55 N. W. 830.

[a] A petition which is void as not stating facts sufficient to give the court jurisdiction will be disregarded in subsequent proceedings affecting the same matter. Moore v. Superior Court, 22 Cal. App. 156, 133 Pac. 990.

[b] Where original petition was void and subsequently a valid petition is filed, it is immaterial that the second petition is designated "an amended or supplemental petition," and contains recitals that it was made by permission ute,⁷⁹ should describe the child to be affected by the proceedings,⁸⁰ state the names and residence, if known to petitioner, of the parents or of the court and is indorsed and filed under the same number as the first so-called petition. It is not what it is called, but what it is that fixes character of the pleading. Moore v. Superior Court, 22 Cal. App. 156, 133 Pac. 990.

79. Cal. St., 1913, p. 1285, §6; Idaho Session Laws, art. 17, §154.

[a] A petition alleging that a child is under the age of fifteen years, and was a dependent child under the act of February 26, 1903, in this, "that the said child is without proper guardianship and her home is an unfit place for such child," is not sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the court, where the statute above referred to provides "the words 'dependent child' shall mean any child under the age of sixteen years . . . found wandering and not having any home or any settled place of abode, or proper guardianship, or visible means of subsistence; . . . or whose home, by reason of neglect, cruelty, or depravity on the part of its parents, guardian, or other person in whose care it may be, is an unfit place for such child." In re Mundell, 3 Cal. App. 472, 86 Pac. 833.

[b] A complaint which shows that the infant's guardian, because of his advanced age, cannot exercise that control and restraint which is necessary to prevent the infant from becoming an evil member of society, and showing also that he is vicious, and associates "late at night with immoral, drunken and dissolute persons, at his own pleasure," is sufficient. Jarrard v. State, 116 Ind. 98, 17 N. E. 912.

[c] A complaint charging a child with having been found "improperly exposed and neglected and wandering" in a public park "without any proper guardianship," is insufficient in that it does not charge that she was so exposed by those having her in charge. People v. N. Y. Catholic Protectory, 106 N. Y. 604, 13 N. E. 435, 925.

[d] Where the petition or application merely states that the child belongs "to one of the classes enumerated by the statutes," the probate court does not acquire jurisdiction to proceed against the child or its natural or legal guardian. State ex rel. Rea v. Kimmere, 54 Minn. 135, 55 N. W. 830.

[e] An order of commitment, issued out of the juvenile court which is based on a petition praying that a child be taken into custody as a dependent child, but stating no facts such as are required by the statute to constitute said child a dependent child, is made without jurisdiction, and such child will be discharged on habeas corpus. Ex parte Burner, 23 Cal. App. 637, 139 Pac. 90.

[f] In Louisiana, a charge before the juvenile court suffices when the affidavit sets forth in general terms the facts constituting neglect or delinquency. State v. Johnson, 131 La. 8, 53 So. 1015.

[g] In Maine, the allegation in a complaint, that a person is "an idle, ungovernable boy, and a habitual truant," describes no offense under any statute. Lewiston v. Fairfield, 47 Me. 481.

[h] In Michigan, under Act No. 200, Pub. Acts, 1905; 3 Comp. Laws, §11,765, a charge that respondent was a disorderly juvenile offender, in that she neglected and refused to go to school and was a truant and is an unmanageable child, is insufficient to sustain a conviction. People v. Turja, 157 Mich. 530, 122 N. W. 177.

[i] In Missouri, under §1546, Rev. St., 1909, as the statute does not individuate the offense, it is therefore necessary that the information set out the facts which constitute the alleged offense, and an allegation that a girl of the age of sixteen years, "was then and there unlawfully incorrigible to such an extent that she could not be controlled by her parents and guardians, and that the associations of her . . . were then and there immoral and criminal and bad and vicious;" is insufficient. Ex parte See, 241 Mo. 292, 145 S. W. 419.

[j] The information should be precise and bring it clearly within the statute; when it omits any essential ingredient or circumstance, and the defect is not supplied by the evidence, the conviction is bad. People v. N. Y. Catholic Protectory, 106 N. Y. 604, 13 N. E. 435, 925.

80. Laws of Fla., 1911, ch. 6216, §3.

[a] Children should be named in petition, but failure to do so will be cured by failure of a parent appearing guardian of such child,⁸¹ or person in whose immediate care the child may be,⁸² and the particular occasion for the institution of the proceedings.⁸³

In some states it is necessary to allege that the minor's parents are unable to support him and that he is not in attendance upon an educational institution,⁸⁴ or that both of its parents have abandoned the child or are unfit.⁸⁵ The petition is required to be in writing and to be verified by affidavit.⁸⁶ The petition⁸⁷ or affidavit⁸⁸ may be on information and belief. The requirement that a petition be filed is mandatory,⁸⁹ as the filing of a complaint or petition is a condition precedent to right to make any order affecting the custody of the child,⁹⁰ though objections to the complaint or petition may be waived.⁹¹

84. In Georgia, in order to convict a minor between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years, of the offense of vagrancy, under the act of August 7, 1903, p. 46, the state must allege and prove, in addition to the usual allegations, that the minor's parents were unable to support him, and that he was not in attendance upon an educational institution. Collins v. State, 125 Ga. 15, 53 S. E. 809; Braswell v. State, 119 Ga. 72, 45 S. E. 963; Rogers v. State, 4 Ga. App. 392, 61 S. E. 496; Turner v. State, 2 Ga. App. 386, 58 S. E. 492; *Jacobs v. [a] Although the complaint in a proceeding to commit neglected children to a children's home may have been defective in failing to name the children, and also because too general in its statements of the nature of the charges, still where the complaint alleges abandonment and neglect, tending to induce the children to lead dissolute, vicious and immoral lives, and there is an appearance by one of the parents in resistance of the application, without objection to its sufficiency, the court acquires jurisdiction, and the parent so appearing waives objection

Trifling and ridiculous statements will not vitiate a complaint otherwise sufficient.⁵²

6. Citation or Summons, Warrant and Notice.—a. Citation or Summons.—The statutes generally require that upon the filing of the petition or complaint, a citation or summons shall issue to certain specified persons, fixing the day and time of the hearing,⁹³ requiring such person to appear with the child,⁹⁴ and show cause why the court should not make provision for the custody of the child.⁹⁵

Generally the citation must be directed to the person having the custody or control of the child,⁹⁶ or to a person with whom the child may

[a] Though the time of appeal from an order granting an association the custody of plaintiff's children has expired, the court has jurisdiction to consider plaintiff's petition for an order granting him their custody, when such petition alleges that since the former order his circumstances have changed, and that he is now able to provide and care for them, since such petition is not to review or reverse the former order, but is to procure a new judgment on a new state of facts. McFall v. Simmons, 12 S. D. 562, 81 N. W. 898.

A definite sentence need not be fixed in the order,⁴⁷ where the law terminates the period of commitment when the child arrives at the age of majority.⁴⁸ The child cannot be committed beyond that time in many jurisdictions,⁴⁹ though in others commitment until the age of twenty-one is permitted, in which event marriage or arrival at majority at an earlier age does not terminate the restraint.⁵⁰ A sentence for a longer period than that allowed by the statute is void.⁵¹

The order of commitment will not be deemed invalid because of any imperfection or defect in form.⁵²

Alternative sentences are permissible in some states.⁵³

73. In Amidon's Case, 40 Mich. 628, a justice committed an offender to the reform school until he should be twenty-one, and the judge of probate approved the commitment. The extreme limit allowed by law was the age of eighteen and the justice altered the commitment accordingly; and the amended process which was not approved, remained the only warrant for detaining the prisoner. It was held on habeas corpus, that the process was void, and the infant was discharged.

V. CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS AGAINST INFANTS.—Some of the juvenile acts, which have hereinbefore been discussed,⁷⁷ provide for the trial of all criminal prosecutions against minors under a certain age in the juvenile court,⁷⁸ and that in such case the infant shall be entitled to a jury trial.⁷⁹

VI. CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS UNDER STATUTES FOR PROTECTION OF INFANTS.—A. UNDER THE JUVENILE ACTS.—

1. Generally.—The so-called juvenile acts usually define certain crimes on the part of persons who cause or contribute to the dependency or delinquency of juveniles.⁸⁰ In the absence of statutory provision to the contrary the prosecutions under such acts should be conducted in the same manner as other criminal prosecutions.⁸¹

2. In What Court.—Under some statutes the prosecution is in the juvenile court;⁸² while under others it is in the same court as are other criminal cases.⁸³

3. Indictment, Information or Affidavit.—a. Necessity and Propriety of.—In some states, prosecutions under the juvenile acts must

[a] The juvenile court has jurisdiction of a charge that the mother, by reason of her shameful conduct, is an unfit person to have the custody of her child. State v. Johnson, 131 La. 8, 58 So. 1015.

83. A prosecution for contributing to the delinquency of a child is properly tried in the criminal and not the juvenile department of the superior court, where there is nothing to indi-be either by indictment, or information filed after a preliminary hearing and commitment by a magistrate;⁸⁴ in others by an affidavit.⁸⁵

b. Allegations. — (I.) Generally. — Where the juvenile court is one of limited jurisdiction the facts showing its jurisdiction must be alleged.⁸⁶

It has been held that it was not the purpose of the juvenile act to provide additional methods of punishing crime or cumulative penalties for crimes already provided for by statute and that therefore an information under the act is insufficient where it describes a crime cognizable under the provision of other statutes.⁸⁷ But a charge that an adult has committed an offense against a delinquent minor suffices to give the juvenile court jurisdiction.⁸⁸

The pleading must show that the juvenile in question is neglected, dependent or delinquent,⁸⁹ or that the acts of the defendant tended to lead the child to become a delinquent,⁹⁰ and generally this must be done by setting forth the particular facts, unless there has been a previous adjudication of the juvenile's status.⁹¹ But it is not necessary to allege that the accused is a juvenile. State v. Williams, 73 Wash. 678, 132 Pac. 415.

App. 548, 126 Pac. 501, because the prosecution is in the superior court sitting as a juvenile court, and the constitution requires criminal prosecutions in the superior court to be by indictment or information.

Shaw*, 169 Ind. 662, 83 N. E. 376.

89. State v. Rose, 125 La. 1080, 52 So. 165, a prosecution for permitting minors to appear on the stage.

cy. State v. Johnson, 131 La. 8, 58 So. 1015. Compare State v. Fink, 127 La. 190, 53 So. 519.

90. State v. Dunn, 53 Ore. 304, 99 Pac. 278, 100 Pac. 258, unnecessary to allege that he had in fact become a delinquent.

91. In re Goldsworthy, 22 Cal. App. 354, 134 Pac. 352; People v. Pierro, 17 Cal. App. 741, 121 Pac. 689, in this case the averment was that she "was a minor female child under the age of eighteen years, and was then and there a dependent child within the meaning of that certain act," etc., held insufficient. But see State v. Fink, 127 La. 190, 53 So. 519.

[a] Information Held Sufficient. "The information . . . alleges that the petitioner endeavored to induce and persuade the female minor therein named to lead an idle, dissolute, and immoral life, by importuning and coercing her to enter a house of prostitution, and that he had sexual relations with her. Obviously, the acts of the petitioner with and upon said minor as thus disclosed by the information constituted her a dependent person, the acts themselves having contributed to and caused such dependency. We cannot conceive of anything more which could have been alleged to charge the petitioner with the crime of contributing to the dependency of said minor." In re Goldsworthy, 22 Cal. App. 354, 134 Pac. 352.

[b] An affidavit that F. was or about the 1st day of March, 1909, and at

lege an adjudication of dependency or delinquency unless such adjudication is relied upon.⁹²

An allegation that the child is a minor is sufficient without stating his age.⁹³ A statement in an indictment of the age of the child alleged to have been abandoned cannot be changed on motion of the district attorney.⁹⁴

(II.) Negating Exceptions.—The information or indictment must negative exceptions expressly or impliedly included in the statute.⁹⁵

4. Review.—The judgment of a juvenile court even though erroneous cannot be collaterally attacked in a habeas corpus proceeding where the court has jurisdiction.⁹⁶ An appeal being the sole remedy for the correction of mere defects in the proceedings of the trial court,⁹⁷ so a conviction in a juvenile court will not be reviewed on writs of certiorari and prohibition when there is an adequate remedy by appeal.⁹⁸

B. CRUELTY TO CHILD AND FAILURE TO GIVE MEDICAL ATTENTION. Indictments based upon cruelty to children or failure to provide them medical or other attention⁹⁹ follow the general rules elsewhere divers other days and times between that date and the first day of April, 1910, did unlawfully aid, abet, induce, cause, encourage and contribute to the delinquency of L. S., a female minor child, and further stating facts, means and methods by which he contributed to such delinquency, states an offense, and is not bad for duplicity. Fisher v. State, 84 Ohio St. 360, 95 N. E. 908. 908.

[c] Charge in Language of Statute. An information charges the statutory offense of contributing to the delinquency of a child, in the language of the statute, or in words of similar import, and is therefore sufficient, when it alleges that the child was a delinquent child and a lewd and dissolute person who associated with vicious and disreputable persons, and that the accused wilfully encouraged, caused and contributed to her delinquency by enticing and encouraging her to drink intoxicating liquors, and consort with immoral persons and committed an act of sexual intercourse with the accused. State v. Eisen, 53 Ore. 297, 99 Pac. 282, 100 Pac. 257, holding that an information under the juvenile act for contributing to a child's delinquency, alleging that a specified female under eighteen years old was pregnant, is insufficient, as it does not negative pregnancy in a lawful manner, or as a result of marriage; the presumption being that it was lawful. [b] Indictment for cruelty to children held sufficient in People v. Loomis, 161 Mich. 651, 126 N. W. 985.

[c] Criminal Exposure.—An indictment against a woman, which charges that she assaulted a female infant child, and wilfully and maliciously exposed her and left her exposed in the street in the night time, without the care of any person, and without sufficient, discussed. The same is true as to instructions to the jury in such cases.¹

C. PERMITTING MINOR TO ENTER OR FREQUENT CERTAIN PLACES OR PLAY CERTAIN GAMES.²—Indictments, informations, or complaints under statutes which make it a crime to permit minors to enter or frequent certain places such as pool or billiard rooms, or to play certain forbidden games, must in general conform to the rules of criminal pleading elsewhere discussed.³

An indictment for permitting a minor to play a game must charge proper or necessary clothing, shelter or protection against the weather and the cold, does not allege a criminal exposure or neglect, but will support a sentence for assault. Com. v. Stoddard, 9 Allen (Mass.) 280.

[d] Failure To Provide Medical Attendance to Minor Child.—An indictment under a statute providing that "A person who, 1, willfully omits without lawful excuse, to perform a duty by law imposed upon him to furnish food, clothing, shelter or medical attendance to a minor . . . or, 4, neglects, refuses or omits to comply with any provisions of this section, . . . is guilty of a misdemeanor," which charges that the defendant willfully, maliciously and unlawfully omitted, without lawful excuse, to perform a duty imposed upon him by law, to furnish medical attendance for his minor child, said minor child being ill and suffering from catarrhal pneumonia, and that he willfully, maliciously and unlawfully neglected and refused to allow said minor to be attended and provided for by a regularly licensed and practicing physician, is not bad because it fails to allege that the case was one in which a regularly licensed and practicing physician should have been called, and, therefore, fails to charge a criminal offense, since that is necessarily implied from the language used; if the medical attendance was not necessary it was not a duty required of the defendant to furnish it; if it was necessary then it was his duty to furnish it and his failure to do so is an unlawful omission to perform a duty imposed, and constitutes a misdemeanor." People v. Pierson, 176 N. Y. 201, 68 N. E. 243, 98 Am. St. Rep. 666, 63 L. R. A. 187, reversing 80 App. Div. 415, 81 N. Y. Supp. 214.

1. See generally the title "Instructions."

[a] Instructions.—Religious Beliefs. "In submitting the case to the jury the trial court charged, in substance, that before the jurors could convict the defendant they must find that he knew the child was ill, and deliberately and intentionally failed or refused to call a physician, or to give the child such medicines as the science of the age would say would be proper that a child in its condition should have; that if at the time he refused to call a physician he knew the child to be dangerously ill, his belief constitutes no defense whatever to the charge made. In other words, no man can be permitted to set up his religious belief as a defense to the commission of an act which is in plain violation of the law of the state." Held proper. People v. Pierson, 176 N. Y. 201, 68 N. E. 243, 98 Am. St. Rep. 666, 63 L. R. A. 187, reversing 80 App. Div. 415, 81 N. Y. Supp. 214.

2. For prosecutions under statutes forbidding the sale or gift of liquor to minors, or permitting minors to be present in saloons, etc., see the title "Intoxicating Liquors."

Permitting minor to gamble, see 10 STANDARD PROC. 357.

3. See the title "Indictment and Information."

[a] Indictment Held Sufficient.—An indictment which charges the defendant with "being the owner and having control of billiard and pool tables, similar to tables called pigeon-hole tables, did unlawfully, wilfully and knowingly suffer and permit, for compensation and reward, . . . a person then under twenty-one years of age, to play games on said tables and without written permission from the father, mother, or guardian, or other person having the custody or control of said minor, authorizing him so to do," is a good indictment, and a demurrer thereto should be overruled. Com. v. Wills, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 515, 82 S. W. 236.

[b] Indictment for permitting minors to congregate in a public pool hall that a game was played,⁴ must state the name of the person with whom the minor was playing,⁵ or give reasons why he is not named;⁶ but it is not required that the indictment allege that anything was lost or won upon the game,⁷ or that the minor bet on the game,⁸ unless the charge is permitting him to bet.⁹

Time. — The indictment should show that the facts constituting the alleged offense existed at the time of the commission of the offense.¹⁰

Criminal intent on the part of the defendant, where not an essential element of the offense, need not be alleged.¹¹

Ownership. — There must be an allegation¹² that the defendant was the held sufficient in Faber v. State, 66 Ind. 600; Manheim v. State, 66 Ind. 65.

4. Zook v. State, 47 Ind. 463.

[a] The omission of the word "at" or "upon" before the words "said table," in an indictment against the owner of a billiard table for permitting a minor to play on such table, renders such indictment defective. Donniger v. State, 52 Ind. 326.

[b] Duplicity.—An indictment alleging that the defendant permitted a minor to play four games of pool is not bad for duplicity as stating four separate and distinct offenses. Kiley v. State, 120 Ind. 65, 22 N. E. 99.

[c] A complaint alleged that one E. P. was a minor, and that on the 12th day of March, 1870, at a specified place, he "did play a game of billiards on a billiard table kept" at that place by the defendant "for profit;" and that defendant "did on that day, and at divers other days since that time, the 12th of March, 1870, and this day, permit for pay, said E. P., a minor as aforesaid, to play billiards on his said billiard table kept for profit as aforesaid," etc. It was held: 1. That the billiard table was charged with sufficient certainty to have been kept for profit on the 12th of March, 1870, at the place named, although the technical words "then and there" were omitted. 2. That the defendant was sufficiently charged with being the keeper of the billiard table, although the word "keeper" found in the statute, is not used in the complaint. 3. That the words "at divers other days," etc., may be rejected as surplusage, and do not invalidate the complaint. Gallagher v. State, 26 Wis. 423.

9. See 10 STANDARD PROC. 357.

10. Sikes v. State, 67 Ala. 77.

[a] "The indictment in this case is defective. It charges that 'J. S., who is the owner or keeper of a saloon in which vinous, spirituous, or other intoxicating liquors are kept for sale, having a billiard table connected therewith on which the public can play,' &c. All these averments relate to the time present, when the indictment was found. They should have been charged to exist at the time the alleged misdemeanor was committed; for, it is those attendant facts and conditions which make the act charged an indictable offense." Sikes v. State, 67 Ala. 77.

11. See generally the title "Indictment and Information."

[a] It is not necessary that a complaint against the keeper of a billiard room for admitting a minor thereto without consent of his parent or guardian, aver guilty intent of the defendant. Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6.

[b] Where the statute does not require that the act shall be knowingly done, the use of the word "knowingly" will be treated as surplusage. Teritory v. Church, 14 N. M. 226, 91 Pac. 720.

12. State v. Ward, 57 Ind. 537. See generally the title "Indictment and Information."

[a] Allegation "which said billiard table he, the said . . . then and there being the owner of, and then and there having the care, control and management of," is sufficient. Hipes v. State, 73 Ind. 39.

[b] Averment as to Ownership of Table Held Insufficient.—An indictment charging the defendant with having owner of, or that the defendant had the care, management, or control of the billiard table.¹³

Permitting Minor To Frequent Dance House.—A complaint against a defendant for permitting a minor to frequent a dance house need not describe the character of the dance house, or allege that it was a place injurious to morals.¹⁴

D. EXHIBITING IMMORAL PUBLICATION.—On a prosecution for giving or showing to minors any paper or publication illustrating or describing immoral deeds it is not necessary that the indictment set out the supposed prohibited publication or paper, or excuse a failure to do so.¹⁵

VII. CONCEALMENT OF BIRTH AND DEATH.—A. INDICTMENT.¹⁶—Another person may be jointly indicted with the mother for concealing the death of an infant.¹⁷ allowed a person under the age of twenty-one "to play at a certain game on a billiard table, called billiards, then and there in his saloon, . . . of which he was then and there the owner;" etc., was held insufficient as to the allegation of ownership, the court saying: "The pleader intended to allege in the indictment that the appellee was the owner of the billiard table; but we do not think that the averment is sufficiently plain. In the sentence, 'of which he was then and there the owner,' the pronoun 'which' can not safely be referred past 'his saloon' to 'a billiard table,' as its antecedent. Such a construction would be altogether too loose for criminal pleading." State v. Ward, 57 Ind. 537.

13. Hanrahan v. State, 57 Ind. 527, in which the court said: "We do not think the words 'having the control and management of said saloon in which were kept billiard tables,' as averred in the indictment, are equivalent to the words, 'having the care, management, or control of any billiard table,' as used in the statute. Having the control and management of a saloon is clearly different from having the care, management or control of a billiard table, although the table be within the saloon. The right to control the saloon might be in one person, and the right to control a billiard table in the saloon in another person."

18. State v. Ihrig, 106 Mo. 267, 17 S. W. 300; State v. White, 76 Mo. 96.

[a] An indictment under statute forbidding the concealment of the death of any issue of the body of the defendant "so that it may not come to light whether it was born dead or alive, or whether it were murdered or not," which omits the quoted part of the statute and charges merely the concealment of the death of the child so that it might not come to light; with intent to conceal such death is fatally defective. Com. v. Clark, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 105, 113.

[b] Allegations To Put Mother to Proof Child Was Stillborn.—Under 21 Jac., ch. 27, providing the guilty mother shall suffer as in murder unless she prove by one witness the child is born dead, the indictment to put her to proof of this fact must allege that she was born of a child which was a bastard, that it was born alive, and that she killed it. It need not allege that she concealed it. 2 Hale P. C. 288.

[c] The following indictment was the child's birth,¹⁹ its death,²⁰ an endeavor to conceal its birth,²¹ and under some statutes, that if born alive it would be a bastard.²² No specific intent need be alleged.²³

B. TRIAL. — It is a question of fact whether the defendant disposed of the child's body;²⁴ or if done by another, whether he was defend-held sufficient in State v. Stewart, 93 N. C. 539:

State of North Carolina, } Superior Court,
Burke County. } Spring Term, 1885.

The jurors for the State, upon their oath, present that Laura Stewart, late of the county of Burke, on the first day of March, A. D. 1885, with force and arms at and in the county aforesaid, unlawfully and wilfully did endeavor to conceal the birth of a new-born male child, not yet named, of her, the said Laura Stewart, by then and there secretly placing and leaving the dead body of said child in a secret place, contrary, etc.

J. S. Adams, Solicitor.

[d] Form of Indictment.—[Commencement] "in the county aforesaid, being then and there big with a male child, was then and there delivered of the said child alive, which said male child then and there instantly died; and that the said A. S., being so delivered of the said male child as aforesaid, did then and there unlawfully endeavor to conceal the birth of the said child by secretly burying (by secret burying or otherwise disposing of) the body of the said child; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity." Add a second count stating that the child was born dead, and state the means of concealment specially when it is otherwise than by secret burying. Archb. Cr. Pl. 435. See also Wharton's Proc. of Ind. & P., §§183, 185.

[e] Conclusion.—The statute 21 Jac., ch. 27, provides that a mother of a bastard concealing its death shall suffer as in murder. 2 Hale P. C. 288. Consequently the indictment may conclude contra pacem, etc., instead of contra formam statuti. Kel. 32, 84 Eng. Reprint 1068; 2 Hale P. C. 289. Compare Dunn v. State, 59 Ark. 560, 22 S. [a] Whether the infant died before, at, or after its birth need not be alleged. State v. Ellis, 43 Ark. 93; Reg. v. Coxhead, 1 Car. & K. 622, 47 E. C. L. 622.

[b] Sufficient Averment of Death. (1) An averment that the said Sarah, "the said infant having on the day and year, &c, died, did endeavour, privately, to conceal the death of the said infant," is a positive averment of death. Boyles v. Com., 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 40. (2) But in Douglass v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.) 535, an allegation "that the said Martha Douglass did endeavour privately to conceal the death of the said female bastard child," was held to be an insufficient averment of the death, the death being alleged only by way of recital. See also State v. Ellis, 43 Ark. 93.

21. Douglass v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.) 535.

[a] The details of the manner of concealment need not be alleged. State v. Ellis, 43 Ark. 93; Boyles v. Com., 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 40; Com. v. Clark, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 105. But see Foster v. Com., 12 Bush (Ky.) 373, the acts must be stated. An allegation that the appellant "did feloniously conceal the birth of a bastard child" is a statement of a conclusion of law. See 2 Bish. New Crim. Proc., §527.

[b] Allegation of place of concealment is surplusage. Wright v. United States, 4 Ind. Ter. 116, 69 S. W. 819.

22. Sullivan v. State, 36 Ark. 64; Douglass v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.) 535.

[a] The statute, 9 Geo. 4, ch. 31, makes it unnecessary to charge that the child was a bastard. Rex v. Douglas, 7 Car. & P. 644, 32 E. C. L. 801.

ant's agent;²⁵ whether or not there was a secret disposition of the body;²⁶ and whether the act was done with the intent to conceal the birth.²⁷

Where there is no evidence of concealment, it may be left to the jury to say whether or not the child was murdered by wounds.²⁸ An instruction substantially in the language of the statute is proper.²⁹

C. VERDICT. — The verdict should conform to the general rules elsewhere discussed.³⁰

A conviction of manslaughter is not allowable under an indictment charging the concealment of the birth of a bastard.³¹

25. Rex v. Douglas, 7 Car. & P. 644, 32 E. C. L. 801.

26. Reg. v. Brown, 11 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 517.

[a] Whether the body was thrown into the privy by the prisoner or whether it came from her unawares while there for another purpose was left to the jury in Reg. v. Coxhead, 1 Car. & K. 49 E. C. L. 622.

27. Rex v. Douglas, 7 Car. & P. 644, 32 E. C. L. 801.

39 Pa. Super. 107, setting out instructions condemned as not being of the calm, impartial and dignified character called for.

30. See the title "Verdict."

[a] A verdict, guilty of concealment in manner and form, etc., is sufficient to cover the element of bastardy. Boyles v. Com., 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 40.

31. Dunn v. State, 57 Ark. 560, 22 S. W. 212, the statute provides that the mother guilty of concealing the birth of a child shall suffer the same punishment as for manslaughter. It does not make such offense manslaughter.

lief; but so far as the facts may be within the knowledge of the affiant, they should be stated positively.²

This rule has been expressly recognized by statute in some cases.³ In many cases, however, the law requires an affidavit made upon the positive knowledge of the affiant. In such a case, an affidavit upon information and belief only is not sufficient.⁴

Va.—Jackson v. Webster, 20 Va. 462.
W. Va.—Kesler v. Lapham, 46 W. Va. 233, 33 S. E. 289, attachment. Wis. Howell v. Kingsbury, 15 Wis. 272.

[a] "Where a showing by affidavit is required as to facts which are necessarily matters of information and belief, an affidavit on information and belief ought to suffice. The statute should receive a construction in accordance with common sense. It was not intended to require perjury, and, as it requires affidavit to matters involving legal opinion and conclusions of law and fact, it must contemplate that such affidavit will be made upon the only basis on which such opinions and conclusions can be reached." Leigh v. Green, 64 Neb. 533, 90 N. W. 255, 101 Am. St. Rep. 592.

[b] "Belief is to be considered as an absolute term; hence, to swear that he believes a thing to be true, is equivalent to swearing that it is true." Ros. Cr. Ev. 814, quoted in Simpkins v. Malatt, 9 Ind. 543. See In re Keller, 36 Fed. 681; Champ v. Kendrick, 130 Ind. 549, 30 N. E. 787; Curry v. Baker, 31 Ind. 151.

[c] Validity of Such Affidavit as Dependent on Sources of Information. The authorities condemning affidavits upon information and belief are where the statements of the informer are the sole source of affiant's knowledge. They do not apply to affidavits made where the affiant obtained some of his information from other sources, as from documents. Meade v. Southern Tier Masonic Relief Assn., 119 App. Div. 761, 104 N. Y. Supp. 523.

[d] When the facts are not disputed, an affidavit on information and belief is sufficient. Hart v. Ogdensburg & L. C. R. Co., 67 Hun 556, 22 N. Y. Supp. 401.

[e] There is no presumption that the facts are personally known to the affiant of an affidavit upon information and belief. Crowns v. Vail, 51 Hun 204, 4 N. Y. Supp. 324.

St. Rep. 507, proceeding relating to the issuance of a summons in garnishment.

[a] Statutes sometimes discriminate between facts to be sworn to positively and those on information and belief. Wilson v. Arnold, 5 Mich. 98.

[b] Statutory Form Should Be Followed.—A statute requiring an affidavit made to the best of the knowledge and belief of the affiant is not complied with by an affidavit made according to the best information and belief of the affiant. Ackerman v. Green, 107 Mo. App. 341, 81 S. W. 509.

[c] An affidavit using language referring to the disposal of defendant's property stating "as this deponent has good reason to believe, has disposed of his property, with the intent," etc., is a sufficient compliance with a statute requiring the affiant to state "he has good reason to believe the facts stated." Nicolls v. Lawrence, 30 Mich. 395.

[d] An averment that affiant "thinks" a thing is true is not equivalent to a statement that he "believes" it to be true and is insufficient. Rittenhouse v. Harman, 7 W. Va. 380.

[a] "This court formerly said that when a statute requires proof, for instance to obtain a warrant from a justice, it meant legal evidence. . . . It was always difficult for me to perceive upon what ground a piece of evidence, which would never be thought of there as competent, could be received in another court professing to proceed by the same rules, and acted upon as sufficient to sustain any proceeding. Who ever heard of a witness being allowed, before a jury, to express his naked belief, or information, or that he had reason to suspect?" Ex parte Haynes, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 611, 614. See Thompson v. Higginbotham, 18 Kan. 42, 44.

[b] "It may, as a general rule, be safely affirmed that, in the sense of the law, a general assertion of a fact in an affidavit upon information and belief proves nothing. A witness would not be allowed on the trial of a case, in any court, to give evidence of a fact which he only knew from information." Mowry v. Sanborn, 65 N. Y. 581, 584.

[d] That the person who knew the facts refused to make an affidavit will not authorize an affidavit upon information and belief where a positive affidavit is necessary. Gay v. Torrance, 145 Cal. 144, 78 Pac. 540.

[e] If the affiant could not know the facts a positive affidavit will be held insufficient. Ill.—Ferris v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 158 Ill. 237, 41 N. E. 1118; James E. Pepper Dist. Co. v. Barker, 60 Hun 156, 20 Civ. Proc. 341, 14 N. Y. Supp. 574.

[f] The fact of the deponent's knowledge must be expressly stated, or appear from the contents of the affidavit. Robinson v. Branch Circuit Judge, 142 Mich. 70, 77, 105 N. W. 25; Wright v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 119 Mich. 499, 78 N. W. 545, citing Shaw v. Ashford, 110 Mich. 534, 68 N. W. 281; Graham v. Cass Circ. Judge, 108 Mich. 425, 66 N. W. 348; *Marble v. See United States v. Moore, 2 Low. 232, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,803.

[g] Where the facts are positively stated it sufficiently appears they are made upon the affiant's personal knowledge, and it is not necessary in express terms so to state. Newman v. Goddard, 12 App. Cas. (D. C.) 404. See Paulus v. Grobben, 104 Mich. 42, 47, 62 N. W. 160.

[h] In order to secure the services of another judge to preside at the trial the affidavit showing bias and prejudice of the regular judge must be positive.

A statute that requires proof by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court demands legal evidence, not information and belief.⁵

B. EFFECT UPON POSITIVE STATEMENT OF AVERMENT OF INFORMATION AND BELIEF.—A positive affidavit is not vitiated by the addition of a statement as to the information and belief of the affiant.⁶ Thus it has been held that the addition "verily believes it to be true" does

[a] "The code provides that 'a temporary injunction may be ordered upon it appearing satisfactorily to the court or judge, by the affidavit of the plaintiff or his agent, that the plaintiff is entitled thereto.' . . . The code defines an affidavit to be a declaration under oath, made without notice to the adverse party. By the next section, a deposition is said to be a declaration under oath, made upon notice to the adverse party. Each is a declaration under oath, the only difference being, one is made without notice, the other upon notice. Now, it would not be pretended that it would be admissible testimony, if, in a deposition a witness should say that a certain statement was, 'according to the best of his knowledge, information and belief, true, in substance and in fact.' " Atchison v. Bartholow, 4 Kan. 124, 139.

[b] Where statute requires certain things to be "verified by affidavit," an affidavit of the truth and not the probable truth is required. King v. Haines, 23 Ill. 280; Aetna Indem. Co. v. Spencer, 135 Ill. App. 54.

best of our knowledge, information and belief.

[a] "The addition of the words 'to deponent's best knowledge, information, and belief' does not modify or detract from the words previously employed. The general rule is that an oath taken before a competent officer merely verifies the truth of the facts stated, according to the best knowledge, information, and belief of the affiant. The positive affirmation of the facts sworn to in an affidavit is in most cases supposed and understood to be according to the best knowledge, information, and belief of the witness." Pratt v. Stevens, 94 N. Y. 387.

[b] An affidavit on knowledge or information and belief is not objectionable as being in the alternative. Cunningham v. Doyle, 5 Misc. 219, 25 N. Y. Supp. 476.

[c] Affidavit Held To Be on Information.—In Siegmund v. Ascher, 37 Ill. App. 122, the affidavit read that "he has read said complaint and knows the contents thereof, and the same is true of his own knowledge except as to matters stated on information and belief, and as to those he believes it to be true." The court said: "We have decided that this form of oath makes the whole answer on information and belief, as there is no way of distinguishing between matters so stated, and those of which the complainant has knowledge." See: Fla.—Coxetter v. Huertas, 14 Fla. 270. Ill.—Neil v. Oldach, 86 Ill. App. 354 (citing local cases); Werner Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Miamisburg, 55 Ill. App. 321; *Stirlen v. not vitiate a positive statement.⁷ But it is held that if a statement of fact is so qualified by a further statement or phrase as to the affiant's information and belief, as to render it doubtful whether or not the fact is stated on information and belief, the statement cannot be regarded as a positive one.⁸

7. Leigh v. Green, 64 Neb. 533, 90 N. W. 255, 101 Am. St. Rep. 592, affirmed, 193 U. S. 79, 24 Sup. Ct. 390, 48 L. ed. 623.

[a] "Where the law allows a statement on belief, either form of expression is equally an allegation of such fact." Howell v. Fraser, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 221.

[b] "The plaintiff swears that he has reason to believe and does verily believe, that Hale and Malatt are about to remove, etc. The language of the statute is that the plaintiff or his agent shall make an affidavit that the plaintiff is about to remove, etc." Held sufficient. Simpkins v. Malatt, 9 Ind. 543.

[c] "It is a statement of a fact which the deponent, in testifying to, verily believes to be true. A man swears to what he believes to be true; and, when he states a fact under oath, he says he verily believes it to be true. I do not think it is faulty on that account. I think this affidavit is sufficient." In re Keller, 36 Fed. 681.

[d] Where the statement was qualified by "as he is informed and verily believes," the court said: "The statute requires that the statement specifying the grounds of contest shall be verified by the affidavit of the elector; that is, literally, made out to be true by such affidavit. No statement can go beyond the belief of the party making it. That belief may arise from personal observation, from sight or from sound, from information derived from others, or as the result of a logical conclusion from other known facts." . . . "They can, at most, when united, produce but one result, conviction of the mind, or in other words, belief. When, therefore, one states his belief in the truth of a statement, the assertion is as strong as language can make it." Curry v. Baker, 31 Ind. 151, 155.

[e] The clause "verily believes to be true" is to be taken as surplusage of form, merely. Pitkins v. Boyd, 4 Greene (Iowa) 255.

8. The following qualifications to statements have been held to reduce them to mere statements of information and belief: (1) "As affiant believes, and has reason to believe." Clarke v. Nebraska Nat. Bk., 57 Neb. 314, 77 N. W. 805, 73 Am. St. Rep. 507. (2) "That he has good reason to believe and does believe the same to be true." Swart v. Kimball, 43 Mich. 443, 5 N. W. 635. (3) "That this affiant has good reason to believe and does believe." People v. Heffron, 53 Mich. 527, 19 N. W. 170. (4) "To the best of his knowledge and belief." Morgan v. Eureka Co. Comrs., 9 Nev. 360. (5) "On his best knowledge, information, and belief." Ex parte Lane, 6 Fed. 34. (6) "And that the facts therein contained are true, as he verily believes." State ex rel. Otto v. County Comrs., 49 Neb. 51, 68 N. W. 336. (7) "Are true as affiant 'verily believes.'" State ex rel. Roberts v. Mayor, 4 Neb. 260. (8) "As affiant believes." Thompson v. Higginbotham, 18 Kan. 42.

[a] "The language used in the affidavit must be such as not to leave it doubtful whether the oath is positive or not. The requisite of positiveness forbids all ambiguity. What is ambiguous is not positive. An affidavit by the creditor's attorney, that 'to the best of his knowledge and belief' the indebtedness exists, and that the debtor resides out of this state, is ambiguous, for the phrase, 'to the best of his knowledge and belief,' may qualify both propositions. On an indictment for perjury, the affiant would be protected as to either proposition by the qualifying words." Neal v. Gordon, 60 Ga. 112.

be presumed such statements were made of his personal knowledge,¹⁰ unless the facts are such that they could not have been within the personal knowledge of the affiant.¹¹ If the facts are such that the affiant is not presumed to know them, although the allegations are positive, it should be alleged how and in what manner the knowledge came to him.¹²

2. Where Made on Information.—Where an affidavit on information and belief is permitted, the affidavit should set out the sources of information or grounds of belief,¹³ so that the court can see that they are relevant and competent to establish the principal fact.¹⁴

3. Sufficiency of Source.—It is sufficient if the facts are derived from public records,¹⁵ or from books of account,¹⁶ or over a telephone.¹⁷

4. Manner of Alleging Sources.—The facts constituting the sources of information must be set forth in detail and not conclusions from facts.¹⁸ If the information be derived from documents, the documents

[b] Personal Knowledge of Facts Required.—"The principle deducible from these cases is that an affidavit which is used as the basis of a writ which will deprive a person of his liberty, must not only set forth the facts and circumstances in detail, and not conclusions or inferences from facts, but they must be facts within the personal knowledge of the deponent." Sheridan v. Briggs, 53 Mich. 569, 19 N. W. 189, quoted with approval in Conrad v. Van Buren Circ. Judge, 144 Mich. 492, 496, 108 N. W. 347.

[a] "The Code of Civil Procedure provides that 'a motion to set aside a final judgment for irregularity shall not be heard after the expiration of one year since the filing of the judgment roll.' To avoid the effect of this statute, a clear case, based upon sufficient evidence of fraud, must be made out. The moving affidavit is made by the plaintiff and solely upon information and belief, without stating the sources of the information or the ground of the relief, and is therefore insufficient. Eicher v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 114 App. Div. 247, 99 N. Y. Supp. 870.

[b] The reason that the sources of information should be stated is found in the very nature of an affidavit whose office is to present evidence to the court from which it may draw conclusions as to facts, thus differing from pleadings generally. Thompson v. Best, 51 Hun 441, 4 N. Y. Supp. 229. See also Knepler v. Red River Val. Nat. Bank, 8 N. D. 406, 79 N. W. 869.

[c] In an affidavit for arrest, where the averments of facts were as upon personal knowledge, the affidavit was held insufficient for the reason that "no facts are stated from which the court can see, or even infer, that the maker of the affidavit has any personal knowledge on the subject." Price v. Levy, 93 App. Div. 274, 87 N. Y. Supp. 740.

[d] In an affidavit for attachment, although the allegations are positive in form, enough circumstances must be stated to enable the court to see that the allegations are not made on information and belief. Hoormann v. Climax Cycle Co., 9 App. Div. 579, 41 N. Y. Supp. 710.

16. Affidavit of administratrix "that the above account is truly extracted from the books of the deceased, and that she believes the same to be a just and true account, and that since the death of the intestate she has received no part thereof," held sufficient to hold to bail. McLaughlin v. Johns, 1 Cranch C. C. 372, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,871; Lowe v. Mayson, 3 McCord (S. C.) 313.

D. BY AGENT OR ATTORNEY.—Generally an affidavit by an agent or attorney must be made positively.²³ It should be as positive as that of his principal or client.²⁴

The general rules, hereinbefore discussed, as to affidavits on information and belief ordinarily apply to affidavits by an agent or attorney.²⁵

E. SPECIFIC CASES.—1. Arrest.—Affidavits for arrest must ordinarily be positive and not on information and belief,²⁶ in absence of express statutory authority,²⁷ and will be bad if, though positive in form, it appears to be on information.²⁸

2. Attachment.—For attachment the affidavit should state positively the non-residence, indebtedness or other essential for the issuance of the writ where these facts are susceptible of positive knowledge.²⁹

It need not be a positive and direct averment upon oath that the goods are stolen, in order to justify the magistrate in granting his warrant. There are many cases in which a cautious man might not choose to swear that his property is stolen, nevertheless, he might have great reason to suspect a particular party, and the magistrate would be well warranted in granting his search warrant." *Else v. It is said that this form of averment is unauthorized, when the facts are presumptively within the personal knowledge of the whole world. The plaintiff sues as assignee, and these facts are not presumptively within his knowledge, or that of the whole world. Hence, the pleading is good as it is." Fairbanks v. Isham, 16 Wis. 118.

[b] "The plaintiff has very properly stated the making of the two notes on his 'information and belief.' They being payable to other persons and assigned to him, he could properly only state the making of them on his 'information and belief.' There is no objection to stating the sale of the goods on 'information and belief,' as they may have been sold by his clerk or agent, and not by himself personally." St. John v. Beers, 24 How. Pr. Verifications by persons not parties are expressly provided for under certain circumstances; and in such cases allegations upon information and belief are not improper and may be a necessity."

edge of the facts averred,⁵⁰ or if they are matters of public record,⁵¹ the allegation must be positive in form.

3. Form of Allegation.—a. Of the Information and Belief.—Both the information and belief of the plaintiff should be stated,⁵² but it has been held that an omission to aver that the plaintiff is informed of the facts does not vitiate the allegation.⁵³

Sources of Information or Belief.—Since the averment of the belief of the plaintiff is not traversable, a statement of the grounds therefor is ordinarily immaterial.⁵⁴ But it has been held that where averments are made on information and belief the sources of information must be set out.⁵⁵

b. Of the Facts.—In addition to the averment as to information and belief there must be a direct averment of the fact or facts,⁵⁶ since mere allegations of information and belief are generally held bad as not stating the existence of the fact believed and not raising a material issue. In some jurisdictions, however, under the liberal rules of plead-

[a] "The only allegation he made on the subject was that he believed it to be true," that defendant was a principal debtor. "Now this allegation was wholly immaterial. The defendant was not bound to controvert it; for although he might have been able to deny that he was a principal in the note, yet he could not have denied, nor was he required to deny, that the plaintiff believed that was the fact. The rules of pleading require that the facts relied upon be directly and positively alleged, and not stated by way of argument, inference, or belief." Patterson v. Caldwell, 1 Mete. (Ky.) 489, 491.

[b] "The pleader then alleges that he is informed and believes the facts therein recited, and as these recited facts are essential to plaintiff's cause of action, the defect is fatal unless this form of averment is permissible under the Code. . . . The issue tendered here is not as to the existence of these facts essential to plaintiff's cause of action, but as to the plaintiff's information and belief of their existence as facts. . . . The facts would have to be charged as facts, on information and belief, so that an issue could be joined on them." Nichols & Shepard Co. v. Hubert, 150 Mo. 620, 625, 51 S. W. 1031; State Bank v. Oliver, 1 Disn. (Ohio) 159, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 548.

[c] "To state that the plaintiff is informed or believes that a particular fact exists would be bad pleading, because it would simply be an allegation of information or belief, as to the fact, and not an averment of the existence

[b] The plaintiff, describing her injury, alleged "her spine" (was) "so badly injured as to render her almost entirely helpless, and, she believes, will incapacitate her from performing any normal labor for her whole life." The court said: "We think it would be carrying technicalities to a great length to hold that the allegation in the petition is insufficient upon which to base a claim for permanent injury, because it is averred that, as the plaintiff 'believes,' she will be incapacitated from performing manual labor for her life. The word 'believe,' is evidently used by the pleader in the sense of a conviction of the truth of what follows." McFarland v. City of Muscatine, 98 Iowa 199, 67 N. W. 233.

As to facts not within the defendant's knowledge he may answer on information and belief.⁶² But he must answer statements, charges and interrogations of the bill to the extent of his information as well as of his knowledge,⁶³ and exceptions may be taken to an answer that appears evasive on the matter of information.⁶⁴ He must proceed to secure information if within his reach.⁶⁵

[a] "Nothing is more clear in principle, than the rule, that in the case of an interrogatory, pertinent to a charge in the bill requiring the defendant to answer it 'as to his knowledge, remembrance, information and belief' (which is the usual formulary), it is not sufficient for the defendant to answer as to his knowledge, but he must answer also, as to his information and belief." *Brooks v. The defendant must also express his belief, based on his knowledge and information, as to the truth of the allegations.⁶⁶ If he has no knowledge or information, distinct from the bill, of the allegations he is required to answer, he may answer to that effect,⁶⁷ and he will be excused from expressing his belief.⁶⁸

b. Information and Belief Not Evidence.—An answer on information and belief,⁶⁹ or that defendant has no knowledge, information, remembrance or belief⁷⁰ has not the effect of evidence, as in case of a positive statement on knowledge of the defendant which required the evidence of two witnesses, or one and the equivalent of a second, to overcome it. [a] "Under the Code of Procedure, the denial, whether founded upon personal knowledge, or upon information and belief, was in form the same—that is, absolute. By the verification, the defendant was permitted, in a great measure, to impress upon the pleading the operation of his mind. . . . This was deemed unsatisfactory and consequently the Code of Civil Procedure provided for a distinct disclosure upon the face of the pleading, of the character of the denial. . . . The exception (in the verification) is no longer matter stated on information and belief, but matter stated to be alleged on information and belief. Of course that permits a party to so allege." Brotherton v. Downey, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 436. Compare Pratt Mfg. Co. v. Jordan Iron & C. Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 544.

[b] §500 of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc., declared that the answer must contain "a general or specific denial of each material allegation of the complaint controverted by the defendant, or any knowledge or information thereof sufficient to form a belief." [a] The form prescribed by the statute is that the defendant denies that he has any knowledge or information as to each or any of the allegations contained in the subdivisions of the complaint numbered (giving the numbers) sufficient to form a belief thereof.

Galbraith v. Daily, 37 Misc. 156, 74 N. Y. Supp. 837; Johnston v. Simpson, Crawford Co., 115 N. Y. Supp. 141.

[b] But a denial "that they have any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the allegations contained in the complaint," is a sufficient denial of all the allegations of the complaint which necessarily includes each material allegation. Hinds, Noble & Eldredge v. Bonner, 63 Misc. 258, 116 N. Y. Supp. 663.

[c] But an allegation that defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of any of the allegations contained in certain numbered paragraphs of the complaint is insufficient. Neb. Wilson v. Neu, 1 Neb. (Unof.) 42, 95 N. W. 502. N. Y.—New York v. Halsey, 132 App. Div. 192, 116 N. Y. Supp. 947; White v. Gibson, 61 Misc. 436, 113 N. Y. Supp. 983. N. C.—*Woodcock v. [d] But see Milwaukee Gold Ext. Co. v. Gordon, 37 Mont. 209, 95 Pac. 995 (holding there is no appreciable difference in the expressions (1) I say I have not sufficient knowledge (etc.), and (2) I deny that I have any knowledge or information, etc.); Smith v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 50 Misc. 550, 140 N. Y. Supp. 327.

[f] Illustrations of Sufficient and Insufficient Denials.—An answer that defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient "to enable it" to form a belief was held sufficient in Wilson v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 15 S. D. 322, 89 N. W. 649.

This form of denial is not permissible where the facts are presumptively within the knowledge of the pleader,⁸⁴ or where the facts are no personal knowledge and denies, etc., is sufficient. Smith v. Allen, 63 Neb. 74, 88 N. W. 155. See also English v. Grant, 102 Ga. 35, 29 S. E. 157 (a denial in the form that defendant alleges he does not know or that he does not of his own knowledge know is insufficient); Scully v. Wolf, 56 Misc. 468, 107 N. Y. Supp. 181, addition of words "or falsity" does not vitiate the denial on information and belief of the truth of the allegations of the complaint.

[h] Omission of Word "Knowledge."—A denial of "any information sufficient to form a belief" omitting the word "knowledge" is insufficient. Ark. Haggart v. Ranney, 73 Ark. 344, 84 S. W. 703. N. Y.—Steinback v. Diepenbrock, 52 App. Div. 437, 65 N. Y. Supp. 118; Genninger v. Wahlig Co., 116 N. Y. Supp. 578. N. D.—Massachusetts Loan & T. Co. v. Twitchell, 7 N. D. 440, 75 N. W. 786.

[j] In the municipal courts of New York city, statute permits a denial of any information and belief. Gilmour v. Kenny, 84 N. Y. Supp. 502. But see Pennsylvania & D. Oil Co. v. Spitelnik, 27 Misc. 557, 58 N. Y. Supp. 311 (but denials on information and belief are permitted); Sanchez & Haya Co. v. Hirsch, 27 Misc. 202, 57 N. Y. Supp. 795; Boston Woven Hose & R. Co. v. Jackson, 25 Misc. 781, 55 N. Y. Supp. 573. And see also Alexander v. Albany, 55 App. Div. 238, 66 N. Y. Supp. 1084.

[k] A denial of any knowledge or information, etc., is not a denial that defendant has any knowledge or information and is no denial. Burkert v. Bennett, 35 Misc. 318, 71 N. Y. Supp. 144.

I. PROCEEDINGS TO DETERMINE HEIRSHIP. — A. GENERAL STATEMENT. — Provision is sometimes made for proof of heirship or of a right to a distributive share of the estate in the proceedings for final settlement and distribution of the estate,¹ and the probate court is frequently given jurisdiction to determine such questions at that time.²

Some statutes provide for the determination of heirship and the persons entitled to share in the distribution of the estate of a deceased person, pending administration and before final settlement, and distribution by an independent proceeding instituted in the probate court for that purpose,³ and it has been held that the probate court has jurisdiction of such a proceeding though there is no statute providing specifically therefor.⁴

1. See Burns' Ann. St. (Ind.), 1908, §2929, and the statutes of the states generally.

[a] In Connecticut the ascertainment of heirs and distributees is a mere incident of the order of distribution, and is not, in itself and independent of distribution, a judicial act. Hence an application to the probate court to ascertain who are the heirs and distributees of the estate is improper. If there is any estate to distribute application should be made for an order of distribution. Maek's Appeal, 71 Conn. 122, 41 Atl. 242.

Provision is also sometimes made for a determination of the heirship of any deceased person, where there has been no administration,⁵ or in any case where one having title to land in the state dies,⁶ or dies intestate, or without having devised his real property to specific persons,⁷ or where land is granted or conveyed to the heirs, minor heirs, or legal representatives of a deceased person without indicating or showing who they are or were,⁸ or where government land is patented to the heirs of a deceased entryman,⁹ or for a proceeding to determine the descent of real property belonging to a decedent where there has been no administration,¹⁰ or no administration for a certain length of time after the death of the intestate,¹¹ or where there has been an administration, but the descent of the realty has not been therein determined.¹² Statutes providing for such remedies have been held to apply to cases where the decedent died before their passage.¹³

In at least one state provision is made for a proceeding in equity to determine who are the heirs at law of one dying wholly or partially intestate and leaving real or personal property in the state.¹⁴

Remedy Not Exclusive.—Generally the special proceeding for determining heirship or the right to share in the distribution of the estate is not exclusive,¹⁵ and does not prevent the determination of such questions on distribution in the administration proceedings, when the special proceeding has not been resorted to.¹⁶ Nor is resort to such a proceeding a condition precedent to an order of distribution.¹⁷ Even the pendency of such special proceeding, where there has been no determination of the questions involved, will not prevent the court from hearing an application for distribution of the estate and determining all questions of heirship thereon.¹⁸ takes in form of the nature of one.²¹ It is sometimes regarded as a probate proceeding,²² and as a step in the distribution of the estate,²³ and as subsidiary to the proceeding for distribution.²⁴

When authorized pending administration, the purpose of the proceeding is to provide an additional, and a more adequate and complete method of determining heirship and the rights of all persons claiming to be heirs or entitled to any interest in the estate,²⁵ and to enable such persons to have their rights determined before distribution, so that final distribution may be made directly to the persons respectively entitled thereto.²⁶

A Statutory Proceeding. — Such proceedings are purely statutory,²⁷ and can be entertained only when authorized by the statute, and subject to the terms and conditions thereby imposed.²⁸

C. PROCEDURE. — 1. Time for Instituting Proceedings. — The time within which proceedings to determine heirship may be instituted is fixed by the statute, and varies in the different jurisdictions.²⁹

2. Jurisdiction and Venue.—Usually jurisdiction of proceedings to determine heirship is given to the court having jurisdiction of probate proceedings.³⁰ Whether its jurisdiction is exclusive depends upon the statutes of the various states.³¹ If administration is in progress, the proceeding must generally be brought in the court where the administration proceedings are pending,³² or, if brought after administration, in the court where the administration was had.³³

The county in which proceedings to determine heirship must be brought depends on the terms of the statute.³⁴ It is sometimes required to be brought in the probate court of the county where the land is situated,³⁵ especially where there has been no administration.³⁶

3. Parties.—Who may institute such a proceeding depends entirely on the statutes, which generally provide that the proceedings may be instituted by any one claiming as or through an heir or who is otherwise interested in the estate or entitled to have it distributed.³⁷

In states where a complaint is required in addition to the petition,³⁸ it is sometimes provided that the party filing the original petition on which the proceeding is based, if he files a complaint, and if not, the party first filing such complaint, is to be treated as the plaintiff in all subsequent proceedings, and that all other parties who appear shall be treated as defendants.³⁹ This designation is merely for convenience, however,⁴⁰ and does not fix the status of the parties in the proceeding.⁴¹

Each party is an independent actor,⁴² and is a plaintiff as against all other parties whose claims are adverse.⁴³ Each has a separate and independent right to conduct his own case according to his own judgment,⁴⁴ including the right to cross-examine the witnesses of a hostile party.⁴⁵

Which parties are hostile to each other is to be determined from the averments of the pleadings, regardless of whether such parties are called plaintiffs or defendants.⁴⁶ All parties who might be entitled to share in the estate are necessary parties.⁴⁷

4. Petition.—The proceeding is generally instituted by filing a petition⁴⁸ praying for a judicial determination of the heirs of the

The petition must allege the facts upon which the jurisdiction of the court depends.⁵² The particular facts which must be averred are frequently specified in the statute, and depend somewhat on the nature of the proceeding and the particular questions involved. It is variously required to set forth the name of the deceased,⁵³ the time and place of his death,⁵⁴ his last place of residence,⁵⁵ the fact that he died intestate,⁵⁶ that no will has been probated nor any administration granted in the state, or if administration was had, that real property was omitted in the administration or final decree,⁵⁷ the contents of his will, if he left one,⁵⁸ that the necessary time has elapsed since his death,⁵⁹ the relationship of the petitioner to the deceased,⁶⁰ the names and addresses of all other persons who are or claim to be heirs,⁶¹ a description of the deceased's property,⁶² the interest of the decedent,⁶³ the petitioner,⁶⁴ and each of the other heirs⁶⁵ therein, and a prayer that all the other heirs be cited to attend the probate of their rights.⁶⁶

5. Notice.—Upon the filing of the petition notice of the time and place of the hearing thereon is generally required to be given to all persons interested.⁶⁸

The form and contents of the notice is prescribed by the statute. Service and Return.—The manner in which the notice must be served, and in which proof of service must be made, is fixed by the statute, and varies in the different states.⁷⁶ In some states the court is required to enter an order or decree establishing proof of such service,⁷⁷ and it is specifically provided that the court shall acquire jurisdiction on proof of service.⁷⁸

distributees.⁹⁸ As a rule only rights claimed in privity with the estate may be considered and determined, and not rights or titles claimed adversely thereto,⁹⁹ nor may the proceeding be resorted to to determine what property belongs to the estate.¹ It has been held that equitable claims against the heirs or their assignees are not proper subjects of consideration in such a proceeding,² and that the jurisdiction of the court does not extend to the determination of the rights of one claiming under a contract with the decedent to give him his property on his death,³ or to the determination or administration of trusts other than those created by the will of the decedent and which are necessarily involved in the question of distribution.⁴

II. ADVANCEMENTS.—A. DUTY TO ACCOUNT FOR ADVANCEMENTS.—The only liability of an heir arising from the fact that he has been advanced is that of receiving a correspondingly less portion of the estate of his ancestor on distribution thereof.²⁶ His co-heirs are not entitled to a partition of land given to him as an advancement,²⁷ nor can they recover the excess from one who has received more than his share of the estate by way of advancements.²⁸ No assignment by an heir will defeat an account of advancements.²⁹

An heir has a right to have a judicial determination of the question whether money or property received by him from his ancestor shall be regarded as a gift or an advancement, and is not barred from participation in the estate by seeking such a determination before bringing the same into hotchpot.³⁰

A refusal to bring advancements into hotchpot on the first distribution of the property of a decedent does not always deprive an heir of a right to share in a subsequent distribution of other property.³¹ It has been held that if advancements are not collated in the distribution of the proceeds of the sale of land in a partition suit the heir has a right to have them collated before the distribution of the other parties are related to the deceased or entitled to share in the estate is not entitled to appeal, since he is not aggrieved. Blythe v. Ayres, 102 Cal. 254, 36 Pac. 522.

[b] Illinois.—An appeal from an order directing payment to one previously declared an heir does not bring up the order declaring such heirship. Ford v. Ford, 117 Ill. App. 502.

23. In Michigan no appeal lies from the finding and adjudication of the court. "The legislature evidently intended that the proceeding under this statute should be summary," and hence provided no appeal. Lorimer v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 116 Mich. 682, 75 N. W. 133.

24. If taken after the expiration of the sixty days, the supreme court has no jurisdiction, and the appeal will be dismissed. Smith v. Westerveld, 88 Cal. 374, 26 Pac. 206; In re Grider, 81 Cal. 571, 22 Pac. 908.

[a] Where the matter of advancements is not inquired into in a suit to partition lands, and land is decreed to an heir without reserving any lien to secure the repayment of advances made to him, and no claim is made against him in such suit on account of such advances, the excess of advances received by him cannot be considered as a debt due by him to the other distributees or the representative. Eckler v. Galbraith & Lail, 12 Bush (Ky.) 71.

31. Such refusal does not deprive a child of the right to share in a subsequent distribution of slaves assigned to the widow as dower. In such case it may be shown that such rents in such suit.³² So, too, where the advancement to an heir exceeds his share on the first distribution, the balance may be charged against him on a subsequent distribution of other property.³³ Heirs may waive their right to have advancements charged against the share of a co-heir.³⁴

Rights of Creditors of Heirs. — In a suit by a creditor of an heir to subject an alleged undivided interest of the latter in the lands of his ancestor to the payment of the plaintiff's debt, it is a good defense that the heir received advancements in excess of the value of his share of the estate.³⁵

A creditor of the heir who levies upon or attaches his interest in the estate acquires a lien only on such an interest as he possesses after the other heirs have been equalized.³⁶ If the heir has received advancements equal to his full share in the estate his creditor acquires nothing by levying on his interest.³⁷

B. METHODS OF BRINGING ADVANCEMENTS INTO HOTCHPOT. — 1. In General. — The whole matter of advancements, and the accounting for them on the final distribution, is statutory.³⁸

It has been held that where one receives money and property from his wife's father for her benefit, on the death of the father the wife may compel her husband to account for and pay the same to her, or she may compel her father's administrator to pay her her full share of the estate without regard to such advancements.³⁹ In the latter case the administrator is subrogated to the wife's rights against her husband, and by a suit in equity, may collect the amount of such advancements from him.⁴⁰

An heir may maintain a suit against the administrator on the ground that, in making distribution, he has failed to require heirs

4. Suits in Equity. — A court of equity will take cognizance of a suit by heirs against another heir to have the shares of such heir subjected to the payment of advancements and have the lien of a creditor acquired by attachment declared subordinate to their equity,⁵¹ or of a suit by an heir who has received advancements for the purpose of bringing advancements into hotchpot.⁵² In at least one state the administrator may, by bill in equity, require the heirs to interplead for the purpose of procuring a determination of the advancements for which they shall be required to account.⁵³ If he does so, he is not entitled to take any further part in the proceedings or to be heard in argument, where he seeks no further relief.⁵⁴

Equity will interpose to restrain the enforcement of a claim by an heir to any further portion of the estate where he has received by way of advancement property equal to, or in excess of, the share to which he would otherwise have been entitled.⁵⁵ On the other hand, it has been held that equity will not enjoin heirs from claiming any part of the estate for failure to bring advancements into hotchpot, since a decree excluding them from the division of the estate would be a perpetual bar.⁵⁶ Equity will set aside a contract of family settle-to take them as portions of their shares.⁶⁰ In some states if questions as to advancements arise in partition the proceedings may be suspended until such questions are decided in the probate court in which the estate of the deceased is settled,⁶¹ particularly where the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to determine such questions.⁶²

6. Advancements as a Defense to Actions. — While no question as to advancements can be determined in an action of ejectment brought by one heir against another,⁶³ unless a statute precludes an heir receiving an advancement equal to or superior to the amount such heir would ordinarily be entitled to receive from taking any portion thereof,⁶⁴ such defense may be set up in a suit for partition if the heir has received his share of the estate by way of advancement,⁶⁵ or it may be set up in an action at law by a distributee to recover a distributive share of the estate.⁶⁶

In some states the fact that the money received upon a note was paid and received as an advancement may be set up as a defense in an action thereon by the administrator of the payee,⁶⁷ or even where that fact has not been set up as a defense in the action at law, equity will enjoin the enforcement of a judgment at law upon such a note.⁶⁸

Persons to whom advancements are alleged to have been made in fraud of creditors are proper parties defendant to a suit by creditors for the settlement of the estate,⁷⁵ as are distributees receiving advancements proper parties to suits by an heir against an administrator for failure to require advancements to be brought into hotchpot.⁷⁶ The widow is not a necessary party, however, to proceedings to determine whether a conveyance of land to a child was or was not an advancement.⁷⁷

3. Pleading.—An heir seeking to avoid a release of liability to account for advances executed by him, must plead his election to avoid it and the grounds upon which such election is based.⁷⁸

Under a statute precluding a child receiving an advancement equal to or in excess of the amount it would ordinarily take from taking any portion of the estate, an answer setting up an advancement must show that such advancement was equal to or superior to the interest such child would ordinarily take.⁷⁹

An admission in an answer of the receipt of money and property from the ancestor, is not so neutralized by further allegations that the money was received for services rendered and the property was purchased, as to render such admission inoperative to support the presumption of an advancement until proof to the contrary is offered.⁸⁰

In a suit by heirs against the administrator and other heirs to require advancements alleged to have been made to the latter to be accounted for, it is not necessary for the bill to aver notice to the administrator that the complainant would call the other distributees into hotchpot,⁸¹ nor is it necessary to allege that the complainants have not been advanced,⁸² but if the bill shows that they have been, then they must allege readiness to bring such advancements into hotchpot.⁸³

In a suit by a husband to enforce a resulting trust in his favor in lands purchased by him in the name of his wife, the bill must allege facts sufficient to overcome the presumption that the purchase was an advancement to her.⁸⁴

4. Trial.—In partition questions as to advancements to the different tenants in common are separate issues to be tried independently of the general questions involved.⁸⁵ Such issues are not for the recovery of the money or property advanced.⁸⁶

Jury Trial.—The fact and amount of an advancement may be tried by a jury under statutes providing for jury trials in the settlement of estates upon request of either party,⁸⁷ or in special proceedings for determining controversies as to advancements.⁸⁸ A party is not entitled to a jury trial, however, as a matter of right in the determination and adjustment of advancements in a partition suit unless authorized by a statute.⁸⁹

Instructions relating to the subject of advancements are properly refused where there is no evidence in the case tending to establish that an advancement has been made.⁹⁰

Questions of Law and Fact.—Where there is a jury trial, it is for the jury to determine what sums have been advanced,⁹¹ and to whom,⁹² and whether a note executed by a child in favor of a parent evidenced an advancement or a loan⁹³ or a gift.⁹⁴ Whether advancements shall be accounted for is a question of law.⁹⁵

Verdict.—A verdict is sufficient if upon reasonable intendment it can be seen that it covers the issues, and in such case defects of form will be disregarded.⁹⁶ In a suit to determine and settle the amount of the advancements made to each of the distributees, the verdict should specify the amounts advanced to each, if any.⁹⁷

alty and to require advancements to be brought into hotchpot, as to whether a certain transaction was an absolute gift or an advancement, is properly decided by the court without reference to a commissioner for inquiry and accounting.⁹⁸ Findings of a referee on the issue as to whether money or property received is to be deemed an advancement are conclusive when not excepted to.⁹⁹

Distribution by Commissioners.—Generally where the practice is to appoint commissioners to make distribution or partition, the court or a jury determines the amount to be charged against the various parties, and the commissioners make the distribution, deducting from the shares of each of the parties the amounts advanced to them respectively.¹ The warrant to the commissioners is sometimes required to specify the advancements found by the court to have been made.²

5. Judgment or Decree.—In some states the decree assigning and distributing the estate is required to specify the advancements found to have been made.³

An adjudication of the question of advancements to an heir dates back, by relation, to the death of the ancestor, at which time the heir's interest, if any, becomes vested.⁴ Such an adjudication and finding that an heir has received advancements equal in value to his share of the estate does not divest him of any interest in the estate, but merely determines that he had no interest in it at the death of his ancestor because he had already received it.⁵

Conclusiveness.—As in other cases, an adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction on questions regarding advancements is conclusive on all parties to the proceeding,⁶ and those claiming under Statutes in some states specifically provide that the final decree of the probate court, or of the appellate court on appeal, shall be binding on all persons interested in the estate.¹¹ In the absence of fraud,¹² an order of distribution¹³ or a decree in a partition suit¹⁴ is conclusive as to advancements where the questions in relation thereto might have been litigated in the proceeding leading up to such order or decree, but were not. In such case equity will not impress a lien for advancements on the lands apportioned to the advanced heirs in the partition suit.¹⁵

7. Appeal.—Under some statutes an appeal will lie from the decision of the probate court in statutory proceedings to determine whether an advancement was made and the amount thereof.²⁰ As in other cases, if a review is sought on the facts, all the evidence must be set out in the record.²¹ Findings of the court as to the amount of advancements based on conflicting evidence will not be disturbed on appeal.²²

III. RETENTION OR SET-OFF OF DEBTS AND LIABILITIES OF BENEFICIARY TO ESTATE.—A. NATURE OF RIGHT.—The right of the representative to deduct any indebtedness of a legatee or distributee to the decedent or to the estate from his legacy or distributive share, though often called a right of set-off, has been said to be rather an equitable right of retainer,²³ or a right to pay out of the fund in hand.²⁴ Some courts regard it as neither a right of set-off nor of retainer, but as being merely a question of the right of the legatee or distributee to receive payment, having regard to the amount of his indebtedness to the estate.²⁵

Real estate is not assets in the hands of a personal representative, and, unless otherwise charged by the terms of a will, is subject only to the contingency of a sale of so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the debts of the estate in case there is not sufficient personal estate for that purpose." Marvin v. Bowlby, 142 Mich. 245, 255, 105 N. W. 751, 113 Am. St. Rep. 574, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 189.

deceased child of an intestate,⁵⁹ or descends to him as heir of a devisee of the testator,⁶⁰ or where a legacy goes under the statute to the issue of a legatee who dies before the testator,⁶¹ debts due by the parent cannot be deducted.

In Louisiana collateral relatives claiming by representation are not bound to collate debts owed by their ancestor to the deceased, or gifts made by the deceased to him.⁶²

D. CHARACTER OF INDEBTEDNESS. — 1. General Principles. — To warrant retention, the debt must be a valid, subsisting one,⁶³ and be due and payable.⁶⁴ The representative cannot set off a fraudulent indebtedness where the rights of third persons are concerned.⁶⁵

Money borrowed by a married woman from the decedent may be set off against her distributive share, though, by reason of her coverture, she was incapacitated from borrowing.⁶⁶ Generally debts due by a husband cannot be set off against the distributive share of his wife.⁶⁷ Nor can debts due an administrator from a guardian in the latter's personal capacity be set off against the share of the ward.⁶⁸ The indebtedness of a legatee draws interest until such legacy becomes due and payable.⁶⁹

Examples. — Among the classes of debts which may be set off or retained are debts due from a legatee as surviving partner of a firm,⁷⁰ the amount due the estate from the surviving wife,⁷¹ debts for which the decedent was surety, though they were paid by the representative after the decedent's death,⁷² debts assumed by the [d] Obligation of Surety.—In White v. Moore, 23 S. C. 456, it was doubted whether this would be true as to the obligation of a surety, the court saying that they were not aware that it had ever been held that there was a moral obligation on the part of the

held to be true where the debt is presumed paid by the lapse of time.⁸⁴

Other courts do not permit the deduction or set off of debts so barred,⁸⁵ except in the case of legacies, where the will shows that such was the testator's intention.⁸⁶

Persons claiming under a legatee or distributee may set up the bar of limitations where the legatee or distributee could do so.⁸⁷

5. Effect of Discharge in Bankruptcy.—The right of retention exists though the legatee or distributee has been discharged in bankruptcy.⁸⁸

6. Exemptions.—Statutory exemptions cannot be claimed as against the right of retainer.⁸⁹

E. MANNER OF ENFORCING RIGHT.—PROCEEDINGS IN PROBATE COURT.—Generally the deduction may be made by the probate court on distribution,⁹⁰ though the contrary is true in some states.⁹¹

In Illinois the legatee must claim credit for the indebtedness at the time when he renders his final account, and, if he fails to do so, he cannot set it off in a subsequent action on his bond to recover the amount adjudged to be due the legatee or distributee by the decree of distribution.⁹³

Equity has jurisdiction to subject the interest of the heir in the lands of the ancestor to the payment of the heir's debt to the estate as against third persons claiming as judgment debtors of the heirs.⁹⁴ The existence of a debt from the heir to the estate must be alleged.⁹⁵

A judgment obtained by the ancestor in his lifetime against the heir cannot be collaterally attacked by the heir in a proceeding to subject his share of the estate to the payment of the same,⁹⁶ except in case of fraud or collusion by third persons claiming under the heir.⁹⁷

Partition.—Generally an heir or devisee cannot be required to account for debts owing by him to the estate in a suit to partition realty among heirs or devisees,⁹⁸ though there is authority to the contrary.⁹⁹

Attachment.—In Maine the debt of an heir or distributee of a solvent intestate estate to the decedent may be enforced by suit and attachment of his share.¹

1. The statutory lien on the share of one entitled to a share of a solvent intestate estate, for a debt owed by him to the intestate, may be enforced by suit and attachment of the share within two years after administration is granted, and by levy within thirty days after judgment. Me. Rev. St., 1903, ch. 77, §7; Weston v. Colby, 107 Me. 104, 77 Atl. 637.

[a] The suit must be commenced within two years after administration granted. Leonard v. Motley, 75 Me. 418; Fenderson v. Belcher, 68 Me. 59.

[b] Where the lien is sought to be enforced by suit and attachment, neither the writ nor the declaration need designate any part of the share as that part on which the lien is claimed. It is sufficient if it appears in the writ and declaration that the suit and attachment is to enforce the lien given by this section. Weston Co. v. Colby, 107 Me. 104, 77 Atl. 637.

[c] The suit is not based upon the statute, but upon the indebtedness of the heir to the intestate. Hence the rule that in actions based on a statute all the facts stated in the statute as constituting the right of action should be stated in the declaration does not apply. Weston Co. v. Colby, 107 Me. 104, 77 Atl. 637.

debt of the distributee is greater than his distributive share, the representative may recover the balance in an action brought for that purpose,³ but under some statutes no decree can be made by the probate court for the excess.⁴

Where this latter rule obtains a decree of the probate court ascertaining the amount owing by a distributee to the estate is not binding as to the excess in a subsequent suit by the representative to recover such excess.⁵

G. RIGHT OF LEGATEE OR DISTRIBUTEE TO CLAIM SET-OFF.—Generally a legatee or distributee,⁶ or his surety,⁷ or a purchaser from him,⁸ or other person claiming under him,⁹ may set off his legacy or distributive share against a debt owing by him to the estate, unless some special reason exists for the collection of such judgment by the representative.¹⁰

It has been held, however, that the representative will not be enjoined from collecting the debt by an action at law, where it does not appear that he is insolvent or that his bond is insufficient;¹¹ that a set-off will not be allowed where it would necessitate a complete settlement of the representative's accounts¹² in a county other than

But when it is apparent that no injury resulted in stating the amount of the indebtedness owing by the distributee in the decree and none could possibly result, the decree will not be disturbed should it appear that the amount of the indebtedness as stated in the decree is too large. Whenever the amount of his indebtedness is confessedly in excess of his distributive share, there is no error of which he can be heard to complain." Caldwell v. Caldwell, 121 Ala. 598, 25 So. 825.

IV. RIGHTS OF ACTION AS BETWEEN BENEFICIARY AND ESTATE.—A. ACTIONS IN REGARD TO REAL PROPERTY.—Except where the rule has been changed by statute,¹⁴ the personal representative of the deceased cannot bring actions relating to the real property of the deceased.¹⁵ Thus the personal representative cannot maintain an action of forcible detainer to recover real property leased by the decedent,¹⁶ except where the statute permits him to do so,¹⁷ and even in the latter case the heir is not necessarily deprived of his right to sue.¹⁸

There is a conflict of authority as to the effect in this regard of a statute giving the representative the right to the possession of the realty.¹⁹

Even where the representative has a right to the possession of the realty and to the rents and profits accruing after the death of the decedent, it is sometimes held that the heir is not deprived of his rights of action in relation thereto unless the representative takes possession, or asserts his right thereto and follows it up by proceedings to obtain such possession.²⁰

[a] Trespass de bonis asportatis for taking and carrying away trees during decedent's lifetime they being personalty after they are severed from the freehold. Hill v. Penny, 17 Me. 409; Wilbur v. Gilmore, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 250.

[b] At common law actions for trespasses to personal property did not survive, but this rule was changed by the statutes of 4 Edw. III, and 3 & 4 William IV. Reed v. Peoria & O. R. Co., 18 Ill. 403; Forist v. Androscooggin R. I. Co., 52 N. H. 477.

[c] The statute of 4 Edw. III, ch. 7, "authorized an executor to maintain an action of trespass for chattels taken and carried away in the lifetime of his testator. The principle, by an equitable and somewhat liberal construction of the statute, was extended to all cases of injuries to personal property, whether actually removed or destroyed or not." Wilbur v. Gilmore, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 250. See also Noice v. Brown, 39 N. J. L. 569.

official duties,⁶⁰ or where the debtor has been guilty of fraud and misrepresentation in obtaining a settlement with the representative.⁶¹ Even in such cases, however, the representative must be joined as a party defendant.⁶²

In some states the distributees or legatees may sue where the representative assigns the claim to them,⁶³ or consents that they may sue,⁶⁴ or where it is necessary for them to sue in order to preserve the property of the estate.⁶⁵

Legatees or next of kin cannot sue, however, merely because the representative could not,⁶⁶ or because he could not win the case if the suit was brought by himself, but could, as a witness, prove it for other parties.⁶⁷

Statutes sometimes authorize the heirs under certain circumstances to collect, and sue for all demands and property of the deceased which statutes must be strictly complied with in order to enable the heirs to sue.⁶⁸

3. Where There Is No Administration.—In some states the distributees or legatees cannot sue even though there has been no administration.⁶⁹ In others they may sue where there is no representative

[a] An assignee of the heirs may enforce a judgment recovered by the administrator on a claim due the estate, after the estate has been settled and the administrator discharged. Winningsham v. Holloway, 51 Ark. 385, 11 S. W. 579.

[b] After payment of the debts and expenses, final settlement, and discharge of the administrator, a claim in favor of the estate becomes the property of the heirs, and the court cannot reappoint the administrator to bring suit thereon. Jordan v. Hunnell, 96 Iowa 334, 65 N. W. 302.

[d] Where an administrator dies pending proceeding by scire facias instituted by him to revive a judgment recovered by him on a debt due the estate, and the estate has been fully settled, and all the debts against it paid, the proceeding may be revived in discharged at the time when the action is commenced.⁷⁴

5. Pleading.—In an action by a distributee or legatee to recover personal assets, he must bring the case within the exceptions to the rule requiring such suits to be brought by the representative,⁷⁵ and must show a cause of action in himself.⁷⁶

Thus, for example, he must allege that there is no administration and that there are no debts,⁷⁷ or that the estate has been settled and the name of the heirs. Crane v. Crane, 51 Ark. 287, 11 S. W. 1.

[e] Debts Remaining Unpaid.—The heirs cannot sue though the administrator has made his final report and been discharged, where the estate was insolvent and debts in excess of the amount sought to be recovered remain unpaid. Sharp v. Citizens' Bank, 70 Neb. 758, 98 N. W. 50.

[b] Distribution Approved.—Administrator Not Discharged.—Where all the debts and expenses have been paid, and the estate has been distributed and the distribution approved by the court, the sole heirs and distributees may sue to foreclose unadministered mortgages, which, with the notes secured thereby, were delivered to them by the representative, though the representative was not discharged. *Stanley v. [b] An allegation that the decedent "died leaving no debts," is insufficient, since a liability against the estate may arise after his death. Hall v. Brownlee, 28 Ind. App. 178, 62 N. E. 457.

[c] A complaint which fails to allege that no letters of administration have been granted is fatally defective. It is not sufficient to merely allege that the deceased died intestate, leaving no widow, and that the debts due from his estate at the time of his death have been paid. Finnegan v. Finnegan, 125 Ind. 262, 25 N. E. 341.

[d] A complaint alleging that the only heirs are the widow and son, that there is no administration, and that all the debts have been paid, and alleging that defendant is indebted in a specified sum, which is in excess of the

the debts paid,⁷⁸ or that there is collusion between the representative and the defendant,⁷⁹ or that the representative refuses to act,⁸⁰ or is insolvent,⁸¹ or that the representative has assigned the claim to the plaintiff to prosecute for the benefit of the estate,⁸² or has consented to his bringing the suit,⁸³ or that it is necessary for him to sue to preserve the property of the estate.⁸⁴

C. ACTIONS ON CONTRACTS. — As a rule heirs cannot sue for breach of a contract made with their ancestor,⁸⁵ except for breach of covenants running with the land.⁸⁶

By statute in some states all actions founded on contracts may be maintained by and against the representative in all cases in which the same might have been maintained against the decedent.⁸⁷

D. COVENANTS. — The heir alone may sue for specific performance of a covenant running with the land.⁸⁸ If the breach of such a covenant occurs during decedent's lifetime the decedent's representative must bring actions for breach of it,⁸⁹ and if the breach occurs after amount of the widow's allowance, shows that the plaintiff is entitled to a judgment in some amount, and hence is good on demurrer. Merchants Nat. Bank v. McClellan, 40 Ind. App. 1, 80 N. E. 854.

[e] "An averment that the estate is not in debt, or that 'there is no existing indebtedness,' or 'that his debts and funeral expenses have been fully paid,' would not be the equivalent of an averment that the widow's statutory allowance has been paid, or the estate released from its payment." *Merchants Nat. the decedent's death, the heir must bring the action.⁹⁰ But to enable the heir to sue in the latter case he must show that the title to the land descended to him.⁹¹

Covenants in Deeds.—The heir may sue for breach of a general covenant of warranty,⁹² or a covenant of seizin⁹³ in a deed, where the breach occurs after the death of the decedent.

Where the covenant is regarded as a personal one, the representative may sue.⁹⁴ In some states the representative cannot sue for breach of a covenant of seizin,⁹⁵ or for quiet enjoyment against incumbrances,⁹⁶ in a deed, in the absence of an averment of special damage accruing to the decedent. The representative and not the heir must sue, however, where the breach occurs during the decedent's lifetime.⁹⁷

Heirs liable on a covenant of warranty in a deed executed by their ancestor may maintain a bill quia timet to prevent an unauthorized sale of the land by one to whom it was previously conveyed in trust, which would subject them to liability.⁹⁸

[b] Under a statute providing that where a decedent had bound himself in his lifetime to sell and convey real estate, and had made no sufficient provision for the performance of his contract, his executors or administrators, etc., may apply, by bill or petition, to a designated court, "and after due notice of such bill or petition . . . to the executors or administrators and heirs of the decedent or devisees of such estate, as the case may require, to appear in such court on a day certain, and answer such bill or petition," and if the case be sufficient, specific performance of the contract may be decreed, it has been decided that where the application is by the executors or administrators of a vendor, notice to his heirs or devisees is unnecessary, since by the contract for the sale of the land, the estate of the decedent is converted into personality, over which the personal representatives have absolute control. Simmons' Estate, 140 Pa. 567, 21 Atl. 402; West proceedings by his representative to compel specific performance, at least if a conveyance is necessary.¹¹

In case of the vendee's death, his representative and heirs must be made parties to such a suit by the vendor or his representative, in case of his death.¹²

An unexercised option to purchase incident to a lease of land, passes to the personal representative of the lessee, and a suit to enforce a conveyance in accordance therewith must be brought by him,¹³ though the legatee may sue where the representative assents to his possession of the legacy.¹⁴

Where the suit is based on a demand for a conveyance made upon the lessor in his lifetime, both the lessor's heirs and his personal representatives are proper parties defendant.¹⁵

Actions for Purchase Price.—As a rule the representative alone can sue to recover the purchase price of land sold by the decedent.¹⁶

Damages for Breach.—In some states the representative may maintain an action for damages for breach of an agreement to convey land to the decedent,¹⁷ especially if the breach occurred during the decedent's lifetime,¹⁸ but the heir is the proper party to sue if the breach occurs after the decedent's death.¹⁹

It has been held that a mortgage may be reformed in a suit by the representative to foreclose it.³⁴

Execution Sales.—The representative is not a proper party complainant to a suit to set aside an execution sale of land under a judgment against the deceased.³⁵ Ordinarily the heirs or devisees are necessary parties to a suit to set aside conveyances to the decedent,³⁶ except, perhaps, where the representative has been ordered by the court to take possession of the realty,³⁷ or title thereto is vested in him by the will.³⁸

Transfers of Personalty.—The representative may sue to set aside transfers of personal property made by the deceased during his lifetime on the ground of mental incapacity, or because of undue influence or fraud,³⁹ or may sue at law to recover money or property transferred under such circumstances.⁴⁰

The heir may sue to set aside transfers of personalty where there is no administration and no debts.⁴¹ Generally the representative alone may sue to set aside gifts of personalty,⁴² save under exceptional circumstances, as where the representative neglects or refuses to sue,⁴³ though there is authority to the effect that such suits must be brought by the heirs.⁴⁴

The representative may sue to set aside an assignment of a lease,⁴⁵ or an assignment of notes⁴⁶ or mortgages,⁴⁷ or of a savings account,⁴⁸ on the ground of fraud or incapacity or undue influence.

It has been held that the validity of an assignment of a mortgage may be determined in a suit by the heir.⁴⁹

Pleading. — In a suit by an heir to set aside a conveyance by his ancestor he must allege facts showing that he is such heir,⁵⁰ but it is not necessary for him to allege that the ancestor died intestate.⁵¹ In such a suit the plaintiff may allege both undue influence and mental incapacity, and, if he does so, will not be required to elect between them.⁵²

In some states causes of action to enforce distinct and different trusts respecting different tracts of land, and arising out of different acts of fraud or undue influence may be united in the same complaint.⁵³

If the heirs are not joined as defendants in a suit to set aside a conveyance to the decedent, the bill must allege facts showing that they are not necessary parties.⁵⁵

[a] Equity will not entertain a suit to recover possession of the land and the rents and profits thereof where the order of sale is void on its face, since provided they first make restitution of any part of the purchase price received by them.⁵⁷ Likewise they may sue to set aside fraudulent sales of land by the representative.⁵⁸

A representative who has sold land under an order of court may compel specific performance by the purchaser.⁵⁹

The heirs may enforce a vendor's lien for property sold by commissioners for purposes of distribution,⁶⁰ or may bring an action for damages against the purchaser for failure to comply with the terms of the sale.⁶¹

Ordinarily the representative is the proper party to sue for rescission of a sale of land made by him because of a mistake as to the quantity conveyed, or to recover for the excess,⁶² but the heirs or devisees may do so where the proceeds have been turned over to them, and the representative has failed to sue and has settled his accounts.⁶³

The heir may recover the purchase price of land sold by the representative under an order of court, after the administration has been closed.⁶⁴

Personalty. — The heir may sue to set aside fraudulent or illegal transfers of assets by the representative, where the latter will not sue,⁶⁵ or where there are no debts,⁶⁶ or to recover personal property sold by the representative to himself.⁶⁷

[a] "The rights of the executor, as such, in the lands of his testator, are entirely unlike those of the devisees of the fee. The devisees have the absolute property in the estate, subject to be defeated in a limited class of cases, by the assertion of certain specified powers with which the legislature has clothed the executor. The respective rights of the parties cover no ground in common; the rights of the one yielding to the extent that the other can be asserted. True, each may maintain an action of ejectment, to recover the possession of the lands, but their several rights over the lands when recovered are fundamentally unlike." Tarver v. Smith, 38 Ala. 135.

[b] Where the plaintiff dies pending ejectment, the action may be revived in the names of the representative and the heirs or devisees jointly, if it is proposed to have the suit, when revived, proceed for the recovery of possession and for rents or damages accruing prior and subsequent to any, and the heirs are required to be made parties defendant.⁹⁴

Pleading.⁹⁵—If the heir is authorized to sue only under certain conditions, he must allege facts which bring him within the exceptions to the general rule,⁹⁶ as that there is no administration and no necessity therefor,⁹⁷ or that the representative has consented that he may sue,⁹⁸ or that a suit by him is necessary for the preservation of the estate,⁹⁹ or that the administration has been closed.¹

So, too, if the representative is authorized to recover land only when it is required for the payment of debts or legacies, he must allege facts showing that such necessity exists.²

Statutes sometimes provide what a declaration or complaint in ejectment by the representative must set forth.³

After Death of Decedent.—At common law, the heir or devisee alone could sue for injuries to the land occurring after the death of the decedent,²⁹ and this rule still prevails in some states,³⁰ wherein the representative cannot as a rule sue.³¹

Statutes, however, sometimes expressly provide that such suits may be brought by the representative.³² And in states where by statute

[d] If the heirs or devisees have already commenced suit, the representative, when he takes possession, has a may generally sue pending administration,³⁵ or after the administration has closed,³⁶ if the representative has not effectively asserted his right. The representative cannot sue where the right of action is given to the owner of the land.³⁷ Nor can the representative, even where otherwise entitled to sue, sue for damages for trespass committed on lands situated in a state other than that in which his letters issued.³⁸

Effect of Provisions in Will.—An executor may sue for damages for trespass,³⁹ or to enjoin a threatened trespass,⁴⁰ or for damages for waste and an injunction,⁴¹ where the will gives him title to the property or a right to the possession thereof.

Wrongful Taking of Land.—The heir, rather than the representative, is the proper party to recover for the wrongful taking of the land of the decedent during his lifetime,⁴² or for the wrongful taking of easements which belong to the land and are regarded as a part of the realty.⁴³

right to be substituted. Noon v. Finnegan, 29 Minn. 418, 13 N. W. 197.

[e] If the land is vacant, the bringing of the action by the representative for the trespass amounts to, or is equivalent to, taking possession. Noon v. Finnegan, 29 Minn. 418, 13 N. W. 197, s. c., 32 Minn. 81, 19 N. W. 391.

In states where the heirs cannot sue save where it is shown to be necessary for their protection, they must allege facts showing such necessity.⁴⁶

K. PARTITION.⁴⁷—As a general rule, the representative cannot maintain an action for partition of real estate owned by the decedent at the time of his death in common with others,⁴⁸ except where the statute expressly so provides,⁴⁹ or where the will gives him the title to the property.⁵⁰

The heirs, however, may maintain partition where it does not appear that the administration will be in any way prejudiced thereby.⁵¹ So, too, the heirs or devisees of a deceased co-tenant are the proper parties defendant in partition proceedings,⁵² rather than the representative, who is not a necessary or even proper party,⁵³ unless the will invests the representative with the title and authorizes him to represent it,⁵⁴ and the same is true in proceedings to partition community not ordinarily even a proper party,⁷¹ unless the will gives him the right to collect them,⁷² or gives him the title to the property, in which case it has been held that he may sue for use and occupation.⁷³

Under statutes now in some states, however, the representative has the right to such rents, and hence may maintain an action to recover them;⁷⁴ but the heir is not thereby deprived of his right to sue until the death of the decedent. Wright v. Williams, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 501.

§§3333, 3334, the representative is entitled to the rents only if there is no heir or devisee present and competent to take possession of the realty, or where the court directs him to apply them to the payment of debts, and hence can sue for them only under such circumstances. *Durlam v. The representative may lose his right to sue by unreasonable delay in exercising it,⁷⁶ and has no right to sue after the debts have been paid and the administration closed.⁷⁷

N. ENFORCEMENT OF LIENS.—1. Mortgages.⁷⁸—Suits or proceedings to foreclose mortgages in favor of a decedent may ordinarily be brought by the representative,⁷⁹ and, as a general rule, he rather than the heirs or devisees, is the proper party to bring them,⁸⁰ the heirs not being necessary or proper parties,⁸¹ except in some states,

[b] “An injunction is a writ framed according to the circumstances of the case, commanding an act which the court regards as essential to justice, or restraining an act which it considers contrary to equity and good conscience.” Western Union Tel. Co. v. Postal Tel. Co., 217 Fed. 533, 539, 133 C. C. A. 385; Parsons v. Marye, 23 Fed. 113, 121; Rodney Com. Bank v. State, 4 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 439, 514, all quoting Jeremy Eq. Jur. 307.

[c] “A writ issuing by the order and under the seal of a court of equity; and though the ordering of it may be the exercise of a mere ministerial discretion, yet such act can only be issued by a judicial officer.” Ex parte Kennedy, 11 Ark. 598. See French v. Hay, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 250n, 22 L. ed. 857.

[d] An injunction is always personal, that is to say, some person, natural or artificial, is forbidden to do something. American, etc. Co. v. Voigt, 103 Ill. App. 659, 661.

eral states define an injunction as simply "a writ or order requiring a person to refrain from doing a particular act."²

Statutory Order as Substitute for Writ.—In some states the writ of injunction is abolished and in its stead a statutory order or writ substituted.³

B. INTERLOCUTORY OR PERMANENT INJUNCTIONS.—Injunctions are classified as preliminary and permanent injunctions, the former being the more common and sometimes called the remedial writ of injunction. A permanent injunction, or as sometimes called, the judicial writ, issues only after a decree, and is in the nature of an execution to enforce the decree.⁴ A preliminary injunction is a provisional remedy, direction of the court for the method of execution of the trust in a special case, where one of the trustees was about to act in bad faith and for his own benefit, and where a disagreement existed between the trustees as to their course of action. In re Dietz, 138 App. Div. 283, 122 N. Y. Supp. 1063.

[a] Though under this definition (1) it has been held that an injunction is not a writ commanding a person to do a certain act, and that a mandatory injunction will not issue (Brinton v. Steele, 19 Idaho 71, 112 Pac. 319; Roberts v. Kartzke, 18 Idaho 552, 111 Pac. 1); (2) in other jurisdictions it has been held not to affect the general jurisdiction of a court of equity and that a mandatory injunction will issue though an injunction is defined in the code as being a preventive remedy only. Gardner v. Stroever, 81 Cal. 148, 22 Pac. 483, 6 L. R. A. 90.

[a] In lieu of it, the court, or officer of the court delegated by statute, issues, that is, enters an order in the case restraining the defendant from committing some act alleged and shown or threatened, detrimental to the plaintiff's rights, or commanding him to do an act which he is refusing to do, and which the plaintiff is entitled to have done. Bartram v. Ohio, etc. R. Co., 141 Ky. 100, 132 S. W. 188.

[b] New York.—This statutory order "can be awarded only in the cases and in the manner specifically prescribed, and is impliedly forbidden in any others." Jackson v. Bunnell, 113 N. Y. 216, 219, 21 N. E. 79. See also Fellows v. Hermans, 13 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 1.

[c] Distinction Disregarded.—"The distinction between the writ of injunction, strictly so called, and an order in the nature of an injunction, has been disregarded in practice, and such orders, although not enforced by writ of injunction, have long since indiscriminately obtained the name of injunctions." Ellis v. Commander, 1 Strobh. Eq. (S. C.) 188, 192.

[d] The writ of injunction was abolished in Oklahoma by §5755, Comp. Laws, 1909, (1) "but the same seems to have been revived by sections 2 and 10 (sections 187 and 195, Williams' Ann. Const. Okla.), Art. 7, of the Constitution of this state." Murphy v. Fitch, 35 Okla. 364, 130 Pac. 298. (2) It is not an exclusive remedy in that state. Murphy v. Fitch, supra.

[a] "The granting or denial of a preliminary injunction does not amount to an adjudication of the ultimate rights in controversy. It merely determines that the court, balancing the respective equities of the parties, concludes that, pending a trial on the merits, the defendant should or that he should not be restrained from exercising the rights claimed by him. When the cause is finally tried, it may be found that the facts require a decision against the party prevailing on the preliminary application." Miller & Lux v. Madera Canal & Irr. 8. State v. Johnston, 78 Kan. 615, 97 Pac. 790.

[a] "There is a material distinction between a preliminary writ of injunction and an ad interim restraining order. The injunction runs, to use its language, until the defendant 'shall by which an order may be called determines to which class it belongs, however,⁹ a restraining order being effective only until an application for an injunction can be heard; a temporary injunction being effective until the trial of the action in which it is issued.¹⁰ Except as to have fully answered the bill of complaint and our said court shall make other order to the contrary.' An ad interim restraining order always commands the defendant to show cause on a certain day why an injunction should not issue, and he is therefore brought into court for the purpose of that motion only, and thus afforded an opportunity to litigate with the complainant as to the propriety of the issuance of an interlocutory injunction, without the filing of an answer and without appearing generally in the cause." Allman v. United Brotherhood of Carpenters, etc., 79 N. J. Eq. 150, 81 Atl. 116.

[b] "The restraining order is a restraint of the same nature as an injunction, but the statute not only does not designate it as an injunction but discriminates between it and an injunction. It is a restraint pending the consideration of the court as to whether the party is entitled to a preliminary injunction." San Diego W. Co. v. Pacific Coast Steamship Co., 101 Cal. 216, 218, 35 Pac. 651, quoted in Ex parte Grimes, 20 Okla. 446, 94 Pac. 668.

[c] The office of a restraining order is, in injunction cases, definite and distinct, and the granting or the withholding of the same is an entirely different thing from the granting or refusal of an interlocutory injunction. Savannah v. Grayson, 104 Ga. 105, 30 S. E. 693.

9. Kan.—State v. Johnston, 78 Kan. 615, 97 Pac. 790. Neb.—State v. Baker, 62 Neb. 840, 88 N. W. 124, determined by the character, scope and effect of writ. Tex.—Riggins v. Thompson, 96 Tex. 154, 158, 71 S. W. 14, determined from language of judge's fiat.

[a] If the effect that should be given to the court's order is doubtful, or if the language of the order will admit of such construction, then it should be considered as a temporary restraining order only. State v. Dungan, 89 Neb. 738, 132 N. W. 305.

[b] An injunctional order which does not contemplate a hearing as to whether a temporary injunction shall be allowed is of itself a temporary injunction and must be so treated. State v. Graves, 82 Neb. 282, 117 N. W. 717. See State v. Dungan, 89 Neb. 738, 132 N. W. 305.

[c] Restraint Until Proper Judge Shall Act Is Restraining Order.—An order by a probate judge made in the absence of the district judge from the county, and in an action pending or being commenced in the district court, which order is by its terms operative until the district court or the judge thereof shall act in the matter, is a restraining order, and not a temporary injunction. State v. Johnston, 78 Kan. 615, 97 Pac. 790.

[d] "Until the further order of the court," added to the order does not make it a temporary injunction, but the language is restricted and limited in its scope by the inherent character of the order itself. Ex parte Grimes, 20 Okla. 446, 94 Pac. 668. See also: U. S. Houghton v. Meyer, 208 U. S. 149, 28 Sup. Ct. 234, 52 L. ed. 432. Cal.—Curtiss v. Bachman, 110 Cal. 433, 42 Pac. 910, 52 Am. St. Rep. 111. N. Y.—Sweet v. Mowry, 71 Hun 381, 25 N. Y. Supp. 32.

[e] It is the fundamental inherent difference in the character of relief granted in a restraining order from that granted in a temporary injunction which causes the courts, notwithstanding the fact that the order contains provisions similar to "until the further orders of this court," and like clauses, to adhere to the restraining character of the order and deny it the force and vigor of an injunction. For, as is said in the case of San Diego Water Co. v. Pacific Coast Steamship Co., 101 Cal. 216, 35 Pac. 651: "The restraining order is a restraint of the same nature as an injunction, but the statute not only does not designate it as an injunction, but discriminates between it and an injunction. It is a restraint pending the consideration of the court as to whether the party is entitled to a preliminary injunction." Ex parte Grimes, 20 Okla. 446, 94 Pac. 668.

duration there is little or no distinction as to a temporary injunction and a temporary restraining order, however.¹¹ It has been held that temporary restraining orders are not permissible except where authorized by statutes.¹²

D. PROHIBITIVE OR MANDATORY INJUNCTIONS.—Injunctions are also classified as mandatory or preventive according as they command

Worth Mfg. Co. v. Bingham, 116 Fed. 785, 789, 54 C. C. A. 119; North American, etc. Co. v. Watkins, 109 Fed. 101, 106, 48 C. C. A. 254. Cal.—Neumann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31, 33, 79 Pac. 512; San Diego W. Co. v. Pacific Coast Steamship Co., 101 Cal. 216, 35 Pac. 651. Ga.—Strickland v. Griffin, 70 Ga. 541. Ind.—College Corner, etc. Co. v. Moss, 77 Ind. 139, 142. Kan.—State v. Werner, 80 Kan. 222, 101 Pac. 1004; State v. Johnston, 78 Kan. 615, 97 Pac. 790. Mont.—Wetzstein, etc. Co. v. Boston, etc. Co., 25 Mont. 135, 136, 63 Pac. 1043. Neb.—State v. Baker, 62 Neb. 840, 88 N. W. 124; State v. Wakeley, 28 Neb. 431, 44 N. W. 488. Okla.—Ex parte Grimes, 20 Okla. 446, 94 Pac. 668. Tex.—Riggins v. Thompson, 93 Tex. 154, 157, 71 S. W. 14. Utah.—Miles v. Sheep Rock, etc. Co., 15 Utah 436, 49 Pac. 536.

[a] A restraining order (1) is in aid only, and not a part of the main action; its purpose being only to keep things in statu quo pending the motion for a preliminary hearing to determine whether a preliminary injunction shall issue (State v. Graves, 82 Neb. 282, 117 N. W. 717; Trester v. Pike, 60 Neb. 510, 83 N. W. 676), (2) and should not go further than to suspend the action of the defendant until an opportunity is afforded to answer and defend. Ind.—Wallace v. McVey, 6 Ind. 300. Md.—Thompson Seenic Ry. Co. v. Young, 90 Md. 278, 283, 44 Atl. 1024. Ohio.—Vornholt v. Gordon, 4 Ohio Dec. 498.

[b] Where a restraining order is issued pending an order to show cause why a temporary injunction should not issue until the final determination of the suit, it does not affect the validity of an assessment sought to be enjoined, but simply suspends the power to collect it, until the date fixed for the hearing on the order to show cause. "If upon the date so fixed there is no appearance of the parties, and no continuance of the hearing on the motion for the injunction, the restraining order falls with the motion, and the restraint upon the collection of the assessment is at an end. Under such circumstances it requires no order of court to dissolve the restraining order. Its life ceases with that of the motion, for such an order is not intended as an injunction pendente lite, and is not an injunction within the meaning of the provision of the statute above quoted." Miles v. Sheep Rock Min. & Mill. Co., 15 Utah 436, 49 Pac. 536.

11. Duration Determines Distinction.—State v. Werner, 80 Kan. 222, 101 Pac. 1004. See also Strickland v. Griffin, 70 Ga. 54.

[a] The chief distinguishing characteristics between a temporary injunction and a mere restraining order depends upon the question of whether or not the order appears in itself to be a finality or whether there is to be a future hearing to determine whether or not an injunction pendente lite shall be issued. State v. Baker, 62 Neb. 840, 88 N. W. 124.

12. Castleman v. State, 94 Miss. 609, 47 So. 647. But see State ex rel. Downing v. Greene, 48 Neb. 327, 67 N. W. 162; and Riggins v. Thompson, 96 Tex. 154, 71 S. W. 14, where it is said: "We understand that under the practice of the American courts three species of injunctions may be issued: 1. A restraining order, which is defined to be: 'A restraining order is an interlocutory order made by a court of equity upon an application for an injunction and as part of the motion for a preliminary injunction, by which the party is restrained pending the hearing of the motion' (Bouvier's Law Dict., 2 ed.) 2. One which is intended to operate, and which does operate unless dissolved by an interlocutory order, until the final hearing; and, 3. A perpetual injunction which can be properly ordered only upon the final decree." Quoted with approval in Ex parte Zuccaro (Tex.), 163 S. W. 579.

a defendant to do or not to do a certain act or acts.¹³ A mandatory injunction, of course, compels the affirmative performance of an act.¹⁴

Power To Grant Mandatory Injunction.—Though some courts have stated broadly that the object and purpose of an injunction is merely preventive, it is well settled that in cases of extreme necessity and hardship and where complainant's right is clear, that a court of equity is not limited to the restraint of a contemplated or threatened action, but may even require affirmative action¹⁵ by the issuance of a manda-

[a] Character Determined By Effect.—"For the purpose of determining the effect of this injunction as mandatory or prohibitory, we must consider the result of an enforcement of the writ on the position of the defendant, as asserted in the court below. If the injunction compels him affirmatively to surrender a position which he holds, and which, upon the facts alleged by him, he is entitled to hold, it is mandatory." Clute v. Superior Court, 155 Cal. 15, 20, 99 Pac. 362, 132 Am. St. Rep. 54.

[a] Mandatory injunctions are rarely granted before final hearing, and are, as a general rule, strictly confined to cases where the remedy at law is plainly inadequate. Allman v. United

[b] Where it would require close and continuous supervision by the court for an indefinite period of time, such an injunction will be refused. Cameron v. Carbondale, 227 Pa. 473, 76 Atl. 198, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 494.

[c] "While, however, the language of the Code in terms authorizes an injunction only against the commission of acts, still it is doubtless within the power of a court of equity, in proper cases, to issue mandatory injunctions, and the provisions of the code should not be so strictly construed as to deny that power in any case. But while such power may exist it is by no means unlimited, and when it exceeds the limit it is not a mere error, but void as without jurisdiction. It has been well said by Judge Cooley: 'The court of chancery has no more power than any other to condemn a man unheard, and to dispossess him of property prima facie his, and hand over its enjoyment to another on an ex parte claim to it.' Arnold v. Bright, 41 Mich. 207, 2 N. W. 16. So, in an action for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of real estate, the court doubtless may restrain the defendant pending the action from conveying, incumbering, or in any way incumbering, or in any way disposing of the subject of the suit; but an ex parte order that the defendant forthwith convey the premises to the plaintiff, even though phrased in the form of an injunction restraining him from refusing to forthwith make the conveyance, in my opinion would be not merely erroneous, but absolutely void. On the other hand, in the case of a threatened violation of a contract continuous in its character, such as a contract to furnish water or light during a term, the defendant might be restrained from failing to supply water or light during the pendency of the litigation." Bachman v. Harrington, 184 N. Y. 458, 77 N. E. 657, 658. Compare Powhatan Coal & Coke Co. v. Ritz, 60 W. Va. 395, 56 S. E. 257.

[d] Where Necessary To Make Restraining Order Effectual.—"While the office of an injunction primarily is to restrain, and not to compel, the performance of an act, yet, if it be necessary in order to make the restraining order effectual, the party against whom it is issued may be required to perform some affirmative act which will make effectual the main and controlling purpose of the order. It cannot be maintained that, because an injunction primarily is to restrain, and not to compel, the performance of an act, it cannot be used, when the effect of yielding obedience thereto requires the performance of some affirmative act. That is, the court may grant an injunction, the essential nature of which is to restrain, although, in yielding obedience to the restraint, the party may be required to perform some affirmative act. Otherwise often the injunction would be ineffectual." Falcon v. Boyer (Iowa), 142 N. W. 427.

[e] Examples of Proper Issuance. Mandatory injunctions have been held proper (1) where they require the removal of an unauthorized encroachment on the streets (United States v. Cole, 7 Mack. [D. C.] 504), (2) or the removal of a building constructed in violation of a building line restriction (Codman v. Bradley, 201 Mass. 361, 87 N. E. 591; Hyman v. Tash (N. J. Eq.), 71 Atl. 742, erected in violation of express warning), (3) or the removal of the foundation of a building knowingly erected on another's land without his consent (Curtis Mfg. Co. v. Spencer Wire Co., 203 Mass. 448, 89 N. E. 534, 133 Am. St. Rep. 307), (4) or the removal of a building interfering with light and air, and erected under an undertaking to pull it down if the judgment of the court should be against the right (Greenwood v. Hornsey, 55 L. J. Ch. 917, L. R. 33 Ch. Div. 471, 55 L. T. 135, 35 W. R. 163), (5) or requiring the return of complainant's blueprints and drawings coming into the hands of a competing manufacturer (Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Standard Steel Car Co., 210 Pa. 464, 60 Atl. 4), (6) or require the fiscal court of a county to turn over the pest house to the board of health (Henderson Co. v. Ward, 107 Ky. 477, 54 S. W. 725), (7) or the election of officers of a corporation, or the election of officers of a corporation (Sheppard v. Rockingham P. Co., 150 N. C. 776, 64 S. E. 894), (8) or the issuance of corporate stock which had been paid for (Scherck v. Montgomery, 81 Miss. 426, 33 So. 507), (9) or the removal of an embankment flooding others' lands (Jefferson v. Hicks, 23 Okla. 684, 102 Pac. 79), (10) or the restoring of land to the condition it was before trespasses tory writ, where the circumstances of the case demand it, unless there is a statutory provision to the contrary.¹⁶

Preliminary Mandatory Injunction.—On the ground that the office of a preliminary injunction is merely to preserve the status quo pending the ultimate determination of the rights of the contesting parties, in many jurisdictions the power to issue a preliminary injunction, mandatory in character, is held not to exist.¹⁷ A more liberal view, however, of the power of the court to grant a preliminary injunction, mandatory in character, has been taken in some states, and they are allowable in extreme cases where the right is clear and free from doubt to the extent of restoring the status quo.¹⁸ Thus where the acts sought in constructing a highway over the land were committed. Ocala v. Anderson, 58 Fla. 415, 50 So. 572.

[f] But where two persons are contesting in the land department over a tract of government land, and each is in possession of a portion thereof, the district court cannot, under the rules of equity jurisdiction, by mandatory injunction take the land in the possession of one of the contestants and give it to the other. Brown v. Donnelly, 19 Okla. 296, 91 Pac. 859.

Granger*, 132 Ga. 167, 63 S. E. 700; Hart v. Atlantic Term. Co., 128 Ga. 754, 58 S. E. 452; Brinton v. Steele, 19 Idaho 71, 112 Pac. 319; Roberts v. Kartzke, 18 Idaho 552, 111 Pac. 1.

[a] While under the code the court cannot issue a purely mandatory order, (1) the court may grant an injunction, the essential nature of which is to restrain, although in yielding obedience to the restraint the defendant may be incidentally required to perform some act. Merchants', etc. Transp. Co. v. Granger, 132 Ga. 167, 67 S. E. 700; Hart v. Atlantic T. Co., 128 Ga. 754, 773, 58 S. E. 452. See also Goodrich v. Georgia R. Co., 115 Ga. 340, 41 S. E. 659. (2) Thus where a railroad company was permitted to lay a track on the condition that they would remove it if required, it is proper for the court to require its removal by injunction. Wayeross Air Line R. Co. v. Southern Pine Co., 111 Ga. 233, 36 S. E. 641.

[a] To Preserve Status Quo.—(1) "The office of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo until, upon final hearing, the court may grant full relief. Generally this can be accomplished by an injunction prohibitory in form, but it sometimes happens that the status quo is a condition not of rest, but of action, and the condition of rest is exactly what will inflict the irreparable injury upon complainant, which he appeals to a court of equity to protect him from. In such a case courts of equity issue mandatory writs before the case is heard on its merits." Toledo, etc. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 54 Fed. 730, 19 L. R. A. 387. (2) Therefore, where the complainant presents a case showing or tending to show that affirmative action by the defendant, of a temporary character, is necessary to preserve the status of the parties, then a mandatory injunction may be granted. But if there be neither proof nor allegation to that effect, and the act sought to be enforced is not continuous in its character, but solely the one sought to be decreed by final judgment, then the issue of a preliminary mandatory injunction is without authority. Bachman v. Harrington. 184 N. Y. 458, 77 N. E. 657, 659.

[b] Improper Issuance.—It is improper to grant a preliminary mandatory injunction requiring the removal of trade signs (1) pending a suit to enjoin the use thereof (Hagen v. Beth, 118 Cal. 330, 50 Pac. 425), (2) or requiring the removal of a building erected before the commencement of the action, so as not to obstruct a highway. Gardner v. Stroeveer, 81 Cal. 148, 22 Pac. 483, 6 L. R. A. 90.

[c] Act Accomplished Before Suit Filed.—Though the gas was shut off from complainant's factory before complainant had made an application to restrain the respondent from withdrawing the supply of gas it does not prevent the issuance of a preliminary mandatory injunction, as it restores the status quo existing just prior to the filing of the bill. Whiteman v. Fayette Fuel Gas Co., 139 Pa. 492, 20 Atl. 1062.

[d] Not Issued Without Hearing.—"The writ of injunction will issue on the ex parte application of the complainant only in its prohibitory form, and in cases where the only purpose to be accomplished is to restrain or prohibit something from being done. But in its mandatory form, when it commands the doing of something, it cannot be issued until a hearing on the merits, or when, a prohibiting writ having issued restraining a party from obstructing the exercise of a right, the obstruction may be commanded to be to be enjoined have been performed subsequent to the filing of the bill but before service of the restraining order,¹⁹ or where defendant does acts in violation of a prohibitory injunction previously allowed, a mandatory injunction requiring the restoration of the status quo is a proper remedy.²⁰ But where the act commanded to be done is not of a mere temporary character, but is practically a finality, and the sum total of the relief sought by the applicant, it is improper to grant such an injunction, except in the rarest cases where the rights of complainant are clear and undoubted.²¹ Thus an injunction having the effect of transferring the possession of property, the title or possession of which is in dispute, from one person to another will not be allowed,²² removed, because its continuance effects the very injury he was prohibited from effecting.''" Board of Comrs. v. Iberia & V. R. Co., 117 La. 940, 42 So. 433, 434, quoting from Black v. Good Intent, etc. Co., 31 La. Ann. 497.

[a] That a building was completed before the issuance of the writ will not prevent the granting of a mandatory injunction. The state of the new building when complainant first complains is the essential point. Lawrence v. Horton, 59 L. J. Ch. 440, 62 L. T. 749, 38 W. R. 555; Goodson v. Richardson, 43 L. J. Ch. 790, L. [a] The courts move with caution in granting any injunction, (1) and especially in granting those of a mandatory character; as a rule they grant the last only to prevent extreme or very serious damage (Dunn v. Youmans, 224 Ill. 34, 79 N. E. 321), (2) or as expressed by the New York court: "The court will seldom grant a mandatory injunction pendente lite unless the plaintiff's right is so clear that the denial of the right must be either captious or unconscionable." [a] Reason of Rule.—"It is not the form but the effect of the order which must be regarded. If it take or permit the taking from a defendant anything he has, it would anticipate and fore-judge the merits of the controversy, and transcend, as we have seen, the purposes of a preliminary injunction." Spring Valley Water Co. v. San Francisco, 165 Fed. 667, 710. See Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Oakland, 58 Fed. 50, 54; Calvert v. State, 34 Neb. 616, 52 N. W. 687, 692.

[b] This doctrine has been departed from in its strictness in some states, but still the doctrine remains that it is to be resorted to "only in a strong mischievous case of pressing necessity." Holbein v. De La Garza (Tex. Civ. App.), 126 S. W. 42.

[c] In Tawas & B. C. R. Co. v. Ioseo Circuit Judge, 44 Mich. 479, 7 N. W. 65, it is said "that any decree or order divesting possession or rights on a preliminary inquiry is illegal and void, so that no one need respect or obey it." See also State v. Graves, 66 Neb. 17, 92 N. W. 144.

[d] A preliminary injunction ordering the sheriff to return distrained articles is therefore improper. Evans v. Mayes, 81 S. C. 188, 62 S. E. 207.

[e] The possession of real property cannot be changed to the adverse party by an injunction pending litigation of title. Forman v. Healey, 11 N. D. 563, 93 N. W. 866.

[f] "Possession is prima facie evidence of rightful title, because it is one of the elements of title, is sacred, and no court can in any form of proceedings take it from a man without a hearing, without overthrowing the maxim that no man shall be condemned in person or deprived of property without a day in court and due process." *Bettman v. E. COMMON AND SPECIAL INJUNCTIONS.—In England, and at an early date in this country, a distinction was made between a common and a special injunction.²⁵ The common injunction issued as of course upon default of the defendant, either in appearing or answering the bill.²⁶ It issued in aid of, or as secondary to another equity,²⁷

[a] A mandatory injunction is an extreme remedy and should only be applied when legal rights are unlawfully invaded, or legal duties are wilfully or wantonly neglected. McCabe v. Watt, 224 Pa. 253, 73 Atl. 453, 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 274.

[b] "It is for the court in the exercise of a sound discretion to determine in each case whether a mandatory injunction shall issue. It will not be issued when it appears that it will operate inequitably or oppressively, nor when it appears that there has been unreasonable delay by the party seeking it in the enforcement of his rights, nor when the injury complained of is not serious or substantial and may be readily compensated in damages, while to restore things as they were before the acts complained of would subject the other party to great inconvenience and loss." Levi v. Worcester Consol. St. Ry. Co., 193 Mass. 116, 78 N. E. 853.

[c] It should rarely issue before a hearing on the merits, unless to enforce a prohibitory injunction previously allowed. Board of Comrs. v. Iberia & V. R. Co., 117 La. 940, 42 So. 433; New Iberia Rice Milling Co. v. Romero, 105 La. 439, 29 So. 876; State v. Judge, 41 La. Ann. 516, 6 So. 512.

as in the case of an injunction to restrain proceedings at law, in order to protect and enforce an equity which could not be pleaded.

A special injunction, on the other hand, was such as was granted only upon special application to the court.²⁸ It issued for the prevention of irreparable injury, when the preventive aid of the court of equity was the ultimate and only relief sought, and was the primary equity involved in the suit.²⁹

This distinction is no longer of much importance, as all injunctions are granted only upon special application to the court.³⁰ Indeed under the statutes providing for the joinder of legal and equitable demands in the same count, and in the same forms of action, it is difficult to conceive how a case for the exercise of a common injunction can ever arise.³¹

F. MANDAMUS AND MANDATORY INJUNCTIONS DISTINGUISHED.³² Where the established distinctions between equity and common law jurisdiction are observed, injunction and mandamus are not correlative remedies, in the sense of being applicable to the same subject-matter, the choice of the writ to be resorted to in a particular case to depend upon whether there is an excess of action to be restrained

[a] Its effect upon a pending suit at law was determined by the progress of that suit at the date of its issuance. If the injunction issued before declaration, it stayed everything; if afterward, it stayed execution only. Chadwell v. Jordan, 2 Cooper's Ch. (Tenn.) 635, 636; Garlick v. Pearson, 10 Ves. Jr. 450, 32 Eng. Reprint 919.

[a] A special injunction was founded, not on an equity existing in the controversy at law between the parties, but on something collateral to it; as for example, the necessity of protecting property in dispute pending the litigation. Jarman v. Saunders, 64 N. C. 367.

[a] Under the North Carolina code practice, the difference between special and common injunctions has been abolished. They are all ancillary to the relief sought in the action, and cannot issue except when there is an action pending in court, in which jurisdiction has been obtained in one of the modes recognized by the statute. Armstrong v. Kinsell, 164 N. C. 125, 80 S. E. 235.

[c] United States Courts.—Since the injunction is not issued without notice to the opposite party, it follows that all injunctions are special, rather than common, or a matter of course. Perry v. Parker, 1 Woodb. & M. 280, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,010.

[d] England.—The common injunction is abolished in England by 15 and 16 Vict., ch. 86 and the 45th order of the 7th of August, 1852. See also Anderson v. Noble, 1 Drew. 143, 61 Eng. Reprint 406.

32. For a definition of mandamus, see the title "Mandamus."

For definition of mandatory injunction, see supra, I, D.

[a] "An injunction is essentially a preventive remedy, mandamus a remedial one; the former is usually employed to prevent future injury, the latter to redress past grievances. The functions of an injunction are to restrain motion and to enforce inaction; those of a mandamus to set in motion and to compel action. In this sense an injunction may be regarded as a

or a defect to be supplied.³³ The two writs properly pertain to entirely different jurisdictions and to different classes of proceedings, injunction being the proper writ only in cases of equitable cognizance, and mandamus being a common-law writ, and applicable only in cases coming within the appropriate jurisdiction of courts of common law.³⁴ But by virtue of code or constitutional provisions this distinction may become unimportant.³⁵

G. INJUNCTIONS AND STAY OF PROCEEDINGS DISTINGUISHED. — A stay of proceedings is not the same as an injunction by order, where the writ of injunction has been abolished, though it restrains judicial proceedings.³⁶

H. INJUNCTIONS AND WRITS OF PROHIBITION DISTINGUISHED.³⁷ The remedy by writ of prohibition has been likened to the equitable remedy by injunction against proceedings at law.³⁸ There is a material difference between them, however.³⁹ conservative remedy, mandamus an active one; the former preserves matters in statu quo, while the very object of the latter is to change the status of affairs and to substitute action for inactivity. The one is therefore a positive or remedial process, the other a negative or preventive one." Ware v. Welch (Tex. Civ. App.), 149 S. W. 263. And see Callaghan v. McGown (Tex. Civ. App.), 90 S. W. 319, quoting High on Extraordinary Legal Remedies (3d ed.), §6.

36. An injunction by order, which is a substitute for the judicial writ, operates upon the conduct of the parties and their attorneys, in respect to matters outside of those occurring in the ordinary progress of the action. A stay of proceedings operates in relation to something within the usual course of judicial proceedings, and which the court, by its authority over the parties and their attorneys, can regulate and control without resort to the extraordinary writ of injunction. Rossiter v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 96 Wis. 466, 71 N. W. 898. See

39. "The object in each case is the restraining of legal proceedings, but, as has been said: 'This vital difference is, however, to be observed between them: an injunction against proceedings at law is directed only to the parties litigant, without in any manner interfering with the court, while a prohibition is directed to the court itself, commanding it to cease from the exercise of a jurisdiction to which it has no legal claim.' (High's Extraordinary Legal Remedies [3d ed.], sec. 763.) There is this further similarity between the two remedies thus compared, . . . namely, that as the right to the remedy by injunction implies a wrong threatened by the parties litigant against whom the relief is sought, so the right to the writ of prohibition implies that a wrong is about to be committed, not by the parties litigant, as in the case of injunction, but by the person or court assuming the exercise of judicial power and against whom the writ is asked." State ex rel. Terminal R. Assn. v. Tracy, 237 Mo. 109, 117, 140 S. W. 888, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 448.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.—A. JURISDICTION.⁴⁰—1. Incident of Chancery Only.—The authority to allow an injunction is an incident of chancery jurisdiction and can only be exercised by courts with general chancery powers,⁴¹ or given such jurisdiction by virtue of legislative enactment.⁴² Neither a master in chancery,⁴³ nor a commissioner authorized by statute to make an order requiring a judgment debtor to appear before him and answer has power to issue a restraining order.⁴⁴ The fact that a court has both common-law and chancery jurisdiction in no way changes or obliterates its equitable jurisdiction in the absence of express legislative restriction.⁴⁵

2. Of Particular Courts.—a. In General.—What courts have original jurisdiction to issue the writ of injunction is regulated by the constitution and statutes of the various states to which reference must be had.⁴⁶ That a court has jurisdiction to issue a temporary

[b] In New York a court of equity has no inherent absolute power to grant interlocutory injunctions, but that authority must be found in the Code of Civil Procedure. *Bachman v. [b] In Woodruff v. Fisher, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 224, 232, it is said: "This suit is an equitable one, and although legal and equitable actions are, to a degree at least, blended as to form, principles remain the same; and this court will not interfere by injunction where our former court of chancery would not, unless expressly authorized to do so by statute."

Hancock Steel & I. Co.*, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 602.

[b] New York Surrogate's Court. Special surrogates of certain counties have jurisdiction to grant injunctions, under the laws of 1849, ch. 306, notwithstanding the Code of Civil Procedure gives jurisdiction to grant injunctions in such cases to county judges. Aldinger v. Pugh, 122 N. Y. 403, 30 N. E. 745, affirming 10 N. Y. Supp. 684.

[c] In Texas, the state constitution of 1876 gives the district courts jurisdiction to issue injunctions irrespective of the amount involved. Stein v. Frieberg, Klein & Co., 64 Tex. 271; Anderson County v. Kennedy, 58 Tex. 616; Poe v. Ferguson (Tex. Civ. App.), 168 S. W. 459; Callaghan v. Tobin, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 441, 90 S. W. 328.

[d] Though the state constitution gives the county court jurisdiction of all proceedings where the amount involved, exclusive of interest, is more than $200 and not more than $500, this does not preclude the district court to which exclusive jurisdiction to issue injunctions has been given, of a cause to restrain the use of a trade-mark and for $500 damages, as the damages are merely incidental to the main relief. Cleaver v. Duke (Tex. Civ. App.), 58 S. W. 145.

[f] Colorado.—Combinations in Restraint of Trade.—The district court as well as the supreme court has jurisdiction at the suit of the attorney-general on behalf of the people of an action to enjoin illegal combinations in restraint of trade. Denver Jobbers' Assn. v. People, 21 Colo. App. 326, 122 Pac. 404.

[g] "The test of jurisdiction to entertain a bill for injunction is not whether good cause for granting the injunction is set forth in the bill, but whether the court or its organ, the judge, could grant it for any cause. If the tribunal applied to can grant the injunction for any cause, then the question about cause is not a question of jurisdiction, but of the proper exercise of jurisdiction. An injunction granted without jurisdiction is void, but one granted by a competent tribunal for insufficient cause, though erroneous, is valid and binding until vacated or set aside." Wilson v. Sullivan, 81 Ga. 238, 245, 7 S. E. 274. See also State ex rel. Minden-Edison Light & P. Co. v. Dungan, 89 Neb. 738, 132 N. W. 305.

[h] Raising Jurisdictional Question.—The question as to the court's jurisdiction of the cause is fully raised by an answer denying that plaintiff is entitled to the relief or any part thereof sought, and praying the same advantage of the answer as if defendant had pleaded or demurred. Titus v. Chipewa Circuit Judge, 168 Mich. 507, 134 N. W. 487.

fact that jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus and habeas corpus is given to specified courts does not imply exclude jurisdiction to issue writs of injunction, general chancery power having also been given them.⁴⁸

The United States courts may maintain a bill to restrain the prosecution of a suit pending before it, irrespective of the citizenship of the parties, as the proceeding is regarded not as an original suit, but as ancillary and dependent, and supplementary merely to the original suit out of which it has arisen.⁴⁹

Jurisdiction Given to Judges.—Jurisdiction is sometimes conferred upon the judges of the appellate and other courts, and in such case it is held that the court sitting en banc, or when sitting as a court, has no such jurisdiction.⁵⁰

A special judge commissioned to hold a special term can only issue a restraining order returnable before himself in a case which he would have jurisdiction to hear and determine.⁵¹ If returnable at a subsequent term, he should make it returnable before the regular judge.⁵²

b. Appellate Courts.—The constitutions of the various states generally have given the appellate courts jurisdiction to issue the writ of injunction in aid of their appellate jurisdiction,⁵³ though, without

[c] Granting Injunction Pending Appeal as Original Grant.—"It is, in effect, the granting of a new injunction. It is said that this is an original exercise of judicial power; and unquestionably it is so. It is thereupon objected that this is a mere appellate tribunal, and cannot exercise such power. The consequence does not follow. It may not exercise original power in acquiring jurisdiction over the cause. But that jurisdiction once regularly obtained, this court may exercise original jurisdiction over the parties, especially when the proceeding is in rem, and the object of the order to maintain unchanged, as far as practicable, the status or condition of the subject-matter of the controversy during the pendency of the suit. It is on the same principle upon which a court of common law, in an action of ejectment or dower will make an order upon the party in possession, restraining the commission of waste. And a court of equity, prior to the hearing or argument, will, upon the same principle, grant a temporary injunction until the case can be heard. It is an inherent power in all superior tribunals, essential to the attainment of the object of litigation and the ends of justice." Doughty v. Somerville, etc. R. Co., 7 N. J. Eq. 629, 51 Am. [a] "The Supreme Court of Arkansas, in State v. Ashley, 1 Ark. 309, in considering a constitutional provision conferring upon the supreme court original jurisdiction, and which bears a striking resemblance to our own, announced that it was apparently the intention of the constitutional convention 'to leave with the inferior tribunals the first, or original, cognizance

as such writs are secured by an information filed by the law officer of the state, or with his authority, upon leave granted, and in the name of the state.⁵⁹

3. In Case of Absence or Disability of Judge.—Statutes in many states provide for the issuance of an injunction, in suits pending in other courts, in case of the absence or disability of the judge having jurisdiction, by another judge,⁶⁰ or by some other officer,⁶¹ though such jurisdiction should only be exercised where the delay in reaching the

of cases and controversies between private parties, as well as all controversies in which the state might be a party or otherwise interested in which the sovereignty, or sovereign rights, powers, and franchises of the state are not involved; but in cases involving the civil rights of the sovereign power of a state, affecting vitally its character and the proper administration of the government itself, in which the whole people and every individual member of the community has a direct, immediate, and most sacred interest, when the exercise of a public right, or a public franchise is the subject-matter of controversy, the convention appears to have entertained a different view, and to have deemed it a proper subject to be investigated and determined in the first instance, before the highest judicial tribunal in the state.' *People ex rel. [a] Restraining Orders.—Authority to grant temporary injunctions includes the authority to allow restraining orders. The greater embraces the less. State v. Greene, 48 Neb. 327, 67 N. W. 162.

[b] A statute allowing the circuit judge to grant injunctions when the chancellor is absent from the county "after the action has been commenced, but not before" does not authorize the circuit judge to grant an injunction where an injunction is the only relief sought. Moody v. Lowrimore, 74 Ark. 421, 86 S. W. 400.

[c] Supporting Affidavit.—Where the application to another judge is required to be supported by an affidavit of certain things, an affidavit not in strict compliance with such requirement is insufficient to give such other judge authority to issue the injunction. Lee v. Broocks, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 220, 113 S. W. 164.

[d] In Vacation.—But statutes providing that another judge may preside in the court having exclusive original jurisdiction of injunction suits when the regular judge is disqualified, does not give the judge of such other court jurisdiction to grant or refuse injunctions in vacation, no order being taken in term time for the determination of the cause in vacation. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilcoxon, 64 Ga. 556.

proper judge would work irreparable injury.⁶² And when authorized on certain contingencies only, the grounds should appear.⁶³ The writ, however, should be returnable to the court having original jurisdiction.⁶⁴

4. To Enjoin Actions in Other States.—Since an injunction operates in personam, it is well settled that a court having acquired jurisdiction over the subject-matter and the parties, may restrain parties within its jurisdiction from prosecuting a subsequent suit in the courts of another state between the same parties, seeking substantially the same relief arising out of the subject-matter,⁶⁵ though the subject of controversy is in another jurisdiction or in another

Vermont, etc. R. Co.*, 46 Vt. 792. Wash.—Rader v. Stubblefield, 43 Wash. 334, 86 Pac. 560.

[a] Basis of Doctrine.—“The courts do not, in such cases, pretend to direct or control the foreign court but the decree acts solely upon the party. The jurisdiction rests on the authority vested in courts of equity over persons within the limits of their jurisdiction and amenable to process, to stay acts contrary to equity and good conscience. The state has power to compel its own citizens to respects its laws even beyond its own territorial limits, state, and real estate in such other state is incidentally involved.⁶⁶ But equity will not take jurisdiction when full and complete relief cannot be granted and enforced, except by the exercise of authority over property which lies within another state.⁶⁷

A general appearance by a non-resident gives jurisdiction over him so as to enable the court to grant an injunction, though the subject-matter is in another state.⁶⁸

5. To Enjoin Proceedings in Courts of Concurrent Jurisdiction. Where a court has taken jurisdiction of a cause, a court of concurrent jurisdiction within the state has no jurisdiction to restrain the proceedings therein, the jurisdiction of the first court prevails.⁶⁹ Thus, when the jurisdiction of law and equity are concurrent, a court of

and the power of the courts is undoubted to restrain one citizen from prosecuting in the courts of a foreign state an action against another which will result in a fraud or gross wrong or oppression." Royal League v. Kavanagh, 233 Ill. 175, 84 N. E. 178, 181.

[b] "There is a clear distinction as to the power and authority of a court of equity, in this state, to restrain by injunction the proceedings of a court in another state, and the power and authority of such court, to restrain, by injunction, the personal action of a citizen of this state. In the one case, a court of equity, in this state, has no jurisdiction, in the other, it has jurisdiction to restrain, by injunction the personal action of the defendant himself from enforcing an unconscientious demand in another state, whether that demand is reduced to judgment or not, upon a proper case being made." Engel v. Scheuerman, 40 Ga. 206, 211, 2 Am. Rep. 573.

[c] Injunction Does Not Issue to Court.—The injunction issues only to the parties before the court and not to the court. Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 422, 463, 18 Sup. Ct. 403, 42 L. ed. 807; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. (U. S.) 612, 12 L. ed. 841.

[d] Existence of Other Remedies. This right is not to be defeated because the party complaining has other legal defenses availing in the foreign jurisdiction. Sandage v. Studabaker Bros. Mfg. Co., 142 Ind. 148, 41 N. E. 380, 51 Am. St. Rep. 165, 34 L. R. A. 363.

[e] "No general rule can be laid down as to when and when not the court ought to exercise this power, and enjoin a party from prosecuting a suit in a foreign jurisdiction. Each case must be ruled by its own facts. If they show that it is necessary and equitable to exercise the power in the orderly administration of justice, the court should enjoin the party, otherwise not." Hawkins v. Ireland, 64 Minn. 339, 67 N. W. 73, 58 Am. St. Rep. 534.

[f] "Courts will not enjoin a suit in another state merely on the ground of the convenience of parties, but will do so when the ends of justice require it. Bank of Bellow Falls v. R. & B. R. Co. et al., 28 Vt. 470." Mason v. Harlow, 84 Kan. 277, 114 Pac. 218.

[g] Pending Actions.—A statute prohibiting an injunction "to stay a judicial proceeding pending at the commencement of the action in which the injunction is demanded," is applicable to suits pending in foreign jurisdiction. Spreekels v. Hawaiian, etc. Co., 117 Cal. 377, 49 Pac. 353.

equity will not interfere by injunction with a matter of which a court of law has already acquired cognizance, unless the court in which the action or proceeding is pending is unable, by reason of its jurisdiction, to afford the party the relief he is entitled to.⁷⁰

6. Conflicting Jurisdiction Between State and Federal Courts. By act of congress the United States courts are prohibited from issuing injunctions to stay proceedings in the state courts, except as authorized by the laws relating to proceedings in bankruptcy;⁷¹ but where the

The jurisdiction being once conceded, the right to enforce it must follow. [a] Meaning of "Proceedings."

(1) In United States v. Collins, 4 Blatchf. 142, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,834, it is held that the term "proceedings" in the act includes all steps taken in a suit from its inception to and including final process. It includes a sale and the judgment thereon. See Pickett v. Filer & Stowell Co., 40 Fed. 313; Ruggles v. Simonton, 3 Biss. 325, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 12,129. (2) It is applicable to writs and executions and to every step taken in the cause; it indicates the progressive course of the business from its commencement to its termination. Justice Marshall in Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, 6 L. ed. 253.

[b] Enjoining the taking of depositions in the state court is a proceed-

United States courts first obtain jurisdiction,⁷² or where a cause has been removed from the state to the federal court, or where proceedings in the state court are obviously intended to avoid the effect of the removal statutes, and to defeat the federal court's jurisdiction,⁷³ the federal court may restrain proceedings in the state court. And the act of congress does not prevent the federal courts from enjoining state officers under a void state law,⁷⁴ or the re-litigation of the constitutionality of a state statute declared to be unconstitutional by the federal court,⁷⁵ or suits interfering with the possession of property in the hands of a receiver appointed by the federal courts.⁷⁶ On the ing within the above statute which cannot be enjoined by the federal court. American Shipbuilding Co. v. Whitney, 190 Fed. 109.

[c] Bankruptcy.—(1) A federal court may restrain an action in a state court to recover some of the proceeds of a bankrupt estate from the trustee in bankruptcy (Berman v. Smith, 171 Fed. 735), (2) or may restrain lienholders from prosecuting actions in the state court to foreclose their liens, though such injunction should not extend to the court or judge. In re Dana, 167 Fed. 529, 93 C. C. A. 238.

Riggs*, 123 Fed. 312; Stewart v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 117 Fed. 782.

[a] When Statute Not Controlling. This statute is not controlling and has no application in cases where the injunctive process is invoked to protect the federal court's own jurisdiction. The federal court may restrain all proceedings in a state court which would have the effect of defeating or impairing its jurisdiction, its jurisdiction having first attached. The writ of injunction may be used to prevent parties from interfering by the use of the process of state courts with property in possession of the federal court. Nelson v. Camp, 191 Fed. 712, 112 C. C. A. 302.

[b] In Oliver v. Parlin, etc. Co., 105 Fed. 272, 45 C. C. A. 200, the court said: "An examination of the cases . . . will show that in every well considered case, when an injunction restraining already instituted proceedings in a state court has been issued by a United States court it was either based on a decree or judgment of the United States court which it was necessary and proper to enforce; or, if issued prior to judgment or decree, it was directed against a party who, after jurisdiction over him and the cause was fully vested, had resorted to proceedings in the state court necessarily conflicting with, if not ousting, the jurisdiction of the United States courts."

74. Haskell v. Cowham, 187 Fed. 403, 109 C. C. A. 235, enjoining state officers from interfering under state law with piping of natural gas from state.

[a] Searches and Seizures for Liquors in Interstate Commerce.—Such act does not prevent the federal court from enjoining a search and seizure warrant for liquors still in the carrier's hands in interstate commerce and before delivery to the consignee. Danciger v. Stone, 187 Fed. 853.

other hand, because in their sphere of action United States courts are wholly independent of the state courts, a state court will not enjoin proceedings in the United States courts,⁷⁷ unless to protect its own jurisdiction previously acquired.⁷⁸

7. As Dependent Upon Amount in Controversy.—Constitutional provisions limiting the jurisdiction of certain courts to specified amounts are applicable to injunction proceedings.⁷⁹ Statutes in many jurisdictions make the jurisdiction of particular courts to grant an injunction dependent upon the amount in controversy.⁸⁰ Some courts, however, have original jurisdiction to issue an injunction irrespective of the amount which may be in controversy in the suit.⁸¹

[b] Kentucky.—Void Judgment.—Under Civ. Code Pr., §284, a suit does not lie to enjoin a justice's judgment or a county court's judgment where the amount in dispute is less than $25. Suit will not lie to enjoin judgment for $5 on the ground that it is void. Barnes v. Barnett (Ky.), 118 S. W. 997.

[a] Value of Right Criterion.—In a suit to enjoin a threatened or continued commission of certain acts, the amount or value involved is the value of the right which the complainant seeks to protect from invasion, or the object to be gained by the bill. It is not the sum he might recover in an action at law for the damages already sustained, nor is he required to wait until it reaches the jurisdictional amount. Board of Trade v. Cella Com. Co., 145 Fed. 28, 76 C. C. A. 28.

[b] Value of subject-matter sought to be protected is criterion. Staley & Barnsdale v. Derden, 57 Tex. Civ. App. 142, 121 S. W. 1136.

[c] Stockholder Enjoining Acceptance of Bank Guaranty Act.—The value in controversy in a suit by a minority stockholder to restrain a bank from accepting a state bank guaranty law by which over $2000 per year was to be paid to the state, is the value of the bank sought to be protected and not the burden which will be by the law laid on his shares. Larabee v. Dolley, 175 Fed. 365, 378.

[d] To restrain a conspiracy to interfere with complainant's business, the value of the business is the criterion. Rocky Mt. B. T. Co. v. Montana Fed. of Labor, 156 Fed. 809.

[e] Restraining Ticket Scalping. The jurisdictional averment in the bill is to be tested, not by the mere immediate pecuniary damage resulting from the acts complained of, but by the value of the business sought to be protected and the right of property which the complainant sought to have recognized and enforced. Bitterman v. Louisville, etc. R. Co., 207 U. S. 205, 28 Sup. Ct. 91, 52 L. ed. 171, affirming 144 Fed. 34, 75 C. C. A. 192.

[f] Restraining Collection of Taxes. Where it is sought to restrain the sale of lands for illegal taxes because such sale would be a cloud on the title, the taxes determine the amount involved and not the value of the property. Turner v. Jackson L. Co., 159 Fed. 923, 87 C. C. A. 103.

[g] Where several property owners join in a proceeding to restrain the collection of assessments against their separate property, the amount in controversy as to an appeal to the United States supreme court is determined by the amount of each separate assessment, the object being to relieve each separate owner from the amount for which he was personally, or his property, liable, and such distinct or separate interests cannot be united for the purpose of making up the amount necessary to give the supreme court jurisdiction. Ogden City v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 224, 18 Sup. Ct. 98, 42 L. ed. 444, affirming 12 Utah 476, 43 Pac. 119; Russell v. Stansell, 105 U. S. 303, 26 L. ed. 989.

[h] Issuance of Bonds.—Where a taxpayer brings an action to restrain the issuance of bonds because in excess of its constitutional limit, the right to issue the bonds and not the amount of tax which the taxpayer would have to pay is the matter in dispute. Ottumwa v. City Water Supply

B. VENUE.—1. In General.—In the absence of specific provision relative to the venue of injunction suits, the usual rules as to equity suits apply;⁸³ but the venue is governed by statute in some states.⁸⁴ Such suits are generally required to be instituted in the county where the defendant against whom the injunction is prayed, resides or has his domicile.⁸⁵

[a] Michigan.—Under §434, Comp. Laws, if there is no property involved, and the subject-matter is not local, and defendant is a non-resident and complainant a resident, the action must be brought in the county of complainant's residence. A court of equity of a county other than complainant's residence has no jurisdiction to enjoin a non-resident from taking depositions. No property being involved and the subject-matter not being local. Titus v. Chippewa Circuit Judge, 168 Mich. 507, 134 N. W. 487.

[b] A suit to restrain the application of a sewerage fund to any purpose until plaintiff's claim for the construction of a sewerage system is adjudicated, is a local action, under a statute making actions involving the right to the possession or title of specific personal property local. *North Yakima v. relief besides the restraining of an action at law and brought in another county than where the defendants resided, is demurrable for want of jurisdiction where the statute provides that injunction suits other than those to restrain actions at law must be brought where defendant resides. Crawley v. Barge, 132 Ga. 96, 63 S. E. 819. See also Stone v. King-Hodgson Co., 140 Ga. 487, 79 S. E. 122.

[b] Advertising and preparing land for sale under a power in a deed of trust is not a pending proceeding so as to give the court where the land is situated jurisdiction to enjoin the sale, where the grantee resides in another county. And the fact that the trustee in the deed of trust resides in the county where the land is situated and the sale is to take place, does not give jurisdiction, the trustee having no title or interest therein. Meeks v. Roan, 117 Ga. 865, 45 S. E. 252.

[c] Restraining Railroad Commissioners.—An action to restrain railroad commissioners from enforcing unfair railroad rates must be brought where one or more of the railroad commissioners resides. Railroad Com. v. Palmer Hdw. Co., 124 Ga. 633, 53 S. E. 193.

[d] A suit to enjoin a railroad company from establishing and enforcing unreasonable railroad rates in violation of interstate commerce act may be brought in any district where defendant has its domicile. *Union Pac. [e] Railroad tickets are not "property" in the sense of a provision requiring a suit in reference to "property" to be brought where the property is located, but such suit is in personam and transitory in character and must be brought where defendant has its

Issuance by Judge While Outside His District.—Unless authorized by statute an injunction cannot be issued by a judge while out of his district,⁸⁶ but statutes in some states permit a judge to grant injunctions in any part of the state.⁸⁷ But a statute providing for the hearing of an injunction proceeding in the county of defendant's residence does not prevent the judge from granting an ex parte injunction when in another county of his circuit.⁸⁸

2. Suits To Stay Proceedings on Judgments or Suits at Law. Statutes in many states require that suits to restrain proceedings at law must be brought in the county where such proceedings are pending or the judgment rendered,⁸⁹ though such a statute does not pre-domicil. Kirby v. Union Pac. R. Co., 51 Colo. 509, 119 Pac. 1042.

[f] Several Parties Defendant. Where a suit for injunction and damages against a corporation and its agent is instituted in the county of the agent's residence, and jurisdiction as to the agent is relied upon as forming a basis for jurisdiction of the corporation, and it appears from the allegations of the petition that they are insufficient to constitute a cause of action against the agent, the court is without jurisdiction as to the corporation. McClellan & Co. v. American Tie, etc. Co., 135 Ga. 370, 69 S. E. 486.

[g] Notes in Escrow.—Where part of the relief sought is to enjoin the delivery or disposal of certain notes of the plaintiff given in part payment of the property, such an action may properly be brought in the county where such notes are held in escrow, and a summons may be sent to another county for service upon the defendant against whom the other relief is sought. Bushee v. Keller, 96 Neb. 736, 148 N. W. 902.

[b] In Georgia, to the constitutional requirement that "equity cases shall be tried in the county where a defendant resides against whom substantial relief is prayed" there is an exception "in cases of injunction to stay pending proceedings, when the petition may be filed in the county where the proceedings are pending; provided no relief is prayed as to matters not included in such litigation." Stone v. King-Hodgson Co., 140 Ga. 487, 79 S. E. 122; Crawley v. Barge, 132 Ga. 96, 63 S. E. 819; Macon Nav. Co. v. Stallings, 110 Ga. 352, 35 S. E. 647; Clark v. Beall, 39 Ga. 533. See also Ellis v. Stewart, 123 Ga. 242, 51 S. E. 321. "This exception is upheld only on the theory of waiver; that is, that where a party institutes a proceeding in a court of a county other than that of his residence, against a person residing in such county, he submits himself, to the extent of such suit, to the equity jurisdiction of the court where in the suit is brought." Stone v. King-Hodgson Co., 140 Ga. 487, 79 S. E. 122; Crawley v. Barge, 132 Ga. 96, 63 S. E. 819.

[c] "Where the general constitutional jurisdiction is in one county, and the right to proceed in another depends upon waiver of, or submission to, jurisdiction in the latter county by the plaintiff in the proceeding sought to be enjoined, and upon the particular kind of equitable petition which may be filed to enjoin the proceeding of the original plaintiff, an equitable petition which does not substantially comply with the statute cannot be upheld. If in its general scope it does not conform to the statute, it is subject to demurrer for want of jurisdiction." Crawley v. Barge, 132 Ga. 96,

63 S. E. 819. See also Stone v. King-Hodgson Co., 140 Ga. 487, 79 S. E. 122.

[d] Enjoining Levy of Execution. The venue of an equitable petition to enjoin the levy of an execution until a pending motion to set aside the judgment on which it was issued can be heard and determined, and complaining of no misconduct of the levying officer is in the county of the judgment creditor's residence, if a resident of the state. Malsby v. Studstill, 127 Ga. 726, 56 S. E. 988.

[e] Texas.—Execution.—Such statute applies "only when the suit is to restrain the execution of a judgment because of some infirmity in the judgment or the writ, or of some equity which has arisen since the rendition of the judgment which should prevent its enforcement, and does not apply when the purpose of the injunction is only to prevent the sale of exempt property, and in such case the suit can be brought in any court of the county in which any of the defendants reside or in which the property, if real estate, is situated, having jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the suit." Parsons v. McKinney (Tex. Civ. App.), 133 S. W. 1084, writ of error refused by supreme court.

90. Void Judgment.—Willis v. Tomes, 141 Ky. 431, 132 S. W. 1043; Noordlinger v. Huff, 31 Wash. 360, 72 Pac. 73.

[a] Federal Courts.—Where the judgment rendered in one federal district is void, its enforcement may be enjoined by a federal court in another district. Kirk v. United States, 124 Fed. 324.

[b] Kansas.—An action to enjoin the enforcement of a void judgment may be instituted in any county in which an attempt to enforce it is made, though the judgment was rendered in another county. Chambers Bros. & Co. v. King, etc. Co., 16 Kan. 270.

91. Kruegel v. Rawlins (Tex. Civ. App.), 121 S. W. 216.

is merely incidental to the main object of the bill, the suit need not be instituted in the county where such suit is pending, its venue being determined by the main object of the bill.⁹²

Waiver.—But if the suit is commenced in another county than that where the statute provides it should be tried, it is not a jurisdictional defect, but is waived by failure to object and ask for a change of venue.⁹³

3. Title or Possession of Land Involved.—If title to or possession of land is involved the suit must be brought in the county where the land is situated.⁹⁴

[a] In Georgia (1) it must always be brought in the county of defendant's residence though title (Clayton v. Stetson, 101 Ga. 634, 28 S. E. 983), (2) or possession of land is involved. Vizard v. Moody, 115 Ga. 491, 41 S. E. 997.

[b] A bill to restrain trespasses upon realty (1) by cutting standing timber (Powell v. Cheshire, 70 Ga. 357, 48 Am. Rep. 572), (2) or a suit to restrain interference with the complainant's right to cut and remove standing timber (real estate) does not involve title or possession of real estate so as to require the suit to be brought where the land is situated. State v. Goodrich, 238 Mo. 720, 142 S. W. 300.

[c] Where a suit is brought to restrain the diversion of water constituting an injury to real estate, notwithstanding the statute provides that suits to recover for injuries to real estate shall be tried in the county where the land is situated, this does not prevent such suit being commenced in another county, and such county may try the suit if application is not made for a transfer. Miller v. Madera, etc. Co., 155 Cal. 59, 99 Pac. 507, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 391.
